

Oriental HISTORICAL MANUSCRIPTS,

IN THE TAMIL LANGUAGE:

TRANSLATED;

WITH ANNOTATIONS.

By WILLIAM TAYLOR, Missionary.

IN TWO VOLUMES.

VOL. II.

MADRAS.

—
1835.

ADDITIONAL SUBSCRIBERS.

Sir. J. P. GRANT, Knight, One of the Judges of the Supreme Court at Calcutta

Colonel MORRISON, C. B. Member of the Legislative Council at Calcutta

J. SULLIVAN, Esq. Provisional Member of Council, and Senior Member of the Revenue Board at Madras

J. P. GRANT, Esq. Calcutta

G. J. WATERS, Esq. Judge of the Provincial Court of the Northern Division, Madras

J. D. GLEIG, Esq. Principal Collector of Cuddapah

W. HARRINGTON, Esq. Acting Judge of the Provincial Court of the Northern Division. (Two copies)

H. M. BLAIR, Esq. Collector of Trichinopoly

Colonel FANE, H. M. 54th Regiment

Lieutenant-Colonel MARRETT, 46th Regiment, N. I.

Major E. G. TAYLOR, H. M. 13th Light Dragoons, Bangalore

Captain A. DE BUTTS, Superintending Engineer, Southern Division

J. MORTON, Esq. Surgeon, 47th Regiment, N. I.

Rev. HENRY DEANE, A. M. Chaplain at Trichinopoly

J. D. BOURDILLON, Esq. Head Assistant to the Collector of Trichinopoly

F. MOLE, Esq. Register, Zillah Court at Salem

S. N. WARD, Esq. Assistant Collector, Trichinopoly

Captain ROBERTSON, 8th Light Cavalry, Bangalore

Captain T. HUNTER, Mysore Commissioner

Captain BIGBIE, Artillery

Captain LEY, Commissariat Department

Captain FRANKLYN, Deputy Assistant Quarter-Master-General

Captain GREEN, Engineers

Captain FULLARTON, 17th Regiment, N. I.

Captain WHISTLER, 19th Regiment, N. I.

Lieutenant BRICE, Horse Artillery

Lieutenant GARNIER, Commissariat Department

Lieutenant H. BLOGG, 7th Regiment Light Cavalry
 Lieutenant A. M. MOLYNEUX, 46th Regiment, N. I.
 Messrs. HALL and BAINBRIDGE, Madras
 Rev. J. HANDS, Missionary, L. M. S. Bellary
 T. ROSS, Esq. Editor Madras Times
 G. VANSOMEREN, Esq. Madras. (Additional copy)
 Mr. DANIEL BURBY, Madura
 Mr. JOHN LEE, Chemist, Madras
 Mr. J. GANTZ, Senior Artist and Draftsman, Madras

NATIVE GENTLEMEN.

T. RAMASAWMY MOODELLIAR, Janeapacura Curtar, Mysore
 S. SAWMY MOODELLIAR, at Mysore
 SOOBRAYA CHETTY, Bangalore
 M. VENCATA-ROYA PILLAY, Madras

N. B.—The following names of Native Gentlemen, which were erroneously printed in the first volume, are here correctly given.

R. VENCAT ROW, Assistant to the Mysore Commissioner
 CHENNEERCOOPUM SUNDRUPPA VENCATACHELLA MOODELLIAR, Clerk to the Mysore Commissioner
 AMBARCAUNA LUTCHMUN ROW, Deputy Accountant
 KEERTEE VENCATACHELLA NAIDOO, Clerk to the Mysore Commissioner
 S. ANNENTA RAMIAH, Bramin, Canarese Translator to the Commissioner
 C. BHOOJUNGA ROW, Moonshee Ditto
 S. BALAKISTNAMA NAIDOO, Clerk to Ditto
 POONAPAIKUM COOMARASAWMY MOODELLIAR, Clerk, Police Department, Bangalore
 T. BALASOONDARA MOODELLIAR, Head Conocopyllay, Commissariat Department, Bangalore

•• No other errors in the former List of Subscribers have been communicated to the Editor.

THE issue of this second volume has been unavoidably delayed beyond the period originally announced, within which the completion of the work was expected by the Editor; but it is hoped that the delay, besides being of no great consequence in itself, will be the more readily pardoned on account of the increased quantity of original information which it has been the means of introducing; to the setting aside of matter not so entirely novel, and likely, by consequence, to have been less interesting. In connexion with this remark, and adverting to p. xvi. of the Preface in the first volume, the Editor has great pleasure in acknowledging the favor done to him by giving him free access to the Mackenzie MSS. in the College of Fort St. George, under charge of the Auxiliary to the Royal Asiatic Society. This access he immediately owes to two gentlemen, high in the civil service, and both connected with the College. The obligation conceded will be found to be acknowledged in another part of this volume, but it demands an express and more conspicuous mention here.

The Editor is also under much obligation to another accomplished orientalist, in the judicial branch of the civil service, for bringing to his notice, and lending to him, Professor Wilson's Descriptive Catalogue of the Mackenzie MSS. at a most suitable time, and when he was not aware of its existence; so that, owing to the retired and differing nature of his previous habits and studies, he had commenced in a new channel of research, without being fully aware how much had been before done in the way of facilitating progress. It will be perceived that the Editor owes a large tribute of thanks to Professor Wilson; and though he has occasionally thought it needful to question a few of that profound Sanscrit scholar's conclusions, or at least to hesitate in yielding full consent, yet this has always been under a full feeling of his own personal inferiority, and in entire deference, mingled with high respect. One position relating to the remote origin of the Pandion kingdom, being that to which the most decided objection was felt, as opposed to several authorities, having been traced to its source, was found to have no warrant or existence in the Manuscript on which its authority was made to rest; and there must, consequently, have been a mistake in the information on which Mr. Wilson necessarily depended, from his admitted want of acquaintance with the Tamil language. This circumstance, however important in its relation to the immediate subject of this work, is a trifle when viewed in connexion with the whole of the Professor's labors, as exhibited in his Descriptive Catalogue. Among the Mackenzie MSS. at the College, no documents bearing on the Pandiya-desam have been found at all worthy of comparison with the three leading ones in this work; that is, to the best of the Editor's judgment on this point. The most valuable of them is the Telugu Manuscript, translated, towards the close of this volume; owing to the fulness of its details; though not ascending beyond a comparatively very modern date. There is also another MS., that is the Pandiya-rajakal, the contents of which are like a very brief abstract of those in our three leading MSS. already referred to, but having a few additional details on the obscure period between the decline of the ancient Pandion dynasty, and commencement of the modern Carnataca line of princes. It would therefore have been gladly introduced into the first volume of this work, as its proper place, had it been known to exist, and to be available. The want of it however is no important deficiency; for its contents, on that one point, have been very nearly come at, by inference and approximation, from other sources, in this second volume. As to other ancient kingdoms, there is a great mass of comparatively unexplored information contained in the College Manuscripts—some of them, unhappily, in rapid progress towards illegibility, or decay—the full development of which would require patience, assiduity, and time, from the person on whom the task might devolve. Owing to the restricted measure of personal investigation as yet made, by the writer of these observations, any further remarks on the same point would be improper or premature.

The work of translation, thus far laid before the public, was materially induced, or accelerated, by a paper of Desiderata and Enquiries connected with the Presidency of Madras, put forth by the Royal Asiatic Society. Under the head of History, enquiries are made after details of the overthrow of the Jains by the Bramins—a correct history of the race of princes south of the Coleroon, with particular reference to the “able civil policy and splendid religious establishments of Trimul-Naig”—the origin of the southern Poligars—invasion of the south-eastern Peninsula by the Mahomedans and Mahrattas—the recovery of MSS. from natives, with translations relating to the ancient government of the Pandiyan, Chola, and Chera, dynasties—genealogies of dynasties and considerable families—tales and popular stories, sometimes containing correct information of remarkable characters and events—lastly, Mahatmyams and Stalla-Puranas. So soon as the reader has made himself generally acquainted with the contents of these two volumes, he will not fail, it is believed, to perceive, that these desiderata are, to a considerable extent, supplied by this work alone; while as further regards the southern Poligars, the Mahrattas, genealogies of families, tales, legendary Mahatmyams and Stalla-Puranas, there is yet behind, in the Mackenzie collection at Fort St. George, made ready to hand, a copious and almost exhaustless store, enough to give five years of entire and incessant occupation to any individual, who might possess the qualifications, and the will, to take upon himself the arduous responsibility of developement in detail.

The Translator and Editor of these Historical Manuscripts has now come before the public in a mode, and to an extent, which he at one period in no degree contemplated. Except under peculiar circumstances, he would have shrunk back from the task; and, except under such circumstances, he could not have had time or leisure for its performance. The whole is something like the digression, or relaxation, of a year from the higher calls of duty; but though it be such, he yet retains a strong impression of its indirect bearing on higher matters; without which conviction, he could neither have entered on it, nor have been cheered forward in progress under difficulties and impediments. He is sensible that the work is not perfect; and for defects perceived, or discovered too late to be remedied, which may be very obvious to others, he requests the exercise of consideration and candour, with only so much of approbation, for the guiding motive of the whole, as would content his moderate, and he trusts modest, expectations. To diffuse original information, and that too being of a character calculated to exert an important, though indirect, bearing on the improvement and religious benefit of the natives of the Peninsula, is the motive in question. In order to obviate any possibility of mistake, it may be expedient briefly to state, that the patronage kindly afforded to the undertaking, though considerable and very obliging, has simply sufficed to cover most probably the charges of the work, after deducting gratuitous copies, expenses of transmission, and loss by the unfaithfulness of one agent employed at Bangalore, though greatly obliged by some friends at other distant places. From the amount already disbursed in advance, or yet remaining to be paid, the collection of the proceeds from the work will leave, if any, a very insignificant surplus; which, whatever it may be, has in purpose been devoted to a public charitable object; but which surplus would not be worth the mention, considered as a compensation for time and labor employed, were the motives of the publication sordid; or were the Editor pressed by those personal or family necessities, that sometimes urge authors or editors, when higher inducements are wanting. At the same time, since he could not have escaped a heavy pecuniary mulct, as the penalty of his temerity for undertaking such a work without guarantee or support from any public body, he feels that he is in no common degree bound to acknowledge the liberal private patronage extended by those, who could expect no adequate return, and must have been influenced by a desire to promote the interests of general literature, and to prevent an individual, desiring to add to it some portion of original information, from sinking under the pressure of public discouragement. To these gentlemen a tribute of thanks is rendered, as cordially as it is unquestionably due. They will honor the writer by considering it acceptable.

Coleman's Garden, Madras, October, 1835.

VOLUME THE SECOND.

CARNATAKA DYNASTY.

CONNECTIVE SURVEY.

MIRTANJEYA MANUSCRIPTS.

SELECTED EXTRACTS AND TRANSLATIONS FROM THE MACKENZIE MANUSCRIPTS.

APPENDIX: containing,—

AN INQUIRY CONCERNING THE EARLIEST LOCATION OF MANKIND
AFTER THE DELUGE.

DESCRIPTION OF KAILASA AND VAICONTHA.

PROVERBS OF KING ATHIVIRA-RAMEN.

GEOGRAPHICAL TRANSLATIONS.

SCHEDULE OF SELECT MACKENZIE MANUSCRIPTS.

EXTRACT FROM THE CENTUM OF VERSES OF MANAVALA-NARRAYANEN, ON POLITICAL ORDER AND ECONOMY.

NARRATIVE OF THE KINGS OF CEYLON, AND CHRONICLE OF THE SETHUPATHIS OF RAMNAD.

HISTORY OF THE CARNATAKA GOVERNORS WHO RULED OVER THE PANDIYA MANDALAM.

SECTION 1.—Legendary circumstances relating to the parentage, birth, and early life, of Visvanatha-Naicker.

VIZIANAGARAM-PENU-KONDAI-PATNAM was, for many years, the capital of the Rayer, whose government extended over the fifty-six kingdoms. In his reign, he had forty thousand cavalry, four thousand elephants, and ten thousand camels. He had a principal officer, or general, named Nagama-Naicker, who had charge of them; who also had, of his own, six thousand cavalry, and twenty thousand infantry. For the support and maintenance of this retinue, the peishcush from the several tributaries, from Arcet down to Travancore, was transferred to Nagama-Naicker; which tribute he regularly collected from them.

While matters were thus, Nagama-Naicker was long childless. Desirous of an heir to succeed him after his death, he at length thought of going on a pilgrimage to Casi; and having proceeded thither accordingly, with considerable wealth, he made liberal donations, and performed every act of charity: in addition to which, he and his wife bathed daily and regularly in the river Ganga; abstained from their customary food, and took only three handfuls of boiled rice, without salt; and were day and night worshipping in the sanctuary of Visvanatha-Svami, in a state of strict penitence and devotion.

After the lapse of forty days, thus passed in the presence of the Svami, the god appeared at night in a dream, and said, "You are thus worshipping me. In consequence, to-morrow you shall have a sight of me in the river Ganga; after which you may return to your country, and you shall have a child." Obeying this order,

பாண்டியமண்டலத்தில்காளுடகத்துறையாள ராசசிம்ம ஆண்டபேர்களுடைய செ யதிகள் என்னவென்றாலுமபததாறுதேசத்தககுமராசாவாகியராயரவர்களவசையந கரமபெனுகொண்டைபட்டணத்திலிருந துராசசியபரிபாலினமபண்ணி கொண்டிரு ககயில அவர்களிடத்தில நாகம நாயக கரவர்களதோசெகாளு அதிகாரமாய இருந தார் தோசெகானதிகாரமாவ துராயருடையசொ நத்ததபெலா நாரபதினாயிாமசூதிரையும நாலாயிம்யாணையும்தினாயிம் ஓட்டகையும நாகம நாயககர் விசாரணைவிசாரணைகுள ளெய்ருககுமயி துவலலாமலநாகமனாககர்சொ நத்ததிலஆரூயிரவகுதினா இருபதிநாயி ரம்சனம்வசசுகொண்டிருநதார்இதுககு ஆர்க்காடபிசசீர்மைமுதலநாஞ்சி நாடுவரைக கும்அநதநத்ததேசத்தததோபபாபணங்கௌலலாந தோசெகான சிககு நாகமநாய ககருக்கு அடமானமாயபணஞ்செணறுவருகிற துஅபபடியிருக்கயிலநாகமநாயககருக் குவெகுளுள ரயப்பிள்ளையளிலலாமலஅனெகநதிரவியமெயித துக்கொண்டு காசிகுப போயததான தமமங்களபண்ணி நாகமநாயககரும் அவர் பெண்சாதிபுந தினசரிகெவ கையில ததானம்பண்ணி உபபிலலாமலப பசசரி சிசசாதம்முணுகவள ஞ்சாபபிட்டுப போட்டுகாசிவிசுவனாதசுவாமிசனனதிலலராத்திரியும்பக லும்பிராநததிசசுககொண்டு தபசிருநதார்கள் அபபடிஇநதபபிறகாரம் நாரபதுளுள வரைககுஞ்சனனதிலிலிருக கையிலசுவாமிராததிரிசசொநபனத்திலெவந துநம்மைநீங்கள்பிராநததிசசுககொண்டிரு கருநீயனெநாளை உங்களுக்குககெவகையிலத்தெரிசனந தருகுநேரம் உங்களுக் குப பிள்ளை உண்டா குமெனறுஉருககுபபோகசொல்லிடத்தாரமாசசுதுஅநதபபடிககு மறுனாளுதையத்திலக்கெவகையிலவந துததானம்பண்ணுகையிலமுடிங்காலிலக்கலலு பபட்டுதுஇநதததுறையிலக்கலலுததயக்குதெயெனறுமறு துறையிலஸ்தானம்பண்ணி னார்கள்அநதததுறையிலுமநதபபடிதானேகலலுத்தயததுதுஇவகையுங்கலலுத்தயக குதெயெனறுமுணு துறையிலப போயமுருகினார்கள்நத்ததுறையிலுமநதபபடிககெ கலலுத்தயததுதுதுயெனனவெனறுததவிபபாறகிறவறையிலஒருபசசைமரசதலிங்கம் கவகையிலகபபட்டுதுஅதைசசுவாமிசொநபனத்திலசசொனனபடிககுபபிறத்தியட்ச மாளு றொனறுறொண்டு கையிலெயெயிததுக கொண்டு அவர்களுடையஇதாஸ்ததானம் ராயரவர்களிடத்திலவந துசேநதார்கள்சிறு துணைக்குப்பிறகுநாகமநாயக்கருக்குக் கு மாறணபிறந துதுஅநதகருளநதைகருவீசுவனாதையககொ னறுபெரிட்டு அவருக்குசசுவாமிபிறசாநத்தினுலெபிறநதவரானதினுலெ அவருக்குஒருணைக்கொருளுள பபடிப

the next morning they went to bathe in the river ; and then found something, as if a stone, strike against their knees. They said this place is rocky, and immediately removed to another part of the river, where they also met with the like circumstance. They then removed to another part of the river, and experienced just the same. Surprised at this unusual occurrence, they reflected, what can this be? and searching the bed of the river with the hand, took up an emerald, in the form of a Lingam. Recollecting the dream, they said, the god has thus shewn himself to us as he promised; and, taking it up in their hands, they carried it back with them to the Rayer, and to their former place of abode.

Nagama-Naicker was in due time blessed with a son, to whom he gave the name of Visvanatha-Naicker, after the name of the Svami; and, as he was considered to be a gift immediately from God, nothing was omitted by the father to improve, by daily exercise, the education of his son, and to render him able and intelligent. He was also taught fencing, and the use of all weapons. When he attained his sixteenth year, he was admired for the beauty of his person, and his natural as well as acquired knowledge, and was in every respect accomplished.

Shortly after, the Nava-rattiri festival occurred. In this capital was the temple of a durga (or goddess), to which a festival was annually dedicated; and it terminated with the offering of a wild buffalo to the goddess on the tenth day. This buffalo was generally hunted for in the jungle, by the prince of the kingdom, and usually taken in a net. On the eighth day of that year, the Rayer, as usual, went with his hunting party into the woods, which abounded with wild buffalos; and having chased them, a buffalo was reported to be caught in the snare laid for it by the hunters. This buffalo was remarkable for the strength and length of its horns, which bended backwards and reached to its tail; consequently the Rayer and his principal officers were much concerned at the improbability of sacrificing it with one blow, as would be needful: since a failure in this point would be a sure indication of some catastrophe, unfavorable to the future prosperity of the kingdom, according to a current tradition long since established. Great doubts were entertained whether it would be, by any means, possible, at one blow, to sever the head of this animal from the body; for it was thought by the Rayer and his counsellors, that even repeated

புச்சிலம்பமற்ற ஆயுதப்பரிசையைளெல்லாம் சாதகம்பண்ணி வெகுவீதானனாகவுமருட
வானாகவுமிருந்தார்வயசும்பதினாரசுகுதுபபடிநூக்கையிலநவராததிரிமகா நவமிப
ணடிகைவநதுது அநதராயர்சமஸ்ததானமாதியிலநதயிடததிலததுறகிப்பிறதிட்டமா
யஅநத சசமததானமடனடான அண்ணுமுதலவருஷாவருஷம் நவராததிரி முன்னுகு
அநதபபட்டமாருகிறராயர்காடடிவெவெடைசுருப்பொயவலையசுட்டிக்காட்டுரு
மைக்கிடாவைப்பிடித்தவநது அநதததுறகியமமனாகுப்பெலிகொடுத்ததுதுறகியபடி
மனைநிறுத்தநவராததிரிபபததுனாநும் பூசைபண்ணுகிறதுஅநதவருஷம்ராயர் வெட
டைக்குப்பொயக்காட்டெருமைக்கிடாவையுமீட்டிததுக கொண்டு வந்ததில அநதரு
மைக்கிடாவுக்குகொம்புபெருசாயப்பினெனவநதுவாலவகைகுமிருநதுது அபப
டியாக கொற்றமாடுபிடித்தவநததிலஅநதததுறக்கிகுப்பெலிக்கொடுக்கிறபொதுஅந
தமாடு ஒவ்வெட்டிலெண்ணி துண்டமாகவினாரு வெணும் அபபடிவீழாதெ பொரு
அநத சசமஸ்தானததுக்குகறைவருமென்பதாய ஆதிமுதல சசங்கலடபமாகப்பட்ட
து அபபடியிருப்பதிலுநதக காட்டெருமைக்கிடாவையுங் கொம்பையுமீப்பாதது இது
கத்தி வெட்டுக்கு ஒருவெட்டிலுநதெளத்தனைவெட்டுவெட்டினாலும்வினாருதெ இதை
வெட்டமாட்டார்கொன்னுராயருமிருக்கிறகாரியக் காற்றும்பாததுொம்பவிதனபப
ட்டுக்கொண்டு ஒருகாலத்திலெயுமிப்படிக்கிடாவநததிலலை இதை ஒரு வெட்டாக வெட
டாதவரையிலநமமுடைய சமஸ்தானததுக்குஆட செபமலலாவாவென்று ராயருமறு
முண்டாகியக்காரியக்காற்றும் இதுவெஆலோசினையாக இதுகளுன்னசெயவொமென
து இருக்கையிலநதததுறகியமமனவிசுவனாதனாயக்கர்சொற்பனத்திலவநது அநதக்கி
டாவைநீவெட்டுகிறோமென்கிறதாயராயரிடயவநதுபெசிராயர்பொக்கிஷத்தில இருக்கி
றத்தியளிளனகருசசமமதியானகத்திகொடுக்கசொல்லிக்கொ தற்குத்தாரம்பண்ணு
வர்களு நதககத்திகத்தி யருக்கெல்லாம் மெலாகவநது இருக்கும்அநதக்கத்தி குடடை
யாக கொண்டுமுழுவெடுக்கத்திலவட்டுவிலக்கடை அகலத்தில இருக்கும்அநதக்கத்தியை
க்கொண்டு வெட்டினாலொண்டு துண்டமாக அததுவினும்அதுமுதலக்கொண்டு உனக்கு
ொம்பப்பிறபலமாகவுமீப்பொகமும்கறனாசசியாதிபதியாகவுமீப்பட்டாபிஷெகரு
மீவருமெனதுஅம்மனைத்தரவுபண்ணி அநதபபடிக்குத்தா மெனதுனாருதையத்தில
விசுவனாதனாயக்காரியரிடத்திலவநதுநீங்குகிலைசபபடவெண்டாம் ஒருவெட்டிலெொ
ண்டு துண்டமாக வெட்டிப்பொடுகுறெனெனதுசொன்னதிலராயரும் அவரிடத்திலிரு
கிறகாரியஸ்தா ரூமீநீசிறுபிள்ளைநீயாவதுவெட்டுகுறநாவது எப்படியாக கொற்றமனு

blows could not effect it; and they remained in suspense whether or not some unpropitious event did not threaten the kingdom.

Such was the state of things, when, in the night of the ninth day of the festival, Visvanatha-Naicker was informed by the goddess, in a dream, of the concern of the Rayer and his principal officers; and was advised to go to the Rayer, and offer to sever the buffalo's head from its shoulders with one blow, provided he might have a suitable sword, to be selected from the number of swords kept in a chest in the king's armory; adding, that as the Rayer would immediately let him have his choice of them, he would, at the top, find a sword, the blade of which would be two cubits long and eight inches broad, with which he would be enabled with one blow to cut the horns through, and sever the head of the animal from its body; as also, that this action would highly please the Rayer, and from thenceforth prove conducive to the rapid increase of his own prosperity; and that he would one day hold the sceptre in his hands, and reign exclusively throughout the Rayer's dominions. Visvanatha-Naicker went early the next morning to the Rayer's presence, and said, "If you will give me leave, I will undertake to cut off the buffalo's head at one blow. The Rayer seeing him to be a mere youth, said, "You are but a boy: how can you expect to accomplish such a thing?" But Visvanatha-Naicker replied, very mildly, "If I do not succeed, you are at liberty immediately to offer me as a sacrifice to appease the goddess, and avert evil." On which the Rayer and his ministers said, "Well, we shall see." He then added, "If you agree to my proposal, I ask a suitable sword from your armory." They replied, "Take one." He went immediately to the armory, and found a sword which corresponded with the description given him by the goddess, lying on the top of the rest; this sword he took in his hand, and returning to the Rayer, requested the buffalo to be brought, and tied, according to custom. The usual ceremonies having been gone through, agreeably to his desire; he with that sword severed the head of the animal from its body, so that at one blow it fell from the neck on the ground. The Rayer was exceedingly pleased with Visvanatha-Naicker; embraced him; and presenting him with all the valuable jewels and apparel which he had on his own person, said to him, "Since you are born by an especial favor from God, you have done this work, which no one else could accomplish: you are worthy

VOL. II.

ஷர்கையினாலெவெட்டப்படாதே இது எனனமோ காரணமாக யிறதக்கிடாவநதுஇ
ருக்கு தெனறு உனனாலே ஆகப்போகுதோ வெனறு சொனனார்களப்பொ துவிசுவனா
னாயக்கர் சொனனது இதை நான் ஒருவெட்டிலே ரொண்டு துண்டமாக வெட்டமாட்டா
தே போனாலுதற்குபதில துறக்கிக் கிளனனெவெட்டிப்பெலிகொடுத்ததுபொடுங்கோ
வெனறு தெனபாகச சொனனா ஆனாலுதைப்பாறப்போ மெனறு சொனனார்களப
போ துனனக்குச்சம்மதியானகத்திபொககிஷத்தில கொடுக்க வேணுமெனறு கேட்டா
ர் அநதப்படிக்கு உனக்குச்சம்மதியானகத்தி பெயித்துக்கோ வெனறு பொககு சத துக
ருஉத்தாரம்பண்ணினார்கள நீதப்படிக்குபொககிஷத்திலப்போயப்பாறதிறவனாயில
அம்மனசொன்ன அடையாளப்படிக்கு அநதக்கத்திமேலாகவநதிருநதுது அதைஎறி
துக் கொண்டு வநது அநதக்காட்டுருமைக்கிடாவை துறக்கைசனனையிலக் கொண்டு
வநது கட்டச சொல்லி துறகைக்கு மாமுலப்படிக்கு பூசைமறற தும்பண்ணச் சொல்லிவிச
வனா தனாயக்கர் துறகையை பிராறத்திச சுக கொண்டு அநதக்கத்தியினாலெவெட்டு கிற
போது கொம்புரொண்டிம் அத்துதருது து ரொண்டு துண்டமாக விளுநதுது ராயர்வெகுச
நதோசப்படடுவிசுவனா தனாயக்கரை ஆலிங்கனம்பண்ணிக் கொண்டு தாமப்பொதுதரி
திருநதவத்தி பூசனாதுபள இவருக்குத்தரிததுநீர் சுவாமியரப பிறசாதத்திலப பிறநதவ
ர்களானதினாலெதிறதவேலை ஒருவரா லுஞ்செய்யக்கூடாதகாரியஞ்செய்தீரே நீர்நம்மை
ப்போலே நீர் சிவகாசனத்திலிருநது சீமையாளுகிறதற்கு யோக்கியவானானதினாலே உ
மக்குவெருராச்சியங்கொடுத்த நம்மைப்போலே சிவகாசனத்திலிருக்கத தக்கதாபப
ண்ணிலக்கிறோ மெனறு ரொம்ப சநதுட்டியாகக்கிட்டவேவைதுக கொண்டு ரொம்ப
றியமாக யிருநதாரபபடி யிருக்கையிலவடக்கே சிறுதுதேசத்தாராசாக்கள ஒரு சேகர
மாயக்கூடிக் கொண்டு ராயருக்கு மாமுலாகக்கோடுகிறதோப்பாப்பணங் கொடாமல
நதநதக் கோட்டையிலிருநது தாணையமாயராயருடமனுசையும் அடிததுவாட்டிலிட
டார்கள் அதுவயணமாராயருக்குவநது இறதவிசுவனா தனாயக்கரை அவர்களபேரி லேதெ
ண்டெடுததுப்போ உச்சொல்ல அனுப்பிவிச்சார்களவர் போயநதராசாக்களையுஞ்செயி
ததுராச்சியமெல்லாங்கட்டி அநதராசாக்களையும் பிடித்துக்கொண்டு அவர்களுடைய ஆ
ணகுதிரை பொககிஷபண்டா ருசகலதையும் ராயர் சமடசபத திலக் கொண்டு வநது
வைத்தாரள அப்போது ராயர் ரொம்பசநதோஷிப்பட்டு அநதராசாக்களுக்குள்ளிலிருநது
கொல்லாம்பிவருக்குக் கொடுத்தாராயர்வர்களுக்குண்டானவிருதுகளுஞ்சிறுது கொடு
தது அப்படியிருக்கையிலமதுனாயிலச்சந்திராசேகர்பாண்டியனுநதருசாபூரிலலீசே

to rule on a throne, even as we do ; wherefore we shall keep you near ourselves, and in due time see that you are exalted to the highest dignity." In saying thus, the Rayer otherwise manifested the highest satisfaction and attachment.

SECTION 2.—Visvanatha reduces some rebellious tributaries—the king of Tanjore expels the Pandion king—the Rayer sends Nagama-Naick to reinstate the latter—but the Naick usurps the kingdom—his son, Visvanatha, is sent to correct him—Visvanatha takes his father prisoner, and reinstates the Pandion—the Rayer pardons Nagama's rebellion—and, in default of an heir to the Pandion, gives the kingdom of Madura to Visvanatha-Naick.

Several of the inferior princes in the north, soon after this occurrence, disputed their subjection as tributaries to the Rayer ; and presumed to drive out his troops from the several fortresses. On this account Visvanatha-Naicker was deputed to march against the rebels, with a suitable force, in order to punish them. He accordingly proceeded, and having successfully warred against them, took them prisoners; appointed proper persons for the management of the conquered countries ; and returned triumphantly to the Rayer, with the captives, elephants camels, horses, and all the treasure belonging to them. The Rayer was so well pleased with the bravery and success of Visvanatha-Naicker, that he forthwith honored him with distinguished tokens of approbation and favor; in bestowing on him all the banners or trophies which belonged to the refractory tributaries; and continued him about his own person.

At this time the king of Tanjore was Vira-Segara-Soren, and the king of Madura was Chandra-Segara-Pandion. The former being ambitious of extending his authority, invaded the dominions of Chandra-Segara-Pandion ; against whom he marched with a formidable force, and conquered him. The king of Madura, together with his son, effected his escape, and fled to the Rayer for protection ; to whom he preferred his complaint, saying, "Vira-Segara-Soren has forcibly taken possession of our kingdom."

The Rayer thereupon called Nagama-Naicker, the father of Visvanatha, and said to him, "The southern country is under your authority: is it not? therefore, employing the means which you have at command, assemble an army, and go, chastise Vira-

சர்சோளனுமிருந தூர்ச்சிய மாணடுகொணடுயிருக்கையில் தஞ்சாவூர்வீர சேகர்சோள
 னவந துமதுரைச் சநதிர சேகர் பாண்டியனைச் செய்த தூர்ச்சியத்தைக் கட்டிக் கொண
 டார் அப்போது சநதிர சேகர் பாண்டியனும் அவனுடைய மகனும் எடுபட்டு ராயரிடத் தி
 லப்போய பிராதிபணணி எவக ளீமையைவீர சேகர்சோளனவந் து கட்டிக் கொணடா
 ரொன்று சொன னார்ப்போ துவிசுவனாதனாயக்கருடைய தகப்பனார் நாகமனாயக்கரைவர
 னை ததுதெடசனதேச மெல்லாம் உம்முடதோசோகா னுக்கு அடமான மாயிருக்குந்
 து அல்லவா இப்போது அநதத தேசம் உம்முட இலாகாவானதினாலே நீரும்முடையத
 ணடு சேகர்ம்பணணிக் கொணடு போயவீர சேகர்சோள னுக்குத் தக்க துசிச்சைபணணி
 ச்சநதிர சேகர் பாண்டியனுக்குப் பட்டங்கட்டிவரச் சொல்லிராயர் உததாரம்பணணி அ
 நதப்படிக்குவந துவீர சேகர்சோள னுக்குத் தக்க துசிச்சைபணணிப் பாண்டியனுக்கு
 பட்டங் கடடாமல தநாஞ்சீமையைக் கடடிகொண்டிருநதார் நிரும்புஞ் சநதிர சேகர்
 பாண்டியனாராயரிடத் துக்குப்போயச் சீமையைதான தானே கடடிக் கொணடா ரோன
 னு பிராதிபணணி னுனாராயர் தாக்கீதி நிருபம் உடனே எழுதிப்பாண்டியனுக்குச் சீமை வி
 ட்டி விடச் சொல்லி எழுதியனுப்பிவிச்சார்கள நத நிருபத்தை நிராகரித்து தள்ளிவிச்சுப்
 போட்டு தாமாராயர் சமஷிததானத திலிருந துவருகிற போது தம்மிடஇடத்தில் சேவுக
 மாக கூட வநதகம்பளததாரில தமக்கு நம்பிக்கையானகு நிகாறரைசீமையில் அங்குவ
 குதாணையமாகயிருக்கச் சொல்லி நேமுடிம்பணணி அநத நதசீமையிற்சோ சோததிய
 ங்களவறாமலகாத துக்கொள்ளச் சொல்லியும் காவலுக்கு மெழுதிருமிது துகி னுது கிருமய
 கனும் விட்டுருமிது துசீமையைப் பநதுமுஷத துப்புப்பணணிவிச்சுக் கொண்டிருநதார்க
 ளபாண்டியன நிரும்பாராயரிடத் துக்குவந து தமமையும்முத்திரைமனுசருமநிருபமும
 னுப்பிவிச்சதில தையும்நிராகரிச்சுப் போட்டுசீமைக் கெல்லாம தமமிடமனுசரைதாண
 யம் நேமிச்சுக்கொண்டுசீமைஒட்டுக்குத் தம்மிடவசம்பணணிவிசசுக்கொண்டிருக்கிறா
 னவந துசொன்னதில ராயர்வர்கள நிரும்பவுமகோபமாகி சிறுக்கு வநது சகலமான
 பேரையும்வரவீன துவயத துக் கொண்டு அவர்களைபாத துசொன்ன தென்ன வென்ற
 லபாண்டியனுக்குப் பட்டங்கட்டிவரச் சொல்லி அனுப்பிவிச்சதிலயிப் படிதாமக்கட்டிக்
 கொணடார் இநதச்சமஸ்ததானத திலயித்தனைபேர் துரைமக்களகாரியக்காறரிருக்கிறிய
 ளேறா க்மனாயக்கர் தலையைக் கொண்டு வருகிறபேராரொன்றுகேட்டதிலச்சபையெல்லா
 வகேட்டுக் கொண்டு இருநதார்கள அப்போது விசுவனாதனாயக்கர் எழுநதிரிந துராயரிட
 த்திலவந துஎனக்கு உததாரமானுலநானபோய்க் கொணடுவருகி நேனென்று சொனார்

Segara-Soren, and reinstate Chandra-Segara-Pandion on the throne." According to this order, he came to Madura, and in a suitable manner punished Vira-Segara-Soren; but then, instead of restoring the kingdom to Chandra-Segara-Pandion, he usurped it as his own. On this usurpation occurring, Chandra-Segara again went to the Rayer, and complained; saying, "He has taken the kingdom for himself." The Rayer instantly despatched an imperial mandate, commanding Nagama-Nalcker to restore the kingdom to the Pandion; to whom he intrusted the order, and dismissed him. But the usurper, treating the mandate with contempt, rejected it; and selecting from amongst those who came with him, and had served him while he was in subjection to the Rayer, the most clever marksmen, and most brave, he gave them certain districts in charge, writing out grants of tenure; and these persons he ordered to have strict charge, each over his own district, and to see that no robbers plundered it, and that no invader was suffered to advance with impunity. The Pandion again returned to the Rayer, and said to him, "Your general has treated me, and your official messengers who accompanied me, and your mandate also, with contempt; and, keeping the country for himself, has delivered the whole of it to the defence of his own creatures." On receiving this intelligence, the Rayer was thoroughly incensed; and calling the whole of his counsellors together, thus addressed them, "So he, instead of crowning the Pandion, as he was ordered, has taken possession of the kingdom as if his own.—Now, you are sons of lords and skilful commanders—Speak, which of you will undertake to go and bring me the head of Nagama-Nalcker?" The whole of that assembly (silently) heard this inquiry. Thereupon Visvanatha-Nalcker rose up, and, approaching the Rayer, said, "If you will give me leave, I will go and bring it to you." The Rayer replied, "What, will you go and join your father?" (that is, to strengthen his rebellion). To which Visvanatha replied, "As I eat your food, your service is my duty; and, in comparison with the service of my master, never mind about my father: as you command I shall act, and in no other manner." On receiving permission, according to his request, he assembled an army; and coming to the Madura country, he made a descent on one of the districts, and thence wrote to his father, to the following purport, "That, as his father had transgressed the Rayer's order, he himself was sent to cut off

அப்போது ராயர் சொன்னது உங்கள் தகப்பனாரோடே நீருரு சேகர்மா கக் கூடிக்கொ
ள்ளவர்போரீர் என்று சொன்னார்கள் அதுக்கு விசுவனாதனாயக்கர் உம்முடைய அன்னரு
சாப்பிடுகிறபடியினாலே எசமானகாரியம் பிறதானமலலா து தகப்பன்னன்கிழ அக்கரை
யிலலை உதர்ப்படிநடக்குறவனே அல்லா துவேரிலலையென்று டி. ததாரம் வாங்கிக்கொ
ண்டு தண்ணிடு சேகரி ததுக்கொண்டு மதுரைச்சீமையிலவந துபாணையமிங்கிக்கொண்டு தக
ப்பனருக்கு எழுதி அனுப்பிவிச்சவயன் ம் ராயருடைய ஆக்கினை தப்பிநடதபடியினாலே
தங்களைச் சிர்சாக் கினைசெய்து கொண்டு வர்ச் சொல்லினனை அனுப்பிவிச்சார் களாநப
டியினாலே தாங்களபாண்டியனுக்குப் பட்டங்கடடினனுடனேவ நதாலநானராயரை
ச்சமாதானம் பண்ணி தங்கள் பேரில ஆயாச மிலலாமலச் செய்கிறே நென்னு எழுதினார்
உடனே மிகுந்த கோபத்தினாலே தளரு சேகரி ததுக்கொண்டு மகனபேரிலச் சண்டை
க்குப்பிறபட்டுச்சண்டையானதிலவிசுவனாதனாயக்கர் தகப்பனைச் செய்த துதகப்பனையு
ம் பிடித்தது ஆணையின்மேல அபுதாவின் பேரிலவை ததுச் சுததிப்பாராவு ம் வை ததுக்கொ
ண்டு பாண்டியனுக்குப் பட்டமுங்கடடி ததகப்பனாரா ராயர் சமஸ்சமத துக்கொண்டு
போயவிட்டு உததாவாளுத தலையை ஆக்கினை பண்ணிவிக்கி நே நென்னு சொன்னதில
ராயர் வர்களுஞ்சுநதோசப்பட்டு உன நிமித்தியம் உங்கள் தகப்பனார் செயத குததஞ்சயி
ததோமெனறுவந்திர் வெகுமதியள பண்ணி எப்போதும் டோலே இருந்தார் களப்ப
டியிருக்கையிலமதுரையிலப்பட்டங்கடடிக்கொண்டிருந்த பாண்டியன்விருந துபோய
அவர்மகனுக்குப் பட்டங்கடடியிருந து அவருஞ்சிறு றுளிருந துராசசிய மாணிலுமு
ந துபோனார்பாண்டியன் பட்டத துக்கருவம் முஸ் மிலலாமலப் போயவிட்டு து அதினபி
ராகு அநதததேசத துக்கு யோக்கியனாகவே னுமென்னு ஆலோசனை பண்ணிவிசசு விசுவ
னாதனாயக்கரை வர்வனை தது அநததேசமுமுதும் உங்கள் தகப்பனார் இலாகாவிலே இருந
துதே இப்போது அந்நதப்பட்டத் துக்குப் பாண்டியன்வம் முஸ் மிலலாமலப் போனது
லேநீர் முனகாட டெருமைக்கிடாவை வெட்டி ததுறகைக்குப் பட்டி கொடுத்தது சமஸ்த
தான துக்குத் தோசம்வராமலப் பண்ணிவிசசுவரா னதினாலேயும் வடக்கே அனேகந
தேசத துராசாக்களதோப்பாவுங்கோடாமலராசசியங்களை க்கடடிக்கொண்டு யிருந்தவ
ர்களுயும் நீர்பேரய அநதராசசியங்களை சசுவா தீனப்படித்திவிசசுவநதீரி துவலமலஉ
ம்முடதகப்பனார் நம்முட ஆக்கினை தப்பி அநதததேசததைக்கடடியிருந்தவரை தகப்ப
னென்னுபாராமல எசமானகாரியம் பிறதானமென்னுபாத தது அவரையுங்கொண்டிவந்தீர்
முன்னாலே நாம் நம்மைப் போலே சினகாசனங் கொடுத்த துராசசியமுங் கொடுக்கிறோ

his father's head, and carry it back; but that, if his father would reinstate the Pandion, as he had been commanded, and would then peaceably come over to himself, he would use suitable means of appeasing the Rayer, and remove all existing displeasure against his father." But the father, kindling with rage, hastily assembled his forces, and going forth, encountered Visvanatha; by whom he was conquered and taken prisoner: being placed in a howdah on an elephant, Visvanatha caused him to be well guarded; then, reinstating the Pandion, he returned to the presence of the Rayer, and said, "If you order me so to punish my father, I will now bring you his head." But the Rayer being greatly pleased, said to him, "For your sake, we pardon your father's fault." And, after giving him robes, and other presents, allowed all things to be adjusted; and remained as he was before these circumstances had occurred.

Matters being thus situated, the king of Madura died; and his son, having been crowned, after a short time died also: so that the Pandion race became entirely extinct. In consequence, the Rayer took counsel; and, desiring a meritorious person to rule that kingdom, he sent and called for Visvanatha-Naicker, to whom he said, "All that country was, as you know, under your father's control; and now, as there is no heir to the throne, through defect of posterity to the Pandion; and seeing that you, on a public emergency, killed the wild buffalo; and by offering it to the goddess Durga, prevented the occurrence of public calamity; moreover, as you conquered several northern rajahs, when they revolted and refused to pay tribute, making their countries to become fully our own, by right of conquest; and besides, when your father disobeyed our commands, you considered the right of your sovereign as entitled to precedence over those of your father, and brought him here; further, as you must remember, when we formerly gave you a throne like our own, we promised you also a kingdom; therefore, now be king of the Madura country." Agreeably to this grant, the Rayer had water from Ganges at Casi brought; and, causing him to be anointed,* gave him the title of "Lord of the Pandion throne," and delivered to him the Pandion country, as also all suitable presents; and said, "Be the kingdom yours, and that of your posterity, even as

* By sprinkling or aspersion of water.

மெனதுவாக்குத தவம்பண்ணி யிருந்தோமேயலவா அநதப்படிக்கு இப்போதீர்ம
 துரைப்பாணடிமண்டலத துக்குராசாவாக யிருமெனதுகாசிக் கெங்காசெலவ கொண்டு
 வநதுஅவருக்கபிசேகபண்ணிபாணடியசிறகாசனாதிபதியெனறுபேருங் கொடுத்ததுபா
 ணடியதேசமுங்கொடுத்ததுசசகலவிருதுகளுங் கொடுத்ததுவங்கிஷ்பூரம் பரியமாகசூரி
 யசநதிராளௌளவகைக்கும்பாணடியதேசத துராசாக்களாய இருங் கோவெனறு அனு
 க்கிறகம்பண்ணினுர்களப்போது துறகையம்மனை நமகருவேணுமெனறு ராயருடனே
 கேடடார்ப்போதுராயரிடத்திலிருந்தவர்களசமஸ்ததான தேவதையாகச்சேகுமிக்கப்
 படாதேயெனறுசொன்னதிலறம்பிடத்திலஅவர்கேடடகாரியம் இலையென்கிறதிலலை
 யெனறுஅம்மனையுங்கொடுத்ததுவிசுவனாதநாயக்காரையும்அனுப்பிவிச்சார்கள அவருமது
 னாக்குமீனாட்சிசன்னதியிலச செங்கோலவாங்கி அரியனாதமுதலியாருக்குந தளகறத்த
 பிறதானிக்கவகொடுத்ததுமுனபாணடியனகோடடைக்கோவிலைசகதத்சிசினனக் கோட்
 டையாயிருந்ததையிடிசுகப்போடிராயர்சமஸ்ததானத்திலேதனனுட தகப்பனார்சம்
 பாததிய மெலலாம்அனேகதிர்வியங்களை வர்வளை ததுமதுனாக் கோடடை விலாசமாய
 ரொண்டு சுததுக் கோடடையுங்கடடி கோவிலுகள அக்கிறு கார்வகன குடிகள மறறதெல
 லாம்உணரிபண்ணி மதுநாவைகையிலகாலகணமாயள விஸ்ததாரமாய அனேகங்குடிக
 னையும்துதனக்கிரமங்கமும்உணரி பண்ணி விச்சார்கள அதினபிறபாடு திறசுகனாப்பள
 ளிமலைக்கோடடைமடங்குங்கொஞ்சக்குடிகமுததஞ்சகூரோடே சேர்திருக்கும் வட
 க்கேயிருநதுபுரீரொங்கத துக்குராமேசூர்யாததினாக்கும்வருகிற சனங்களைவீசங்கனாடு
 க்களளரும்பாணியகாறருமயாததினாக்குவந்திருக்கிறபேர்களைஅடிததுக்கொள்ளையிட்
 மிக்கொண்டுபோயிருப்பார்களஇதினாலேதஞ்சாபூர்எல்லையாணபடியினாலேஅநதப்பரி
 முதலதஞ்சாபூராணக்கொடுக்கச்சொலவினனேர்மும்லொஸ்டடாயிருக்கும்இப்படி
 இருக்கையில்விசுவனாதனாயக்கரும்அரியனாதமுதலியாரும்எங்கனாடையவல்லத்துக்கோ
 டடைநீங்களசேகர்மாகவைததுகொளளுங்களநாங்களஅதைத தருகிறோம்அதற்குப்
 பதிலதருச்சுகனாப்பளளி எங்களுகருத்ததாருங்கோ வெனறுகேடடதிலஅநதப்படிகருஇ
 ருபேரும்வஸ்ததுசம்மதிததுக் கோடடை அவர்களவாங்கிக்கொண்டுதிருசுகனாப்பளளி
 பைய இவர்களுக்குக்கொடுத்ததார்களதினபிறபாடுஅனேகதிரவியஞ்சிலவு செயதுதிருசுக
 னாப்பளளியிலொண்டுசுததுக்கோடடையுங்கடடிவிஸ்ததாரமாகஅகிழும்வெடடிப்ப
 டடணமுந்தெறபக்குளங்கமும்உணடாக்கி அரமனையுங்கடடிக்காவேரியிருகரையுங்கா ரிசெடியிருந்ததையெல்லாஞ்செவவைப்படுத்திவாயக்காலவயலமறறதும்உணடாக்கிக் long as the sun and the moon endure." On receiving these favors, Visvanatha solicited to be allowed to take also the image of the goddess Durga; and when the Rayer's attendants objected, saying, "The guardian goddess of the capital must not be given away," the Rayer answered, "To this person there is no denial, whatever request he may make." Accordingly, the goddess Durga was bestowed; and Visvanatha received audience of leave to depart.

SECTION 3.—Visvanatha is installed at Madura—builds a new Fort, and makes other improvements—acquires the Hill-fort of Tritchinopoly by negotiation with the king of Tanjore—builds a new and larger fort with a palace there—rebuilt the temple of Srirangham—and makes many other improvements—sends his general, Ariya-Nathar, to regulate the affairs of the Tinnevelly country.

Visvanatha-Naicker having come to Madura, received the sceptre in the presence of the goddess Minatchi; and then gave the office of commander of the forces to Ariya-natha-Muthaliar. He next proceeded to throw down the small Pandion fort which surrounded the temple; and sending for the great riches which his father had gathered together in the Rayer's service, by means of these he built an extensive double-walled fort: besides which, he constructed temples, and agraras, (or Bramin-streets,) in other needful places; and increased the population of the country. He further caused extensive water-courses to be cut, communicating with the river Vaigai; thus fertilizing extensive districts; wherein he built several new villages, and peopled them with inhabitants. Besides which, a few of his subjects extended their residence a little way into the Tanjore dominions, even as far as to the hill-fort of Tritchinopoly. At this period, it was customary for the robbers of the Visanga country, and for the head men of districts, to assault and plunder the pilgrims who came from the north in order to visit Srirangham and Ramiseram. As these things occurred within the Tanjore boundary, there was a constant dispute going on; in consequence of demands of Visvanatha on the Tanjorean for the recovery of the plundered property. Induced by such circumstances, Visvanatha-Naicker, and Ariya-natha-Muthaliar, proposed to the king of Tanjore to give up to him the fort

குடிநீர் துவெலலாம் உணரிபண்ணி அதனபிற்பாடு உபையகரேவரித தீரமுழுது கிராம
 ங்களகடடி அக்கிரகாரங்கள் கோவிலுக்களகடடிவைத துவீச்சுநாட்டுக் களள னாயும்பர்
 னாயகாராயும் அடக்கிச்சீமையும் பிறபலப்படுத திவிச்சீ சோங்கமுதலாகிய கே.வி.லுக்கள
 மண்டப பிறகாரங்களகட டிவைத துதிருநெல்வெலிச்சீமைக்கு அரியனாதமுதலியாராயு
 குதி றுத் தளங்கனாயு கூடடி அனுப்பிவிச்சீச்சீமைபந துவஸ்த துப்பண்ணைச் சொலவி
 அனுப்பிவிச்சீதிலவடத்திலபாண்டியனுக்குள்ளே தெட்சணநதிருநெல்வெலிச்சீமையி
 லஅருசுபேர் ராசாக்கள அருசுபாளையப்பட்டாக இருநத்திலப்பாண்டியனுக்குக் கொடு
 த தகாணி க்கையும் இவர்களுக்குக் கொடாமல அருசு ராசாக்கமும் ஒருசேகர்மாகள துப்
 பாளையந் செயது அரியனாத முதலியாருடனே சண்டைபண்ணி அரியனாதமுதலியாரு
 க்குநிருபாகமில்லாமலவிசுவனாதையக்கருக்குளமுதி அனுப்பிவிச்சார் அவர்வெரு தணு
 டனேவந துயிங்கி ஆறுமாசம்வரைக்கும் சண்டைபண்ணி, னதில அருசுபேர் ராசாக்களை
 ச்செயிக்கக் கூடாமல உபையதள ததிலும் வெருசனம்வரைக்கும் இறந துபோயபாளைய
 ததிலேயுருசீமையிலேயுருசெத துப்போன வர்களுடையசமுசாரங்கமுடையகூக்கரலு
 மழுகைச்சத தமும்விசுவனாதையக்கர்க்கேட்டுநா மொருததர் ராச்சியமாணநிபோகபாக்
 கியங்கள துபலிக்கிற நிமித்தியம்வெருசனங்களிறந துபோயவெருசமுசாரமெல்லாங்கி
 வெசப்படிக் கொண்டிருக்கிறார்களென்று யோசனைபண்ணி எதிரிகள் அருசுபேர்கழு
 க்குநங்கிதம் பெழுதி தாருபதியை அனுப்பி விச்சுநீங்கள் அருசுபேர்வநதிருக்குநீயளநா
 மொருதர்வநதிருக்குறேம் உங்களுக்கும் தமக்குமாக வளைபளிக்குற பேபொல்லாம்இ
 றந துபோராள்களப் படிவேண்டாம் உங்களதளதையும் எங்களதளதையும் நிறுத்தி
 உபையதளத துக்கும்பத்தியாய ஒருகல்கம்பம் நிறுத்தி அதில ஒருபடையம் பெழுதி
 நீங்கள் அருசுபேர்வாருவர்களநாமொருதர் வருகிறேம் நீங்களும்நா முயாகச்சண்டை செ
 யது உங்களைநாரு செயித்தாலக் கடடினவலித்த திராததோடே உங்களசீமையைஎங்கமூக்
 குவிட்டுப்போட்டு பொக்கிஷிப்பணடாரதையுங்குறித துப்போட்டுப்போர துநாங்க
 ள்தோருவையாயப்போலநாங்களகடடினதேதசமெல்லாம்விட்டுப்போட்டுநாங்கமு
 ம்அநதப்படியேபோயவிடுகிற துயென்று ஆலோசனை ஆணைசத்தியத துடனேபடடை
 யம் பெழுதி அநதக்கம்பத்தினமேலேகடடி நீங்களுந்நாமும் அநதக்கம்பத்தடியிலச்ச
 ண்டைபண்ணுகிறதென்று சொல்லியனுப்பிவிச்சார் அதுக்கு அநத அருசுபேர் ராசாக்க
 மும் ஆலோசனைபண்ணிக் கொண்டுநீர் ஒருதர் வருகிற துநாங்கள அருசுபேர்வநதுசண்
 டைபண்ணுகிற துஅதமம்நாங்களும் அருசுபேரினொருதர்வருகு றேம் நீயவாரும்ச

of Valam, and to receive from him Tritchinopoly in exchange. To this proposition both parties acceded; and, accordingly, the fort of Valam was given up to the Tanjore king, and Tritchinopoly to the king of Madura. Afterwards the latter expended great sums of money, and thereby built a double-walled fort around Tritchinopoly, and dug an extensive fosse, or moat, in front. He also erected dwelling houses inside the wall; and caused a teppaculam, or sacred-tank, to be dug. Besides, he built a palace; had the jungle-wood on both sides of the river Cauvery cleared away; dug water-courses; laid out new fields for tillage, and placed new inhabitants to cultivate them. Further, he caused ordinary villages, and Bramin streets, with temples, to be built every where on both banks of the Cauvery; and, chastising the robbers of the Visanga country, he rendered the country celebrated. Besides, he built Srirangham, and other temples; and along with them, the usual mandabams, or porches, and connected places. He likewise despatched Ariya-natha-Muthaliar, at the head of a body of troops, into the Tirunelveli (or Tinnevely) country, to make needful arrangements, or see that good police stations and agricultural improvements were therein ordained.

SECTION 4.—Ariya-natha-Muthaliar is opposed by five refractory chiefs—applies to Visvanatha for reinforcement—who comes and wages indecisive warfare—to prevent effusion of blood and misery of families, Visvanatha proposes singly to encounter the five chiefs—they decline, but select one of their number, who is overcome, and the others afterwards, by Visvanatha—according to agreement, he acquires possession of their territories.

But in that country lying to the south, there were five kings, who had been tributaries to the Pandion. These now banded together, and refusing to pay their tribute to Ariya-natha-Muthaliar, joined their forces, and offered him battle. As he was not strong enough to meet them, he wrote to Visvanatha-Naicker; who came, accompanied by a large body of troops, and carried on war during the space of six months, without being able to subdue the five kings: a great many men on both

ஊட்டபணனுமொம்மெனதுவிசுவநாதனாகக்ருதுருச்சொலிபனுப்பிவிச்சார்களாத
தருவிசுவநாதநாயக்கமொசொலிஅனுப்பிவிசுவபனம்நீதிகளஅருகபேரும்அவநஅவர்
சீமைக்கிஆகவநதிருக்குறியளநாமொருநர்அநதஅருகசீமைபும்கட்டவேணும்பென
அவநதிருக்கிறோம்ஆனபடியினாலேநீதிகளஅருகபருக்குமஅருகபேர்வரலாம்பெ
னதுதிருப்பனும்சொலிஅனுப்பிவிச்சார்களஅப்படிக்கிசம்மதியாமலஅவர்களஅரு
கபேரிலஒருநர்கெட்டிக்காறனாகசீறவும்தொடுததுகையயிலட்டாவும்வாங்கிடுதிநீ
பேறிக்கொண்டுஅநதயிடததுக்குவநதார்களவநதவுடனேவிசுவநாதனாயக்கர்ராசா
வைபாததுநீர்முன்னேவெட்டுமெனதுசொன்னார்அநதப்படிராசவிசுவநாதனாயக்க
காவெட்டினார்ராசவிசுவநாதனாயக்கர்அநதவெட்டைக்கதியினாலேதாங்கினும்மறுபடி
யும்அநதராசாவிசுவநாதனாயக்ககாவெட்டசொன்னார்நீர்முன்னுக்கையவெட்டுமென
துசொன்னார்அநதப்படிக்கிசெய்தார்மறுபடியும்விசுவநாதனாயக்கர்ராசாவைபாதது
இனிமேலபததியாமாயிரும்பெனதுசொலிவிசுவநாதநாயக்கர்ராசாவெட்டொண
டுதுண்டமாகவிருநதுபோனார்அநதப்பட்டையத்தில்பெழுதினபடிக்கிஅநதநாலுபே
ர்ராசாக்கமும்சீமையைவிட்டுப்போட்டுததேசாந்திராமாகப்போயவிட்டார்கள்.இவர்க
ளசொலவதுதியினாலேஅப்போதுதெவாதிபளபுஷிப்பம்வருஷம்வருஷித்தார்கள்அப்
போதுவிசுவநாதனாயக்கரும்அரியனாதமுதலியாரும்தாம்பரபண்ணித்தீரத்திலவநது
திருநெல்வெலிபட்டணமும்கோவிலவிஷித்தார்மாகஉண்டுபண்ணிவிசசார்தாம்பிற்வெ
ணித்தீரமுதலும்அருபமாயிருநதகிராமங்கனையும்அனேகநதிராவியஞ்சிலவளிச்சபிற்
பலம்பண்ணிவிச்சகாலகனும்நண்ணுவெட்டிவிச்சவயலக்காடுகமும்விபரீதமாகஉண்டு
பண்ணிவிசசப்பிற்வெலிபட்டித்தினார்களசிறுதுகிராமங்கமும்அக்கிராகாங்களபண்ணிவி
சசார்களமுனநாகமநாயக்கர்பிறகேவநததொட்டியரிடஇததச்சண்டையமூக்கெல்லா
ங்கட்டவேயிருநதுவெருபிறையாசப்பட்டபடியினாலேஅவர்கமூக்கெல்லாம்பாணாயப்
பட்டுக்களாகஅவரவர்கமூக்குச்சீமையும்விட்டுக்குடுததுகாவலக்கிராமங்கமும்விட்டுக்
கொடுததுளமுபத்திராணிபாணாயப்பட்டாகபண்ணிமதுகாகோட்டைக்குளமுபத்திரா
ணி கொத்தளமுங்கட்டிளமுபத்திராணிபாணாயகாரருக்கும்நேமுகம்பித்திகாவலா
கச்சொலிதேமித்தார்கள்இப்படியிருநதார்கள்அப்போதுசாலியவாகன - சகாததம்
தகூரூயிச-கலியுகாததம் - சதகூரூயிச-யிதனமேறபரிதாபி - (ஸ்) - முதலஜகூ - (ஸ்)
வகாக்கும் - (ஸ்)உயிச - க்ருவிசுவநாதனாயக்கர்வகளராச்சியம்ஆண்டார்களசகாததம் தகூரூயி - க்ருபிற்வெலிபட்டணமும்அவர்கமாராபெரியகிஷணப்பபையக்கருக்குப்பட்டங்கட

sides fell, and the lamentations of the families of the deceased, alike in the camp and country around, being heard by Visvanatha-Naicker, he reflected within himself how many families were absorbed in grief merely that he, a single person, might enjoy undisturbed prosperity; and, in consequence, wrote a letter to the five opponents, which he sent by a herald; of which letter, the contents were the following—“ You are five persons, and I am one : for our sakes so much grief and lamentation is caused. Let it not be thus; but, withdrawing the two armies, and restraining all attacks, let a stone pillar be erected midway between both armies, and an agreement be written and placed on it; then advance and meet me alone in personal encounter: if I conquer you, then you must depart with nothing more than the garments you wear; relinquishing your countries, with all treasure and appurtenances, to me; and if I am conquered, then I give up to you, in like manner, my country and all possessions. Let a solemn vow to this effect be made, and let the agreement be recorded on a copper-plate, and placed on the stone pillar; after which we will engage in combat at its foot, and decide the question between us.” On receiving this communication, the five persons consulted together, and replied, “ For you, being one, to meet us five together, would not be equitable; but one from among us will come, and do you come and meet him.” Visvanatha answered in the following manner, “ You, being five persons, are at the head of five countries, which I, being one person, have come in order to subjugate to myself alone; and therefore it is quite right that all five of you should meet me at once.” They, however, would not consent; but selecting the bravest of their number, clothed him in body armour, and mounting him on horseback, being duly furnished with a sword, they conducted him to the appointed arena of combat.

As soon as they were come, Visvanatha-Naicker addressed the champion king, and said to him, “ Do you strike first.” Accordingly he did so, and Visvanatha-Naicker parried the blow with his sword. The king then bid Visvanatha strike; but he declined, and bid the other strike three times. He did so. Again Visvanatha-Naicker addressing the king, said, “ Now, for the rest, take good care;” and then struck the king, cutting him into two pieces, falling to the ground. The four kings now gave up their countries according to the aforesaid written (or engraved) agreement, and

டிவைத தராச்சியம்பரிபாலினம்பண்ணுமுதபேருதுவர்னமாவிரகுதினாகடடிதும்பி
 ச்சிவயக்கொனது ஒருபாணியகாறணபாணடியனசீமையிலவெகுசீமைகடடிக்கொண்
 டிபர்ம்பைக்குடியிலக்கோடடையும்போடடுக்கொண்டிருந்தானபெரியகிஷ்டடிணப்
 பனாபக்கர்போயச்சண்டைபண்ணிஅவனையுஞ்செயிததுஅநதராச்சியதையுங்கடடிக்
 கொண்டார்களஅதினபிறகுஅவர்குமாரானமுதததார்ததினமகனஇனையதார்ததினமக
 ணொண்டுபேருங்காலிலீளநததிலப்பரம்பக்குடிக்காவலுவருமிததுபர்ம்புருமதுவுட்
 னேசேர்நதகிருமங்கனாயும்விடடுக்கொடுத்ததுஒருசினனப்பாணியப்பட்டாகயிருக்கு
 ம்படியாயநேமிததார்களமததச்சீமையெல்லாஞ்சேர்த்துக்கொண்டார்களஅவரும்
 வெகுஞ்சீமையாணிபாணியங்கோடடைக்கிளக்குகிஷ்டடிணமனாயக்கர்பேரு
 க்குஒருப்படணமுங்கடடிவைததுஅதிலச்சிவதலமும்விஷ்டடுணுதலமுநதெறப்பக்
 குளமும்அக்கிரகாரமும்இதுவெல்லாமுணமிபண்ணித்திருநெலவெலிக்குமேற்கேக்க
 டையும்கிஷ்டடினாபுமெனதுஅதிலக்கோவிலஅக்கிராங்களுடணிபண்ணிவிச்சுவெகு
 தானிய-(ஸ்)-முதலிலேக-(ஸ்)-வரைக்குமுப்பததொருவருஷம்வரைக்கும்ராச்சியமா
 ணடார்அப்போதுசாலிவாகனசகார்தம்-தசாநய(ஸ்)-அதினமேலக்காலஞ்சென்று
 அவருக்குப்பிறகாலம்அவர்குமாரானபெரியவீரப்பனாயக்கருக்குப்பட்டாபிசேகமா
 யராச்சியமானியிலமாவிலவாணராசாவெனதுமானுமதுரையிலேயும்காணியார்கோலி
 விலேயும்கோடடைப்போடடுக்கொண்டுபாணடியனசீமையிலசிறுதுசீமைக்கடடிக்
 கொண்டிருந்ததார்அவனையுஞ்செயிததுஅநதச்சீமையும்மதுரையுடனேசேததுக்
 கொண்டாந்திருசிபுராமதெற்குககோடடைஅறுப்புக்கோடடைகடடிவிச்சச்சிதம்பர்
 யகோலிலுஞ்சுததிக்கோடடையுங்கடடிவிச்சார்அவருமனேகதர்மமஅக்கிரகாரங்களு
 ணிபண்ணிசவுமி-(ஸ்)-முதலிவ-(ஸ்)-வரைக்கும்-உயௌ(ஸ்)-ராச்சியமாணடார்அ
 ப்போதுசாலிவாகனசகாறதம்-தசாநயஅ-வரைக்கும்அவர்குமாரானவிசுவப்பனா
 யக்கர்குமாரர்கிஷ்டடிணப்பனாயக்கர்க்ஷததுரிொங்கப்பனாயக்கர்முண்பேர்குமாரா
 ளஅதிலவிசுவப்பனாயக்கருக்குப்பட்டங்கடடிஅவர்குமாரகிஷ்டடிணப்பனாயக்கருஞ்சி
 ணனததுரையுமாகயிருநதுதது-(ஸ்)-முதலமனமத-(ஸ்)-வரைக்கும்சகாறதம்-த
 சாநயஅ(ஸ்)-இருவதுவருசம்-வரைக்கும்ராச்சியமாணிஅவருக்குப்பிறக்காலவரு
 மாரகிஷ்டடிணப்பனாயக்கருக்குப்பட்டமும்அவர்தம்பிக்ஷததுரிொங்கப்பனாயக்கரு
 க்குச்சின்னத்துரைததனமுமாகயிருநதுஅவர்களுநதுனமுதி-(ஸ்)-முதலபரிதாவி
 (ஸ்)-வரைக்கும்சாலிவாகனசகாறதம்-தசாநயஇ-பட்டம்பதினெனவருஷம்அவருக்கு departed as emigrants, or solitary wanderers, into other lands. In consequence of their good faith to their plighted word, the gods from on high showered down flowers, in token of their approbation.

SECTION 5.—Visvanatha-Naicker, and his general, improve the Tinnevelly Country—divide the whole of their acquisitions into seventy-two districts—give these to seventy-two chiefs—on condition of military service—the date of this transaction fixed at S.S. 1354, or A.D. 1432—Visvanatha ceases to reign S.S. 1380, or A.D. 1438—and is succeeded by his son Periya-Kistnama-Naicker.

Visvanatha-Naicker, and Ariya-natha-Muthaliar, afterwards came to the Tembaraveni river; and there they rebuilt or enlarged the town of Tirunelveli (Tinnevelly); and also erected many new temples. There being unsightly villages on the banks of the Tembaraveni, they expended great sums of money in repairing and beautifying them, making them celebrated; and also had many water-courses cut, leading from the river to the fields: the number of which last they greatly increased; adding to the repute of the whole country. Besides which, they built some new villages, and some agraras, or Bramin-streets.

As many of the chiefs of the Dotiyah class, who had heretofore followed the fortunes of Nagama-Naicker, had taken an active share of service in all these last mentioned battles, so now Visvanatha-Naicker and Ariya-natha-Muthaliar rewarded their services by dividing the whole of the countries acquired into seventy-two palliyams, (districts, or counties,) specifying the towns or villages belonging to each; and these districts they held on tenure of military service, in the manner following: that is—the king built or attached seventy-two bastions to the fort of Madura; and in case of attack or siege, these seventy-two palliya-carers were each one to have charge of a particular bastion with a connected portion of the wall, and to defend the same with his retainers against all assaults. This arrangement was accordingly followed. This was in the year of Salivahana-Sagartam 1354, or year of the Cali-yugam 4533.

After this arrangement, Visvanatha-Naicker reigned from Paritabi year down to ப்பிறகாலம் அவர்குமார் னமுத துக்கிஷ்டடிணப்பனாயக்கர்குள நதையான ததினாலே

 அவர் தம்பி சுஷித துரி னொங்கப்பனாயக்கருக்குப் பட்டங் கடடிக்கொண்டு பிறமா தீட்டி
 னு)- முதல்கொண்டிசி ததாறதி - னு)- வரைக்கும் யேருவருஷம் ராசசியமாண்டார் சா
 லிவாகனசகாறதம் - தசா அயுஉ - அவருக்குப் பிறகாலம் அவர் தனைபனார் குமாரர் கிஷ்ட
 டிணப்பனாயக்கர் குமார் னமுத துக்கிஷ்டடிணப்பனாயக்கருக்குப் பட்டங் கடடி அவர் ரா
 சசியமானியல அனெகங் கோலில்கள தடாகங் கள அக்கிராவகள மதுரைக்கு னுக்கிச்சந தா
 மலைக்கு மததியிலமுத துக்கிஷ்டடிணபுர மெனறுபட்டனமுத சட்டிவை ததுகயததா
 ததியமுத துக்கிஷ்டடிணகாணெனறு சிவனகோலில்கடடிவை தது அவர் னுளையிலசசெ
 துபதிக்கு ராசசியங் கொடுத்தவயணமாவ ததுதியில உடையான செதுபதிக்கிச சீமையு
 ம்துரை ததனமுமுண்டு பண்ணிக்குறி தது அப்போ துராமனாது புரூசீமையெல்லா நதன்
 னாகநாடாபண்டருக்கூர்கோட்டை உண்டு அராமனைக்குவாரவரி சையுங் கொடாமலயெய
 கேபாறதா னுங் காடுவள ததுக் கொண்டு சீமை கொளையிடுகிற துருசெதுமாறகத்தில
 ராமேசாத துக்குப்போறபரிசுகளை சசிலலாபணணிவெட்டிக்குத்திபறித துக் கொண
 டிபோறதுமாகயிருந தது அப்போ துகறததாக்களாகியமுத துக்கிஷ்டடிணப்பனாயக்க
 ருடைய குருக்கள ராமேசாத துக்குப்போ னார் அப்போ துபொக னூரி லிருநது உடை
 யானசெதுபதியாகிறவுர்குருக்கமுக்குக்காவலாக ராமேசாம்வரைக்கும் போயவளிப்
 பாதையிலசலவியமில்லாமலபத்திமாயக்காத துக் கொண்டு குருக்கள ராமேசாத துக்கு
 ப்போயமதுரைக்குவருகிறவரைக்குங்கூடவேவறதார் அப்போ து குருக்கள வெகுசந
 தோசப்பட்டு ராசா முத துக்கிஷ்டடிணப்பனாயகரிடத்திலக்கூட்டிக்கொண்டு போயப்
 பேட்டிபணணிவ் சசெதுமாறக்கத துக்கு இவர்கெட்டிக்கூற நெனறு இவர் செயதிது
 ததியப்படுததிவ் ச்சுகிற துசன ததுக்கு மிகிற துகிராமங்களுமீத ததாரம்வாகி குறித து
 வலத்த திரும்பு சனாதி யனும் வெகு மதி வாங்கி குறித து அனுப்பி விசசதில அவர் வறது
 பொக னூரிலக்கோட்டைப் போட்டு சுகிற துசன ததையும் சேவுகம்வை ததுக் கொண்டு
 தனனாகநாடா யிருநத சீமையெல்லாம் அடித துககட்டிதன னுகுள னேசுபாதினப்படு
 ததிய் சசுக கொண்டு அநத சீமையில வெகுபணம்வரைக்கும் அறுவுபணணி ராசா முத து
 கிஷ்டடிணப்பநாயகருக்குக் கொண்டு வற துகெட்டு ததார் னாம்பவுருசநதோசப்பட்
 டி இனனமுனக்குத தேவை யானசனம் எவளவு சனம்வைசக வேணுமோ அநத மட்டும்
 வைத துக கொண்டு அராமனைக்கிப்பணங் கொடாத சீமையெல்லாம் நீர் வெட்டிக் கட்டிக்
 கொள்ளசசொல்லி திருபங்குறித து உததாரம் பணணி னார்கள் அநதப் படிக்கு வற்துசன

Isvara year, or twenty-six years. After Salivahana-Sugartam 1380, his son, Periya-Kistnama-Naicker, was crowned.

SECTION 6.—A Polygar rebels—and is subdued by Periya-Kistnama-Naicker—who pardons the rebel's two sons, and gives them a small estate, assuming the rest of the district to himself—he builds two towns near to Tinnevely—reigns to S.S. 1411, or A.D. 1489—and his son, Periya-Virapa-Naicker, succeeds him.

In the 11th c.ys, Dummachi-Naicker, a palliya-caren, assembled a great force of cavalry, and subdued, assuming to himself, many places in the Pandion country; and built for himself a fort, in a place which he called Parambai-kudi. Periya-Kistnama-Naicker went out against him; and, overthrowing him in battle, captured the whole of the country, or palliyam, with its additons. But two of the rebel-chief's sons, the one by the elder wife, and the other by the younger wife, of Dummachi, came and fell at the feet of Periya-Kistnama-Naicker, imploring pardon: he gave up Parambu-kudi to them, together with Parambur, (the town or pettah,) and with it the connected villages; and settling this district as a small palliyam, he assumed all the remaining portion of the rebel-chief's territory to himself.

He reigned many years, and to the eastward of Paliyang-kotai, (Palamcottah,) he built a town, calling it (Kistnapuram,) after his own name. In this town he built a Saiva temple, a Vaishnava temple, and agraras; had a terpacolam (or sacred tank) dug; and furnished the town with every other customary appurtenance. In like manner, to the west of Tirunelveli, he built a town, named Kadiyang-kistnapuram; and in this also erected temples and agraras. He ruled from Vegudaniyam year down to Kilaca year, being a period of thirty-one years. This was S.S. 1411. His time had then passed; and he left his crown to his son Periya-Virapa-Naicker, who was anointed and installed.

மும்வைத துக்கொணரிசீமையெலலாங்கடடிசுபாதினப்படுததிவிச்சுக்கொணரிஅநிலு
 ளளபணமெலலாமறுவிட்டுதம்மிடசனததுக்கும்தம்மிடசிலவுக்கும்வைததுக்கொண
 ருமததப்பணததைஇராசாவுக்குக்கொடுததனுப்பிவிச்சார்அப்போதுஇராசாவெஞ்ச
 நதோசப்பட்டுஅவகாவர்வளைததுஉடையானசெதுபதியெனகிற்பேருங்கொடுதது
 ஆனைகுதிரையருவகுடுததுவஷத்திபூசனாதிபருவகுடுததுச்சிறிதுவிருதுகருவகுடுத
 துஅநதச்சீமைக்கிப்படடாபிசேகமுருகுடடிவிச்சுஅனுப்பிவிச்சார்அப்போதுஅநத
 உடையானசெதுபதியாகிறவர்இராமனாதபுரத்திலமண் கோட்டையும்போட்டுஇராச
 தானிபண்ணிக்கொண்டிருந்தார்அவருக்குப்பிறகாலம்அவர்குமாரானகூதனைசெது
 பதிபட்டங்கடடிக்கொணரிவடக்குவட்டைககாணையார் கோவிலிலபட்டமங்கலநாடுமு
 தலக்கொணரிஅநதச்சீமையெலலாம்சுபாதினப்படுததிவிச்சுக்கொணரிஅர்மனைக்குத
 தோப்பாப்பணமும்கொடுததுக்கொணரிஇருந்தார்ப்படிஇருக்கையிலரவுத்திரி - ஸ்ரீ
 முதலவிரோதிசிறுது-ஸ்ரீ-வகாக்கும்-ஸ்ரீநய-சாலிவாகனசகாறதம்-தருமயெ-அவ
 ருக்குமுணுகுமாரர்முததுவிராப்பனாயக்கர்நிருமலைநாயக்கர்குமார்முததுநாயக்கர்இர
 ணரிமுனதுபேர்குமாராகப்பிறததுமுததுவிராப்பனாயக்கருக்குப்பட்டமுதகடடிஅ
 வர்பெரியதுவாயும்நிருமலைநாயக்கர்சினனததுவாயுமாகயிருநதுவிசுதுதி-ஸ்ரீ-முத
 லதுனமதி-ஸ்ரீ-வகாக்கும்-ஸ்ரீநய-இராச்சியம்ஆண்டார்அப்போதுசாலிவாகன
 சகாறதம்-தருமயெ-அவருக்குப்பிறகாலம்இராசாநிருமலைநாயக்கர்மதுவாயிலப்ப
 டட்டங்கடடிக்கொணரிஅவர்தம்பிசுமார்முததுநாயக்கர்சினனததுவாயுமாகஇராச்சிய
 ம்ஆனயிலசீங்கம்மதுவாயுமுதலக்கொணரிவிஷ்டடிணுதலங்ககளிவதலங்களுக்கெல்லா
 ம்தொண்ணுததிஆறுகோபுரம்ராயர்கோபுரமெனதுகோபுரம்பெலலம்பெருசாயஒ
 ருமுதிறத்திலஅடிப்போட்டுசிறுதுவேலையளமுதததார்மதுவாயிலததெறபக்குள
 மும்புதுமண்டபமும்அர்மனையுடகடிவைச்சார்அப்போதுகூதனைசெதுபதிருமார்
 னதளவாயசெதுபதிசடைக்கததேவனெனதுமஅவருக்குஇரணநாமகறணம்அநதச்
 சடைக்கததேவனெனகிறவர்அர்மனைக்கிப்பணமுதகுடாமலநிகாரிததுொம்பததுந்
 மாநிகங்களாயநடப்பிததுக்கொணரிவந்தார்கள்அதுசமசார்மீஇராசாநிருமலைநாயக்
 கர்கேட்டுஅவருக்குததாகிதையாயிறுபம்பெருதிஅனுப்பிவிச்சார்கள்அநதநிதுபத
 தையுநதளளிப்போனமனுசையுமடிததுக்கோபம்வைததுதளவாயஇராமப்பயப
 கையும்கலதளமும்பெருபததிண்ணிபாணியகாரையுமனுப்பிஇராமனாதபுரத்துவகா
 க்குஞ்சுண்டைபண்ணிக்கோட்டையெவிட்டுப்போட்டுசடைக்கததேவராமேசுபர்த

SECTION 7.—Periya-Virapa-Naicker repels an invasion from the king of Mavalivanam—and erects various buildings—leaves three sons—being succeeded by the eldest—Visvapa-Naicker reigns twenty years—Cumara-Kistnapa-Naicker reigns seventeen years—Casturi-Rangapa-Naicker reigns seven years—is succeeded by Mutthu-Kistnapa-Naicker.

In the reign of Periya-Virapa-Naicker, the king of Mavalivanam came with hostile intent, placed a fortified camp before Mana-mathurai and Kalaiyar-covil, and conquered some places in the Pandion country; but Virapa-Naicker conquered him, and took possession of his country, joining it to his own. He also built a small fort (or “an Arab fort,” various reading) to the south of Tritchinoply, and erected a wall round the temple at Sittambaram, (Chillambram). Besides he built many agraras as public charities. He reigned from Saumiya year down to Iva year, being twenty-seven years. This was in S.S. '1438, (or A.D. 1516).

He had three sons, who were named respectively Visvapa-Naicker, Cumara-Kistnapa-Naicker, and Casturi-Rangapa-Naicker. Among these, the eldest, Visvapa-Naicker, was crowned; and his brother, Cumara-Kistnapa-Naicker, was second to him in power: and these reigned from Dathu year down to Manmatha year, or S.S. 1458, (A.D. 1536,) being twenty years. After him, (that is, Visvapa-Naicker,) the crown devolved on Cumara-Kistnapa-Naicker, and Casturi-Rangapa-Naicker was his second in power: and these reigned from Dunmiki year down to Paritabi year, S.S. 1475, (A.D. 1553,) being seventeen years. After him, as his son, Mutthu-Kistnapa-Naicker, was a child, his younger brother, Casturi-Rangapa-Naicker, was crowned, and reigned seven years; from Piramatichu down to Sittarti year, S.S. 1482, (A.D. 1560). After him, his elder brother, Cumara-Kistnapa-Naicker's son, named Mutthu-Kistnapa-Naicker, was crowned.

தில்புபோயிருந்ததார்தளவாயிராமப்பயன்வர்கள் பாம்பநாதனுக்கு குறுக்கை அணைக்க
 டடி அதின்பேரில் தளத்தை நடத்தி இராமீகாதனுக்குப் போய் சண்டைபண்ணி சடைக்
 கத்தேவனையும் பிடித்துக்கொண்டுவந்ததுமதுரையிலுள்ளபந்தனம்பண்ணி இருந்ததில்
 ச்சிறுதுணைக்கிப்பிறகு ராமேசுபரம்பாறைமாதவகளில் ச்சிலுறையளாயிருந்தது
 அப்படியிருக்கையிலவிராகியளலாட்சனனாசியளவடக்கேயிருந்தது இராமேசுபரம்பாறை
 னாக்குவதது இராசா அர்மணவாசலிலவெகுளவகாக்கும்காத் திருநதுபிமுதிபண்ணி
 விச்சச்செதுபதியைவிடச்சொல்லொம்பவேண்டிக்கொண்டார்களராசாவுக்கு ஓம்ப
 ததயவுவந்ததுசடைக்கனசெதுபதியைவிட்டு இனிமேல் புத்தியாய்ந்தததுகோவென
 றவஷத்திர்பூசனாதிபனாடுவெகுமதிக்கொடுத்தது சீமையும் கொடுத்தது அனுப்பிவிச்சார்க
 ள அவருக்குப்பிள்ளைகள் இல்லாததினாலே அவருக்குப்பிறகாலம் அவர்மருமகனானொரு
 குத்ததேவரைப்பட்டங்கடடி அவர் பட்டிக்கோட்டைமனனார் கோவிலவகாக்குஞ்சீ
 மையாக இராச்சியமாண்டு கொண்டிருக்கையிலமபூரார்வெகுதினாததளஞ்சேகரித்
 துக்கொண்டுவந்ததுமதுரையினபேரிலவந்தது இறங்கிசீமையெல்லாம் அவர்களயாபிச்சுக்
 கொண்டார்கள அப்போது ராசா திருமலைநாயக்கர்செதுபதிக்குச்சீட்டெனதுயனுப்பி
 விச்சார் அந்தச்சீட்டைவாசித்துக்கொண்டநாளியலுக்குசெதுபதி அறுபது குயிர்சுச
 னததுடனேசேகர்குசெய்துகொண்டுவந்ததுமபூர்பாளையத்தைபுடித்துக்கணயாயவ
 னாக்கும்விட்டடிச்செயம்பண்ணிக்கொண்டு இராசாயிடத்துக்குவந்தார்ப்போ இராசா
 ஓம்பசந்தோசமாகி அர்மணயிலவருநதுபண்ணி ஆணைகுதினா அனேகவஷத்திர்பூசனா
 திகளுந் கொடுத்தது திருமலைசெதுபதியெனது பேருவகொடுத்தது தாமேருகிறசிலக
 முகப்பலலக்குவகொடுத்தது குடைமேலசசலிமுதலாகியவருநதுகருவகொடுத்தது தமக்
 குக்குமார்வந்தமெனதுதோப்பாப்பணமும்வேண்டாமெனதுசுறுபமானியமாகத்தள
 ளிக்குறித்துஅதுமுதலக்கொண்டுதோப்பாப்பணங் குடாமலசீமையாண்டு கொண்டு
 இராமனாதபுரங்கோட்டையுங்கலக்கோட்டையாக்க்கட்டிக்கொண்டிருந்ததார்துனமதி
 னு-முதலக்கொண்டுபிலபவ - னு-வகாக்கும்- னுசய-வகாக்குஞ்சீமையாண்டார்
 சகாததம்தரு அயிச-அவருக்குப்பிறகாலம் அவர்குமாரன்முத்துவீரப்பனாயக்கருக்கு
 ப்பட்டமும் திருமலையுக்கார்தம்பிகுமாரமுததுயுக்கர்குமாரனகுமாரொருவப்பனா
 யக்கருக்குசசினனதுதாப்பட்டமாகசுபகித்து- னு-முதலவினோதகித்துவரிசம்வ
 னாக்கும்- னுயி-வகாக்கும்சகாததம் - தருக்கயிச - இராச்சியமாண்டார்கள் அவருக
 குப்பிறகாலம் அவர்குமாரன்சொககருதனாயக்கர்வர்கருகருப்பட்டமும் குமாரொருவ

SECTION 8.—Mutthu-Kistnapa-Naicker builds a town and temple—makes a grant of part of the Marawa province to Udiyan—he enlarges the grant, adding the title of Sethopathi—Udiyan is succeeded by his son Kuttan—Mutthu-Kistnapa rules down to S.S. 1512—and leaves three sons.

In his time he caused many temples to be built, tanks to be dug, and agraras to be constructed. He also built a town, named Kistnapuram, midway between Madura and Secander-hill; and a Suiva temple, named Muttu-Kistnesvaren, in the town called Kayataru.

During his reign the establishment of the kingdom of the Sethopathi took place, in the following manner : that is to say, the first person to whom the country was given, was named Udiyan-Sethopathi. At that time the whole of the country around Ramiseram was in an anarchical state; each town having its fortress, and paying no tax or tribute whatsoever: in every direction waste forest-like lands appeared; rapine also prevailed; and the people bearing presents sent by the king to the temple at Ramiseram, were scattered on the way towards the isthmus named Sethu, and the temple itself; when, being thus divided, what they carried was forcibly taken from them as spoils, and the bearers of the same were killed. At that time the chief guru (or spiritual adviser) of Mutthu-Kistnapa-Naicker, who was invested with the title of kartarcak (or lord), had occasion to go to Ramiseram; when the chief man of the village of Pugalur, who was named Udiyan-Sethopathi, escorted the chief guru safe to Ramiseram, without allowing him to suffer any insult or molestation by the way; and, in like manner, also safely conducted him back again to Madura. Being greatly pleased with this attention, the chief guru introduced Udiyan to the king Mutthu-Kistnapa-Naicker, procuring an interview, praising him as a skilful guide and safeguard on the road to Sethu; and in consequence Udiyan received a grant of certain people and lands, with villages, as also an honorary dress and various ornaments as presents: on being dismissed, he returned to Pugalur; and there built a fort, assembled some forces, and, by their aid, subdued and took possession of all the anarchical and disorderly country, reducing the inhabitants under his own dominion. He also collected a considerable sum of money in this country, in the way of taxes; and

ப்புயக்கர் குமார்னகுமாருதிருமலையுயக்கருக்குச்சினனததுரைப்பட்டமுமாகிரு
 ததுபதினுவரிசம்பரிதாவி - (ஸ்) - முதலபிறபவ - (ஸ்) - வரைக்கும்சகாததம் - தசூய
 இராச்சியம் ஆண்டுயிருக்கையிலருததுமுக்காண்சொக்கனதுயக்கர் பிள்ளையாகவ
 னததுஅவருக்குஅதிகாரங்கொடுத்ததில அவர்களசாதியார் தலுக்கரைப் பிறபலப்படுத்த
 திகோட்டைகொத்தளஞ்சகலமும் அவர்கள்பாரிசம்பண்ணிக் கொண்டு இராசாவைஅர்
 மனைவிட்டுவெளியில வராதபடிக்குவாசலிலேபாராவைத்துச்சிமையெல்லாம்வியாப்பிச்
 சுக்கொண்டிருந்தார்அப்போதுஇராசாசொக்கனதுநாயக்கர்களவன செதுபதிக்கிச்சி
 ட்டெருதிஅனுப்பிவிச்சார்அந்தச்சிட்டுக்கொண்டவந்தவுடனேசெதுபதிருபதினாயி
 ரஞ்சனத்துடனேவந்தருததுமுகானையும்வெட்டிதலையறுத்துக்கொண்டுஅவனுடனே
 சேர்த்ததுலுக்கையெல்லாம்வெட்டிருத்ததுமுகானதலையை இராசாலிடத்துக்குக்கொடு
 ததுனுப்பிவிச்சார்உடனே இராசாவெளியே வந்ததுகிளவன செதுபதிக்கிச்சகலவெகும
 தியும்பண்ணிஇராமனதுபுத்ததுக்குஅனுப்பிவிச்சார்பின்னையுஞ்சிறுதுநாளிருந்ததுசே
 க்கனதுநாயக்கருக்குக்காலஞ்சென்றுபோய அவர்குமார்னொங்ககிஷ்டடிண முததுவீ
 ரப்பநாயக்கருக்குப்பட்டமும்குமாருதிருமலைநாயக்கர்குமார்னபங்காருதிருமலைநாய
 கருக்குச்சினனததுரைப்பட்டமுமாகயேருவருசம்இராச்சியமாண்டார்களவிப - (ஸ்)
 முதலபவ. (ஸ்) - வரைக்கும்சகாததம் - தசூய - அவருக்குப்பிறகாலம்அவர்குமார்னவி
 ஷயொங்க சொக்கனதுயக்கர்பட்டத்துக்குவந்ததுமூனுமாததைக்குளந்தையான
 திலேமங்கமமாள் பெர்னாகுபதிநெட்டுவருசமாகிறவரைக்கும்இராச்சியபரிபாவி
 னம்பண்ணிஅனேக அக்கிராமங்கள் தேவாலயங்கள் சத்திரங்கள் கட்டியிருக்கையிலரு
 தாளதாம்புலம்போட்டுக்கொள்ளுகிறபோதுஇடதுகையாலமற்றதாப்போலேவெதி
 திலுமடிப்புவாங்கிப்போட்டுக்கொண்டபடியினாலேஅதுக்குஇடதுகையினால்வாங்கிப் bringing the same to the king, Mutthu-Kistnapa-Naicker, delivered it over to him. The king being very much gratified with this proceeding, gave him an unrestricted grant for additional people; instructed him to see the forest-lands, which yielded no revenue, cleared and cultivated; and wrote letters to the people, commanding their submission to his viceroy. According to this ordinance, the latter, when he returned, assembled additional forces, and took possession of a greater tract of country; the revenue arising from which he appropriated in part to his own and his people's expenses, and sent the remainder, or surplus, to the king. On this the king, being greatly pleased, sent for him, and invested him with the title of Sethopathi, as Udiyan-Sethopathi, (or Udiyan the chief of Sethu); bestowing on him elephants and horses, with vestments and ornaments; and also gave him some banners, or ensigns of dignity; and, in Madura, had him consecrated to his viceroyalty, by sprinkling of the water of the Ganges: he then gave him audience of leave.

After this Udiyan-Sethopathi built a mud fort at Ramanatha-puram (Ramnad), and ruled in the fashion of a king. On his decease, his principality descended to his son, named Kuttan Sethopathi, who subdued to himself Vadaku-vettakai, Kaliyar-kovil, Patta-mangala-nadu, with the whole circumjacent country; and carried the surplus amount of taxes to the palace (at Madura).

These things being accomplished, Mutthu-Kistnapa-Naicker ruled from Ravuttira year down to Virothikirathi year, or thirty years; corresponding with S.S. 1512, (or A.D. 1590). He left three sons, named Mutthu-Virapa-Naicker, Tirumali-Naicker, and Cumara-Mutthu-Naicker.

SECTION 9.—Mutthu-Virapa-Naicker rules thirty-two years—is succeeded by Tirumali-Naicker—who erects various buildings—the Sethopathi rebels, is expelled, taken prisoner at Ramiseram, and put in fetters at Madura—is released at the intercession of religious pilgrims—is succeeded by Regu-natha-dever, who, as Trimul Naig's general, repels a Mysore invasion, and is in consequence greatly honored—after a reign of forty years, Trimul-Naig leaves his crown to his son.

Among these two or three sons, the crown devolved on Mutthu-Virapa-Naicker, போட்டதுதோசமென்கிறதாய் அதைத் தோசம்பரிகார்த்துக்கூகி முதல் ராமேசு பர்ம்கன்னியா குமரிமறையிடங்கெல்லாம்சாலையளவைத்துத்தெறபுகுளுங்களைசத்திர் ங்களநீர்மோர்பநதலஅனனதானம்மறததானதமங்கனும்பண்ணிவெகுதூர்ம்வரை க்கும்மீறதிவ்ளங்கும்படியாய்ச்செய்துயிவ-ஸ்ர-முதலநதன-ஸ்ர-வரைககும்சகாற தம்-தகூராகுடு-பதினெட்டுவருஷத்துக்கும்மங்கம்மாளராச்சியம்அதினபேரிலமங கம்மாளபோனபிறகுவிசையொங்கச்சொக்கநாதனாயக்கர்விசைய-ஸ்ர-முதலவிருத கிறுது-ஸ்ர-வரைககும்சகாறதம்-தகூராகுடுச-கரு-யிக்ஸ்ர-துரைததனனம்பண்ணி னூர்கள ஸ்ரீரொங்கருகருமிருத ஆபர்ணங்ககட்டனைக கிருமங்களவீசெடமாயவிட்டுக கொடுத்ததுமறததலங்கெல்லாம்அறதப்படிக்கச்செய்துஅவருநதெயலீகமாநூர்அ வருககுப்பிள்ளைகளிலலாதத்தினுலேவங்காருநிருமலைநாயக்கர்பட்டத்துக்குடையவரா னபடியினுலே அவர்குமாரீணவிசையொங்கச்சொக்கநாதனாயக்கர் பெணசாதிமீனாட் சிஅம்மாளதனக்குமருசளநீர்குடித்துத்ததுப்புத்திர்க்கவாங்கியவருகுப்பட்டங்க டடவேணுமெனறுவங்காருநிருமலைநாயக்கருகுகச்சொல்லிககேட்டார்கள்வர் சொன்னதுஅறதப்பட்டம்நானகட்டிக்கொளவேனபெனக்குப்பிறகுயென குமாரீண ப்பட்டங்கட்டிக்கொளவானபிள்ளையகருகுகிறதிலையெனறுதாமேபட்டங்கட்டிக கொண்டுபுது அர்மணியிலிருந்துசமஷித்தானத்திலுள்ளசறுவத்திராரும்வங்காருநிரு மலைநாயக்கருடனேசேரதிருநதார்களமீனாட்சிஅம்மாருடஅண்ணனதம்பிமாரும்அ வர்களுடனேசேந்தசன்மும்மீனாட்சியம்மாருடனெசெந்தார்களராச்சியமெல்லாம்வ வங்காருநிருமலைநாயக்கருக்குள்ளேயிருந்துதுபணம்பொக்கிஷம்நகைவகையள சகலமு ம்அர்மணியிலமீனாட்சியம்மாளவசமாகயிருந்துதுஅப்படியிருக்கையிலமீனாட்சியம் மாளசந்தாசாயபுக்குயெனாதிக்கொண்டாளிதுசமர்சார்ம்வங்காருநிருமலைநாயக்கர்நி

who was chief, and Tirumali-Naicker was his second in power. The rule of the first was thirty-two years, from Vicrothi year down to Dunmathi year; corresponding with S. S. 1544, (or A. D. 1622). After, Tirumali-Naicker was king, being crowned in Madura; and his younger brother, named Cumara-Mutthu-Naicker, was second to him in power. In his time, from Srirangham to Madura he built ninety-six towers of temples, which were called Rayer-Kobarams, causing the whole of the work to begin in one muhurtam of time (or simultaneously); but only a part of it was finished. In Madura itself he built a new mandabam (or choultry); had a terpa-kulayn (or sacred reservoir) dug; and erected a new palace. At that time the son of Kuttan-Sethopathi was named Dalava-Sethopathi, and also Sadaica-deven, being so called after his father and mother. That Sadaica-deven did not send revenue to the palace; was contumacious; and conducted himself every way in a very bad manner. Tirumali-Naicker, the king, hearing this intelligence, wrote him a takid, (or letter,) in strongly cautionary terms. But he rejected the letter; and ordered the messengers who carried it to be beaten. The king, incensed, summoned the seventy-two palliya-carers, and with them a strong force; at the head of which he placed Dalava-Ramapaiyen, who advanced, fighting his way, as far as to Ramanatha-puram, (Ramnad,) whence the rebellious chief, Sadaica-deven was expelled, and flying, took refuge in the island of Ramiseram. Dalava-Ramapaiyen caused a bridge to be thrown across the Pamban river, (or strait,) and advancing over it to Ramiseram, he fought with Sadaica-deven, and took him prisoner, carrying him afterwards to Madura; where, being chained by the legs, he was put in close captivity.

Some time after, in the roads and other places of the Ramnad country disturbances and robberies appeared. In consequence several Vairagis, and Lada-sannyasis, (religious pilgrims,) who had come from the north to go to Ramiseram, now beset the gate of the palace for a length of time with complaints, and earnestly besought that the Sethopathi might be restored. The king, relenting, was graciously pleased to release the said Sadaica-Sethopathi, and, calling him to his presence, remonstrated with him; and, exhorting him for the future to conduct himself with greater wisdom, gave him vestments and presents, restored to him the country, and sent him away. As the Sethopathi was without male offspring, after his decease,

ததுதபாபுசபுதலவிகாணுக்குயெனாதிக்கொண்டாரீகளதபாபுசபுதலவிகாணுசுந்தாசா
யபும்பதினாயிர்வகுதினாயுடனேதிருச்சிதூப்பாளிக்கோடடைக்குவெளியேவறதுதிற
வகினூர்களஅப்போது வவகாருதிருமலைநாயக்கர் தபாபுசபு தலவிகாணப் பேட்டிபண
ணிக்கொண்டு தம்முடைய சமாசாரமெல்லாரு சொல்லிக்கொண்டார்கள்தின பேரிலந
பாபுசபுதலவிகான சமஷத தானத்திலஉள்ள சருவத்திராணையும் வர்வனை ததுநாயபுறு
வீரீகமாவிரிச்சாரீகோடடைக்கும்ராச்சியத துக்கும்வவகாருதிருமலைநாயக்கர்உடை
யவரல்லாதுமீனாட்சிஅம்மாளுக்குஆண்பிள்ளையிலலா தத்தினாலேமீனாட்சிஅம்மாளுக்கு
அவளோடேபிறந்தஅண்ணனதம்பிமாருக்கும் துரைத்தனஞ்செலவாது துரைத்தனம்
பண்ணின ராசாலினுடைய ராணியாகச்சே அம்மாளுக்கு மவளுடைய அண்ணன தம்பி
மாருக்கும் அவர்களை நம்பின சனத துக்கும் ராசாலிசையுடொங்கச்சொக்கனாதநாயக்கரி
ருக்கிறமுனனுக்குஎன்னகட்டளை நடந துதோஅநதக்கட்டளை அவர்களுக்குக்குமித துவ
ருவிறதுஅநதஅம்மாளுடையநகைவகைசொநதபொக்கிஷம்அநதஅம்மாளுக்குக்குமி
ததுவியிருததுமததஅர்மனை பொக்கிஷமெல்லாம்ஆனைகுறியா நகைவகைசகலமும்வவ
காருதிருமலை நாயக்கர்வர்களவசம்பண்ணிவிச்சுப் போடச்சொல்லியும்பட்டக்காணிக்
கைமுப்பதுலெட்சம்ரூபாயதீத துவாயிதாவைத துக்கொண்டுவாயிதாப்பிறகார்வருடிக்
கச்சொல்லிவவகாரு திருமலைநாயக்கர்வர்கள கையினாலே என்னுக்கொடுக்கச் சொல்லிவா
வகிக்கொண்டுசந்தாசாயபையிருந துதிறதப்படி திட்டம்பண்ணி வர்ச்சொல்லிதபாபு
சபுதலவிகானஆர்க்காட்டுக்குப்போயவிட்டார்களவர்போனதினபிறகு மீனாட்சியம்மா
ளும்அண்ணனதம்பிமாரும்ஆலோசனைபண்ணிக் கோடிரூபாய கொடுக்கிறது யென்று
சந்தாசாயபுஇடத்தில்ப்பேசினதில அவர் அநதப்பட்சத்தில் யேறபட்டிக்கொண்டுவவ
காருதிருமலைநாயக்கருக்குஇன்றைக்கிராணிக்கென்றுப் போக்காயச்சொல்லிக்கொண his daughter's husband, named Regu-natha-dever, was crowned. He exercised authority from Pattā-kottai to Manar-kovil.

While so ruling, the Mysoreans, having assembled a large body of cavalry, came and invaded Madura, and encamped in a part of the country, while they filled and took possession of nearly the whole kingdom. Hereupon the king, Tirumali-Naicker, wrote a letter to the Sethopathi, who, immediately on seeing it, took the promptest measures, and raised at once sixty thousand troops; with these he advanced, attacked and routed the Mysore camp, and pursued them even to the ascent of the Ghats, or mountain passes leading to their country. Having thus conquered, he returned to the king, who was intensely pleased; gave him an entertainment in the palace; bestowed on him horses, elephants, and splendid garments; and honored him with the name, or title, of Tirumali-Sethopathi. Besides, he presented him with his own lion-faced palanquin (a peculiar emblem of royalty); gave him a banner, and a mel-chelli, (or canopy,) with other ensigns. He treated him also as if his own son; and dispensed with all demands of tribute, even to the smallest fraction. From that time forwards the Sethopathi ruled, not as a tributary but independently; and built for himself a stone fort at Ramnad.

Tirumali-Naicker reigned from Dunmathi year down to Pilapava year, being forty years. He died in S. S. 1584 (A. D. 1662). After him his son, Mutthu-Virapa-Naicker, was crowned.

SECTION 10.—Cumara-Ranga-Naicker reigns ten years—is succeeded by Choka-Natha-Naicker, who, placing confidence in Rustam-Khan, is deposed, and imprisoned by him—but is restored, and Rustam killed by Kilaven-Sethopathi—Ranga-Kistna-Naicker rules seven years—regency of Mangamala.

Along with him, Cumara-Ranga-Naicker, the son of Tirumali-Naicker's younger brother, Cumara-Mutthu-Naicker, was the second in power. Mutthu-Virapa-Naicker reigned from Subakirathi year down to Virothikirathi year, being ten years, or S. S. 1594 (A. D. 1672). After him his son, Choka-Natha-Naicker, was crowned, and Cumara-Tirumali-Naicker, the son of Cumara-Rangapa-Naicker, was his second in

டெவததுமீனாட்சி அம்மா னாட அண்ணனவெங்கிடடப்பெருமா ளுயைக்கரை காவேரிக்
 கரையிலத்தள வாயமண்டபத்திலப் போயிருநது உங்களுக்கு ராச்சியமுநது னாததன
 மும்பண்ணித்தருகிறோமென்றுசத்தியம்பண்ணிக்கொடுத்ததுக்கோடி ரூபாய்தர்சசொ
 லலிஅநதக்கோடி ரூபாய்க்குடும்முனது னாயளசம்பாத்தியம் நகைவகையளயாணு
 திரைசகலமுமக்கோடி ரூபாய்க்கிவினைக்காடடிக்கொடுத்தார்கள் இதைவாங்கிக்கொண்டு
 சந்தர்சாயபு கோட்டைக்குள்ளே போய அவர்களுக்குக்குமக்காக இறங்கி னர்வங்காரு
 திருமலைநாயக்கரினி மேலிருநதால நமக்கு மோசம் வருமென்று வெளியேறி மதுரைக்
 குவரது மதுரை திருநெல் வெலித்திணடுக்கலலிநதமட்டுச சீமைததம் மிடவசமாக ஆண
 மிகொண்டிருக்கையில அப்போது சந்தர்சாயபு மீனாச்சி அம்மா னாட மனுசகைகோலி
 நத அயயன ராவணயயனுக்குத்தள கறதப்பிறதானிக்கங் கொடுத்தது என்னுயிர்வ குதிரை
 யுங்கூட்டிச்சிறு துதளமுங்கூட்டியனுப்பிவிசுசத்திணடுகலலுமேலே வநது யிறங்கிஅந
 தக்கோட்டையும் வாங்கிக்கொண்டு மதுரைமேலேவர் வேணுமென்றுயிருக்கையிலவந
 கார் திருமலைநாயக்கர்முததுவெங்குடயயனுக்குத்தள கறதப்பிரதானிக்கங் கொடுத்தது
 ரொண்டாயிர்வகுதிரையுஞ்சிறு துதளததுடனே அம்மைய நாயக்கர் பாணியப்படடிவே
 போயிர்வகிராவணயயன கோலிநதயயன பேரிலச சண்டைபண்ணச சொல்லிசண்டை
 யானதிலவர் பெண்ணுயிர்வ குதிரையும் வெகு தளமுமானதினாலே முதது வெங்கிடயய
 னதளம்கொஞ்சமானதினாலே இநததளமடிபட்டுமுததுவெங்கிடயயன அலுதாவை
 வநது சுத்திக்கொண்டார்கள் அலுதாவிலிருநது கொண்டு தம்மிடத்திலிருநத அம்பெல
 லாம்பெயது வெகு குதிரைவகைக்கும்ச சேதப்படுத்தி விசுசமுததுவெங்கிடயயன தெ
 வீகமாயப் போனார் அப்போது மதுரைமேலே பாணியம் வநதிதுவங்காரு திருமலைநா
 யக்கருக்குத்தள மிலலாததினாலே மதுரையைவிட்டு உடையாத தேவர் சீமைசிவகெங்கை power. He reigned from Paritabi year down to Prabava year, being sixteen years, or S.S. 1610 (A.D. 1688). Choka-Natha-Naicker had adopted a Mahomedan youth, named Rustam-Khan, and having brought him up with care, he confided to him a situation of power. The relatives of the young man patronized and greatly distinguished the Mahomedans: the defences of the fort, with the fort itself, were entirely intrusted to these persons; and, under these circumstances, Rustam confined the king to his palace, putting a guard over him to prevent his leaving it; and then usurped the whole country. The king, Choka-Natha-Naicker, hereupon wrote a letter to the Sethopathi, then named Kilaven. As soon as the letter was delivered to him, the Sethopathi assembled twenty thousand troops; came, and killing Rustam-Khan, cut off his head; scattered and slaughtered the adherents of the latter; and then sent Rustam's head to the king. Immediately the king came forth, and bestowed every mark of attention on Kilaven-Sethopathi; sending him back to Ramnad. Choka-Natha-Naicker lived a little while after this event, and then died.

His son, Ranga-Kistna-Mutthu-Virapa-Naicker, was crowned; and the son of Cumara-Tirumali-Naicker, named Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker, was his second in power. The former reigned seven years, from Viba year down to Bava year, or S. S. 1617 (A.D. 1695).

After him his son, Vijiu-Ranga-Choka-Natha-Naicker, came to the throne by right; but was a child of only three months old. In consequence his grandmother, (his father's mother,) Mangamala, as regent, conducted the affairs of her grandson's kingdom for eighteen years.

SECTION 11.—Mangamala, during her regency, erects buildings, constructs roads, and plants avenues; and becomes celebrated for these and other charities—Vijia-Ranga-Naicker succeeds on his coming of age—he endows Seringham and other pagodas—reigns nineteen years.

During her regency, Mangamala had many agraras, temples, and choultries built. But one day, while eating beetle-leaf and areca-nut, she forgetfully took the same with

க்கிவ ததார் உடையாத தேவொதிர்க்கொணடுவந துக்கூட்டிப்போயவெளளிக் கு நிச்சி
 யும்சிறு துகிராமங்களும் விடமிக்குமெது அவுடத்திலிருநததார்களராவனையன கோவிந
 தபயனதிருநெலவெலிச்சீமைவகைக்கும்பாணையப்பட்டுகளச்சீமையனஞ் சுவாநீனப்
 படுததிக்கொணடுதிருச்சினுப்பளளிக்கிவததார்களசீமையெலலாம்பந துமஷத துவான
 'படியினுலே மீனாட்சியம்மாளை அர்மணையச்சுததிப் பாராவைத துக்கோட்டை யெல
 லாநதம்முடசன ததைப்பாரா வைததுபத்திரீம்பணணிமீனாட்சியம்மாள் வகைச்சனமு
 ம்அவர்கள அண்ணனதம்பிமாராயுங்கோட்டைக்கிவெளியேபோகச்சொனனார்களமீ
 னாட்சியம்மாளும்வங்காருதிருமலைநாயக்கரும்பரிதாபி- (ஸ்ரீ) - முதலநள- (ஸ்ரீ) - வரைக்
 கும்அஞ்சுவரிசம்ராச்சியமாண்டார்கள்அப்போசாலிவாகனசகாந்தம்- தக்ராநுயிக-அ
 தின்பிறகுமீனாட்சியம்மாளும்தெயலீகமாகப்போனுவங்காருதிருமலைநாயக்கர்ச்சிவ
 கெவகையிலிருந துப்புனாச்சாததாருக்குமராட்டியாருக்குகாகிதமெனாதி அனுப்பிவிச்
 சார்களஅவடத்திலிருந துபத்தேதின்குரகொகிகொசலாவும்அ துபதினாயிரங்குதிரையுமீ
 திரிச்சினுப்பளளிக்கோட்டையைச்சுததியிறங்கிசிறு துனாசசனடைபணணிசநதாசா
 யபுதம்பிவடையையையுமீஅதம்பணணிசநதாசாயபையுமீபிடித துக் கொணடுமுராநி
 ராயரைக்கோட்டையிலேவைத துவங்காருதிருமலைநாயக்காவர்வளை ததுபட்டங்கடடி
 ச்சீமை அவர்வனகொடுத துபட்டக்காணிக்கைமுப்பது லெட்சம்ரூபாயவாங்கிக்கொ
 ணடுமுராரிராயரையிருந துவர்சொசாலிசிறு துகுதிரையுமீவைத துப் போட்டிபத்தே
 சிவங்கொகிபொசலாஇவர்களசீமைக்கிப்போயவிட்டார்எளபிவகன - (ஸ்ரீ) - முதலகால
 புததி - (ஸ்ரீ) - வரைக்கும்அப்போதுசகாந்தம் - தக்ராநுயிக - முராரிராயர்வங்காருதிரு
 மலைநாயக்கைக்கூட்டிக்கொணடுவர்சொலவிடையாத தேவருக்குக்காகிதம்வநதிது
 இவர்களும்பயணம் போகவேனுமெனறயிருக்கையில் அயதராபாதரிவிருந துநிசாம்

her left hand. Considering the taking this indulgence with the left hand to be a serious crime, in order to remove its consequences, she constructed roads, with avenues of trees, from Casi, to Ramiseram, to Canya-Cumari (Cape Comorin), and to other places; and, on the same account, had terpa-kulams (or reservoirs) dug, choultries built, and water-booths constructed: she gave away food, and performed other charities; so that her name became renowned to a great distance; and thus, from Iva year down to Nandana year, or S. S. 1635 (A. D. 1713), being eighteen years, she governed the kingdom. Afterwards, the grandson of Mungamala, the before-mentioned Vijia-Ranga-Choka-Natha-Naicker, ruled from Vijeya year down to Virothikirathi year, S. S. 1654 (A. D. 1732), or nineteen years. He gave many rich jewels to Srirangham; endowed it with many tithe-lands; and made many like presents to many other sacred places. He also became deified.

SECTION 12.—A disputed succession—Minatchi-Ammal writes to Chunda-Saheb, and Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker to the Nabob of Arcot—who adjusts the difference—and returns to Arcot, leaving the completing of the settlement to the care of Chunda-Saheb.

As he left no children, Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker, (before-mentioned as second in power to Ranga-Kistna-Mutthu.) being the rightful heir to the throne, was opposed by Minatchi-Ammal, (the widow of Vijia-Ranga.) who proposed to Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker, to adopt his son as her own; to whom the crown should devolve on his coming to maturity, leaving her, in the interim, regent and guardian. He replied, “I will assume the crown myself, and after me let my son reign.” He did so, not giving her his son, but assuming the power to himself. He resided in a new palace; and all the usual dependants on the court and authorities of the capital were joined with Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker. With Minatchi-Ammal remained her elder and younger brothers, and her own immediate retainers. The power of the kingdom, with all exercise of authority, was with Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker; while the money, the treasure, jewels of sorts, and the like, remained in the palace, and in the possession of Minatchi-Ammal.

அசவுசாசாயபு லட்சம் குதிரையுடனே வந்து திருச்சி ரூப்பளளிமேலே யிறங்கிச்சுண
 டைபண்ணிக்கோடடையுங் கவிலமேலே அசவுசாசாயபு அவர்களவசம்விட்டுப் போட
 மிப்போனார்கள் அததமுன்னுக்கு வங்காருதிருமலைநாயக்கர் நிசான அசவுசாசாயபுபே
 டடிபண்ணிவிசுக்கொண்டு சீமாசார்மெலலாருசொன்னதில அவர்கேட்டுயிறதராசசி
 யத்துக்குப்பட்டத்துக்குஉடையவொன்று நனரூயவிசாரித்துப்பட்டத்துக்காணிக்கை
 முப்பத்துலசம்ரூபாய்கொடுக்கசொலவிக் கேட்டார்பொக்கிப்புண்டார் மெலலாஞ்சீந
 தாசாயபுவாங்கிக்கொண்டாரிப்போதுநானெப்படிச்செலுத்துவேனென்று இதுவெ
 லலாம்பீரங்களை நனரூய விசாரித்திருப்பியள உங்களுக்குத் தெரியாததுகரு நாமென்கு
 செய்ப்போரோமென்று சொன்னார்கள் ஆனால் எப்படிக்கொடுப்பீரென்று கேட்டதற
 கு-ஹுக - க்கு - ய - லட்சம் ரூபாயவீதம், ஈஹு - ததிலே - ஈய - லட்சம் ரூபாயுங்கொ
 டித்துவருகிறோமென்று சொன்னார் அததப்படிக்கி அவரிடத்திலகையெழுத்துவாங்கி
 கடுகாணுகூடவேகூடக்கொண்டு ஆர்க்காட்டுக்குப்போயநவாபுதகப்பனார் அனவா
 துகானவாபுகரு ஆறக்காட்டுச்சபாவுங் கொடுத்தபங்காருதிருமலைநாயக்கர் கையைப்
 பிடித்து நபாபு அனவா துகான கையிலக கொடுத்தது இவரும் திருச்சி ரூப்பளளிக கிப்
 போயமுப்பது லட்சம் ரூபாயும் மூணுவரிச்சத்திலவாங்கிக்கொள்ளச் சொல்லியுமா மூல
 ப்படிகரு வரிச்சதுகருமூனுலெ லட்சம் ரூபாயவாங்கிக்கொள்ளச் சொல்லியும் உததாரம்
 பண்ணி அசவுசாசாயபு அயதார்பா தருக்குப் போனார்கள் நபாபு அனவா துகானபங்கா
 ருதிருமலைநாயக்கருக்கு தினப்படிநூறுவிராகனும் அவர்குமார்னவிசையகுமார்முதது
 திருமலைகுயக்கருக்கு நூறுரூபாயும் வீதம்படிக்கொடுத்ததுவது ஆறக்காட்டுச்சீமைபா
 னாயகாரர் சமஷித தானங்களை அவர்வரமேலப்பாளைய யிறங்கித்தோப்பாப் பணத்துகரு
 வளிபண்ணிச்சீமைபத்துவலத்துப்பண்ணிவிச்சுப் போட்டுவந்து திருச்சி ரூப்பளளியி

Matters being so situated, Minatchi-Ammal wrote to Sandai-Sahib (Chunda-Saheb) for assistance. Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker, hearing of her having done so, wrote to the Nabob Sabder-Ali-Khan; the Nabob Sabder-Ali-Khan, and Sandai-Sahib, came, accompanied by ten thousand cavalry, and encamped on the outside of the fort of Trichinopoly. Thereupon Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker sought an interview with the Nabob Sabder-Ali-Khan, at which he unfolded the whole of his affairs. In consequence, the Nabob Sabder-Ali-Khan summoned all the persons connected with the (Madura) government to appear before him; and inquired into ancient law and custom. As a result, he decided to the following purport—that the fort and kingdom belonged, not to Minatchi, with her elder and younger brothers and people, seeing that she had no male child, but belonged to Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker—that whatever allowances or privileges were granted by the king, Vijiu-Ranga-Choka-Natha-Naicker, to his rani, (or queen,) to her brothers, and the people dependent on her, the same should be still continued—that the queen's various jewels, and personal property, should be delivered over to her; but the public treasure in the palace, elephants and horses, and all the jewels connected with the caparison and furniture of the same, should be given over to Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker. Besides he ordered that thirty lacs (or three millions) of rupees should be paid, by fixed instalments, as an acknowledgment for the award of the crown; took a written agreement, or bond, from Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker, promising its due payment at the stipulated periods; and gave it in charge to Chunda-Saheb to see this agreement fulfilled. After which Nabob Sabder-Ali-Khan returned to Arcot.

SECTION — Minatchi-Ammal bribes Chunda-Saheb—who enters Trichinopoly, ostensibly on her behalf, and sends an army against Dindigul, which is taken—Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker, who had retired to Madura, sends an inferior force, which is beaten, and its commander killed—Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker retires to Shevagunga—Chunda-Saheb imprisons Minatchi-Ammal, and turns her relatives and people out of the fort of Trichinopoly.

When he had gone away, Minatchi-Ammal, with her elder and younger brothers,

லப்பட்டவகடடிச்சீமைஉங்களுவச்சம்பண்ணிவருகிறோமென்றுதொல்லிவைத்துக்கொ
 ண்டிருந்தார்களதுப்படியிருக்கையில்வங்காருநிருமலைநாயகக்காலஞ்சென்றுபோன
 ர்அவர்குமார்னவியசையகுமாருமுதலுத திருமலைநாயகக்கர் தகப்பனருக்குக்கருமாநதிர்
 ங்களபண்ணுகிறதற்குத்தாயார்பததுசனங்களிவகெங்கைச்சீமையிலவெள்ளிகுறிச்சி
 யிலிருந்தார்களான்படியினாலே அவருக்குக்கருமாநதிர்மற்றதுசெய்யவேண்டியதற்கு
 ததாயாரும்சீமுசார்மவததுசனங்களிந்தச்சீமையிலிருந்தபடியினாலே அவடதுக்குப்
 போயஅவர்களைவைத்துக்கொண்டு கறமாதியள செய்ய வேணு மென்று நவாபுடனே
 சொன்னதற்குநவாபுஅனவாதுகானபதியுயிர்மீருபாயசிலவுக்குக்குறித்துகருமாநிம
 மற்றதும்பண்ணிவிச்சுஇவடதுக்குவாரும்அதற்குஉள்ளாகச்சீமைபறதுப்பலித்ததுப்ப
 ணணித்திருச்சினுப்பள்ளிக்ருவநதுஉமாகுப்பட்டவகடடிவைக்கிறோமென்றுஅனுப்
 பிவிச்சார்அந்தப்பிறகாறத்துக்குஇவடத்திலவநதுசெய்யவேண்டியகறமாதியுஞ்செய
 துவியசையகுமாருமுதலுத திருமலையுயக்கருக்கும்இவடத்திலிருக்கிறபததுசனங்களுக்
 கும்உடையாததேவர்க்கலியாணம்பெய்ததனம்பண்ணிச்செய்தார்கள்இதுயாரியத்துக்
 கச்சின்றுதுநாளத்தாமசமாயப்போயவிட்டுதுஅந்நிபிறகுஇவரும்பயணத்துக்குத்த
 யார்ப்பண்ணிக்கொண்டிருக்கிறவரையிலவடக்கேயிருந்துயினுயிதுமோநினிகானவந
 துஆறக்காட்டுச்சுபாமேலையிறங்கிசந்தாசாயபுகூடவேவந்துஅதிலேசண்டையாப்ப
 வர்புஅனவாதுகானசண்டையிலிறததுபோயநவாபுமம்முதலிகானவநதுதிருச்சினுப்
 பள்ளிவநதுசேததார்ப்போயினுயிதுமோநினிகானுப்புதுசேசரிக்குப்போயபவிர
 கக்காராசசேகரித்துக்கொண்டுவநதுஆறக்காட்டுச்சுபாகடடிக் கொண்டார்கள்இறத
 ப்படிகக்கிலாபமாயிருந்தபடியினாலேப்பயணமாயிருந்தவியசையகுமாருமுதலுததிரு
 மலையுயக்கர்வெள்ளிகுறிச்சியிலிருந்துவிட்டார்கள்அப்பால்சென்றுதுணைக்கப்பிறகு consulted together, and made a promise to Chunda-Sahab that they would give him a crore of rupees (or ten millions). He, in consequence, was brought over to their cause; and put off Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker, till to-morrow, next day, and so on, by false excuses, so as not to deliver the kingdom over to him; and conducting the elder brother of Minatchi-Ammal, who was named Venkata-Perumal-Naicker, to the Dalavayi-mandabam, (or choultry,) on the banks of the Cauvery river, he there took an oath, engaging to deliver up the kingdom to this party; and called for a crore of rupees to be given to him: in consequence the party of Minatchi gave up to Chunda-Sahab, in pledge for the payment of the crore of rupees, all the jewels, elephants, horses, and property which had been amassed by former kings of Madura; specifying to Chunda-Sahab the value of each. Having received these valuables, Chunda-Sahab publicly went over to their side of the question, and entering with his troops into the fort (of Trichinopoly), took possession of it on their behalf. Upon this circumstance occurring, Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker considered himself no longer safe: and, quitting the place, proceeded to Madura. While he was ruling over that portion of the kingdom which pertained to Madura, Dindigul, and Tinnevelly, Chunda-Sahab assembled some forces, and gave command of eight thousand cavalry and some infantry to two of Minatchi's people, named Govindaiyen and Ravanaiyen; dispatching them from Trichinopoly: these came and sat down before Dindigul, and took it. Having done so, they threatened Madura; whereupon Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker gave the office of his general to Mutthu-Vengadaiyen, and with it two thousand cavalry, with some infantry, bidding him take them to Ammiya-Naicker's palliyam, (or district,) and there encamping to give battle to Ravanaiyen and Govindaiyen. They engaged in battle in consequence: when, as the invading party had eight thousand cavalry, and otherwise a great force, while Mutthu-Vengadaiyen's army was small, the latter was beaten; and Mutthu-Vengadaiyen in his howdah was surrounded, and from his howdah he discharged all the arrows he had, so that many of the enemy's cavalry fell; but he at length was deified (killed in his howdah). The victorious army now came against Madura; and, as Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker had no forces, he evacuated the capital, and went to Sivaganga, the chief town in the country of Udiyan-dever, who came forth to meet him; and then escorted him, giving up to him Vellei-curchi, and some

ததிருசசி னுப்பளளிமேலேசநதாசாயபும்பிராஞ்சுகாரரும் வநதுகோடடையைசசு
ததிக கொணமி சண்டை பண்ணி னுர்கள் அப்போ சநதா சாயபுவகை ஆலமுகான வநது
மதுகைகோடடையுங்கடடிவீசுகதிரு நெலவெலிசசீமையுங்கடடி திருநெலவெலியில
நவிகா னும்மதுகையில மநதிமியாவையும் நேமுகம்பண்ணி விசசுபோட்டு ஆலமுகான
மதுபடியும்சநதாசாயபுஇடத்திலததிருசசி னுப்பளளிகுப்போயவிட்டார் அவர்போ
னவிடத்திலப்பீர்வகிகுண்பிபட்டு ஆலமுகானவினாநதுபோன ஆலமுகான அப்போ
சிததராத்தி - (ஸ்)-முதலபிறசொபதி - (ஸ்)-வகைகும் - (ஸ்)யிகு - சகா ததம் - தசாநயச
வினாநதுப்போன சமாசார்ம்மநதிமியாவுந்நபீர்கா னுங்கேட்டுஇவர்கள் கொணமிபேரு
மாயராமனாத்தபுந்ததுகுவநதுவெளையனசேருவைகாறாயுங்கடடிகொணமிசிவ
கெயகைதாண்டரூபபிளையையுஞ்சேகரித்ததுகொணமிவெளளிககுறிச்சியிலிருக்கிற
ராசவிசையகுமாறுமுததுதிருமலைநாயகந்நவர்க்களையும் மதுகையிலககடடிகொணமி
போயஆவலே - (ஸ்)மார்களின் - பட்டங்கடடிவைததுமநதிமியாவையும் நபீர்கானபு
மிநதராசாவிடத்திலஅவர்களசேவுசமாயபவுச தாரிகளாகஇருந்தார்கள்அப்போதுஅ
னகப்பமுதலியாருக்குதளகதமுதல முததியாயும் போட்டுதளவாயமுதலியாொன்று
பேர்கொடுத்தார்கள் அதினபிறகு திருநெலவெலிசசீர்மைக்கி அனுப்பிவிசசார்களன்று
முதலததளவாயமுதலியாொன்று திருநெலவெலிசசீமையிலப் பட்டப்பேராக அநதமரி
யாத்தமஇன்ன நடநதுவருகுது இப்படிக்கிசுதுது னுளமதுகையிலததுகை ததனமாகஇ
ருந்ததில மம்மதுகானமயானுமநதிமியாவுக்குபெண்கலியாணம் பண்ணிககும்ததும
ம்மதுகானமயானுமநதிமியாவுக்குப்போதித்தது ராசாவைகொணமிவநது பட்டங்க
ட்டிவசசீரேசீமைபெல்லாம்நாமேதுகையாகவிருநதுஆணமிகொணமிவாரதுபோயஇ
நதராசாவுக்குகீளேறாம்சேவுக்குகசேவித்ததுக கொணமிருந்தாலதமக்கு பென்ன connected villages, for his maintenance; and he there resided. Ravanaiyen and Goviindniyen having conquered and taken possession of the country as far as to Tinnevelley, including also the intermediate palliyams, returned to Trichinopoly. The country being thus reduced, Chunda-Saheb shut up Minatchi-Ammal a prisoner in the palace, around which he placed guards, and gave the charge of the fort entirely to his own people; thus securing it to himself. He next told the people of Minatchi, with her elder and younger brothers, to depart out of the fort.

Thus Minatchi-Ammal and Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker reigned together five years, from Paritabi year down to Nala year, or S.S. 1659 (A. D. 1737), after which Minatchi-Ammal was deified (or died).

SECTION 14.—Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker calls in the aid of the Mahrattas—these take Chunda-Saheb prisoner, and place Murari-Rayer in charge of Trichinopoly—whose intention of reinstating Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker is prevented by the coming of the Nizam—to whom the fort is yielded up—he carries Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker to Arcot, leaving instructions for his being reinstated.

Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker, while residing in Sivaganga (Shevagunga), wrote a letter to the Marattas at Puna-sattara (Poona), and in consequence the chiefs, Butteh-Singh and Ragoji-Kosala, came with sixty thousand cavalry, and, surrounding Trichinopoly, encamped before it, and fought for some time; during which they slew Badei-Saheb, the younger brother of Chunda-Saheb, took Chunda-Saheb prisoner, and placed Murari-rayer (Morari-row) in charge of the fort; instructing him to send and call Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker hither, to crown him, and give the country over to him; appointing an acknowledgment for the crown of thirty lacs of rupees, to be paid to Murari-rayer, whom they ordered to remain in charge with a small force of cavalry; and then Butteh-Singh and Ragoji-Bosala returned to their own country. These things occurred from Pingala year down to Kaliyutti year, (two years,) being S.S. 1661 (A. D. 1739).

Murari-rayer wrote a letter to Udaiya-dever, bidding him bring Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker along with himself. While these were preparing to set out on the journey,

காரியங்கூடிவர்ப்போகிதுநாளுக்குநாளாயவர்களஞ்சுநதுபோவார்கள நாம்மெலிநது
போவொமெனறுசொனனூர்களஅதற்குமநதியாசம்மதிப்படாமலச்சீமைக்கிராசா
வாசியவர்களைததளளி நாமிருநதாலநமக்குநிலலாதுபாாமபரியமாகததெசாதிபதியா
னதுநாலேயும்தெச்சணம்சிங்காச்சுதிபதியானதினாலேயும்அவருக்குத்தகுமேதவர
, நமக்குஒருநாளுங்கூடிவராதெனறுசொனனூர்அநதமயானுவும்பததுபேர்அவர்களை
சசெநதசீமையதராவர்களையும்ச்சேகரிததுக்குருக்களையுஞ்சேகரிததுனா விளம்பத
திலப்போதிக்கப்பட்டுப்போதினையளாலேஅவரும்உளப்பட்டுததுகாயைஅவகடகம்ப
ணணிததானகடடிககொள்ளவேணுமெனறுஇவர்களஆலோசனைபணணிநூர்களஇது
செய்திவெளியையுஞ்சேருவைகாறனும்தாண்டவராயபிள்ளையுமநிறதுநாங்கள்சும்மா
இருநதபேர்களைநீதானேவலியவநதுளங்களையும்ராசாவையுங்கூடடிககொண்டுபோ
யப்பட்டங்கடடிகவைததுஅவர்களஇடத்திலச்சீமையதாரர்களாகச்சேவுகமாகஇருக்கு
மெனறுசொல்லநாங்களும்நீங்களுமாகப்பட்டங்கடடிகளுக்களைததானேநம்புதலாக
ராசாவையும்ஒங்கவசமாகவிட்டுப்போட்டுப்போனதினபிறப்பாடுநாங்களநம்புத
லாகராசாவைஉங்களவசம்பணணிவிச்சுப்போட்டுப்போனஇடத்திலஇப்போமோச
ம்பண்ணுகிறதாயநினைக்கலாமாயெனறுநீங்கள்கோட்டைவிட்டுப்போங்கோவெனற
திலஇவர்களஇருபேரும்தெறபக்குளத்திலிறங்கிக்கொண்டுமநதியிபாவைவெளியிலே
போகச்சொன்னதிலிவர்களிருவகையிலும்வெஞ்சணடைநடநதுொம்பவுஞ்சேதபா
தங்களாயஉபத்திரியம்வநதுதுராசாவிசையகுமார்முததுததிருமலைநாயக்கர்வர்களநீ
ங்கள்ஒன்றுக்கொன்றுலாவநட்டங்களவருவானேனநமக்குநலலகாலம்கூடிவரும்அப்
போதுவடக்கேயிருநதுநனநீதியுள்ளபிறபுகளாயவருவார்களஅப்போதுபூதுவீகத்
தைவிசாரிததுநம்மிடராச்சியம்நமக்குக்குடுததுநமக்குப்பட்டமுங்கடடிகவைப்பார்க

the Nizam of Hyderabad, Asuph-Sahib, came to Trichinopoly with a hundred thousand cavalry; and, encamping before it, fought against it; when (the Marattas) delivered up the place by capitulation to the Nizam Asuph-Sahib. At that time Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker had an interview with the Nizam Asuph-Sahib, and narrated to him all the circumstances of his case, who heard the whole; and fully investigating into the rightful claimant, assigned to him the kingdom, on condition of paying the stipulated acknowledgment of thirty lacs of rupees. (Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker) said, "The whole of the treasure went to Chunda-Saheb, how shall I be able to make the payment good? besides you have thoroughly investigated into all the circumstances of the case; and how can I tell you any thing which you do not know?" The Nizam inquired, "how will you give it?" (or, what arrangement do you propose?) He replied, "I will give at the rate of ten lacs yearly, and so pay up the whole in three years." In accordance with this proposition, the Nizam required from him a written agreement, and then took Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker along with himself to Arcot; where he gave the Subah (or rather Nabobship) to Anavarda-Khan; then taking the hand of Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker he put it into the hand of Anavarda-Khan, and bid the latter go to Trichinopoly, there to receive thirty lacs of rupees in the course of three years, by annual instalments of three (ten ?) lacs. After leaving these instructions, Asuph-Sahib returned to Hyderabad.

SECTION 15.—Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker is kept at Arcot as a stipendiary—dies at Arcot—his son, Vijia-Cumara, goes to Velleicurchi—is married there, and hindered from returning by the irruption of Murzafa-jing and Chunda-Saheb into the Carnatic—who overthrow and slay Anavarda-Khan in battle—Mahomed-Ali retires to Trichinopoly.

The Nabob, Anavarda-Khan, appointed a daily allowance to Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker of one hundred pagodas (350 rupees), and to his son, Vijia-Cumara-Mutthu-Tirumali-Naicker a stipend of a hundred rupees, each day. Besides, he promised Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker that he would assemble the chiefs of the Arcot district, with their forces; and, with the aid of these, would go and reduce into order the எ அப்படியாகக்கொத்த பேர்செயலிச்சால நமக்குச்சாருதமாய நடக்கும் ஒதுகளாலே

 செயப்படாத ஊரியம்மா னதினாலே நமக்குஇஞ்சேவிருகருததருச்சம்மதமிலை நம்
 மாலேநீங்கள்சண்டைபண்ணவேண்டா மென றுஉடனேபிறப்பட்டு ஸ்ரீமத - ஸ்ரீமத
 ஸ்ரீ - வெள்ளிகுறிச்சிவ நதுசேநதார்கள அவர்கள் குமாரரரசவிகுவ ருத ருபகர்யபாவ
 ர்களகுமாரரிப்போ து இருக்கிறவர்கள் வங்காரு திருமலை ருபகர்யபாவர்களும் விசைப்
 குமார்முத துதிருமலை ருபகர்யவர்களும் வெள்ளிகுறிச்சியிவ்ருகருதர்கள்.

Madura country, collecting the revenue there due: and then, returning to Trichinopoly, would crown him, and afterwards deliver over to him the kingdom. But during this delay, Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker's time was accomplished.

His son, Vijia-Cumara-Mutthu-Tirumali-Naicker, represented to the Nabob, that the mother and relatives of his deceased father were at Velleicurchi in the Sivaganga district, and that it would, in consequence, be needful for him to go thither, to assemble the mother, family, and relatives of the deceased; and with them to perform the last solemn obsequies on account of the departed. The Nabob Anavarda-Khan thereupon presented him with ten thousand rupees, and giving him leave to go and perform the Karmandiram,* enjoined him afterwards to return to Arcot; and meantime engaged to go and settle the concerns of the Madura country, and then, returning to Trichinopoly, to crown him; and with these promises he gave him leave to depart. He accordingly came hither, and performed the usual ceremonies; and these being accomplished, Udiya-dever brought about his marriage to one among his own relatives. On account of this circumstance a delay for some time occurred.

Afterwards, when he was about preparing to journey (to Arcot), Inayithu-Mothin-Khan (Hidayet-mohy-u'din, or Murzafa-jing) came from the north, in company with Chunda-Saheb, and making a descent on the Arcot country, engaged in battle with Anavarda-Khan, who fell in the contest. The Nabob Mahomed-Ali (his son) retreated to Trichinopoly, where he safely arrived. Thereupon Inayithu-Mothin-Khan proceeded to Puthucheri (Pondichery), and joining in alliance with the French people, conquered the Soubah of Arcot. In consequence of this revolutionary state of things, Vijia-Cumara-Mutthu-Tirumali-Naicker did not remove, but continued to reside at Velleicurchi.

* Karmandiram is the close of the sradha or funeral rites: in the case of Bramins, on the twelfth day; in the case of others, on the sixteenth day after the decease; unless great distance of relatives should make further extension needful. Some ceremonies take place during every day of this period, but the twelfth or sixteenth day is solemn and final.

SECTION 16.—Aluma-Khan takes Madura—is killed at Trichinopoly—his two deputies give a nominal sovereignty to Vijia-Cumara—the nabob Mahomed-Ali intrigues with the deputies—the attempt to depose the king produces an affray—the king forbids it, and abdicating the throne retires to Velleicurchi, where his descendants reside.

Sometime afterwards Chunda-Saheb, together with the French people, came to Trichinopoly, and besieged it. Then Aluma-Khan, on the side of Chunda-Saheb, came and took the fort of Madura, and thence proceeded and subdued the Tinnevelley country; and appointed Nabir-Khan at Tinnevelley, and Mantimiya at Madura, as lieutenants, or governors. After doing so, Aluma-Khan returned to Chunda-Saheb at Trichinopoly. Immediately after his arrival he was struck with a cannon shot, and killed. The death of Aluma-Khan happened S.S. 1674 (A. D. 1752), being from (the last-mentioned date, p. 43, or) Sittartari year down to Prajotpathi year, thirteen years.

On the news of his death coming to be heard by Mantimiya and Nabir-Khan, these two persons came to Ramanatha-puram (Ramnad), and taking Velleiyen-Servai-caren with them, proceeded to Sivaganga, where they united with Tandavarayapillay; and the whole of these persons carried Vijia-Cumara-Mutthu-Tirumali-Naicker to Madura, and there, in the month Masi of Angila year, they had him crowned; while Mantimiya and Nabir-Khan were under him as servants, and fouzdaris (or military commandants). Then Alagappen-Muthaliar was invested, by them, with the office of Dalagarten (or generalissimo); and the seals of this office being confided to him, he received the title of Dalavayi-Muthaliar. They then sent him into the Tinnevelley country. From that time first the title of Dalavayi-Muthaliar, as an honorary and royal appellation, continues to the present period.

Thus for sometime the government was conducted in Madura: when Mahomed-Khan gave to Mayana-Mantimiya a female in marriage; and afterwards tampered with him, and spoke with him thus—"So you brought the king and crowned him, notwithstanding that the whole country was mine, and was regularly conducted under my administration; now, if I submit myself to this king, and act as his servant, what advantage will arise thence to us? (தமக்கு, including the person spoken to). Day by day they will increase, and we in proportion shall be diminished." But Mantimiya did not assent to this counsel: he replied, "If we eject the king from the country, the kingdom will not remain with us: as he is by ancient usage the ruler of the country, and the only recognized enthroned king of the south, to him alone the authority can be stable; but to us it could not be assured for a single day." Mahomed-Khan, however, daily more and more directly, held intercourse of this sort with that Mayana, with ten jemadar's belonging to him, and also with the gurus; and by force of counsel he (Mayana-Mantimiya) was at length brought over to the design; and they all consulted together how best to dethrone the ruler, and to assume his crown. Intelligence of these proceedings coming to the knowledge of Velleiye-Servai-caren and Tandavaraya-pillay, they said (to Mantimiya and Nabir-Khan), "Heretofore, when we were quiet, you came, and by strong persuasion took us along with you, as well as the king, and crowning him, represented yourselves simply as jemadars in his service; and so we and you unitedly crowned the king, and then, confiding in you, we left the king to your care; after which, while we continued to leave you in charge of the king's welfare, can we now believe that you are capable of treachery?—but depart out of the fort." Disputing together (as they went out), both parties halted at the terpa-kulam (tank); where, by reason of their ordering Mantimiya to depart, a fierce fight ensued between both parties; a great slaughter took place, and much disturbance arose.

The king, Vijia-Cumara-Mutthu-Tirumali-Naicker, addressed both sides thus, "Why does this disturbance and loss arise between you; another day better times will befall us (the king), and then equitable rulers will come from the north: these, inquiring into the ancient rule and claims of right, will crown us; and when such persons do this, our rule will be stable; but as you cannot do this for us, we no longer consent to remain here. Fight not between yourselves on our account." Saying thus, he forthwith set out; and in Adi month of Strimugam year he came to Velleicurchi. His son was Raja-Visvanatha-Naicker-Ayeravercal, whose sons are now alive: that is to say, Vangaru-Tirumali-Naicker-avercal, and Vijia-Cumara-Mutthu-Tirumali-Naicker-avercal. These are living at Velleicurchi.

THE PANDION CHRONICLE, SUPPLEMENTARY MANUSCRIPT, AND CARNATAKA DYNASTY, CONNECTED.

In the first volume we brought our inquiries downwards, by as cautious a deduction as circumstances would permit, to the eras of Vicramaditya and Salivahana. The fixing of the contemporary and preceding rulers of the Pandiya-mandalam, was decided chiefly from indications afforded by the Manuscripts themselves; but without possessing a full conviction that, in every case, the indication could be depended upon: still an approximation, more or less near, to precision has been effected. The very obscure portion of all native history which relates to the seven dynasties of foreigners, from the Abhiras down to the Maulas or Mavunals, is hardly capable now of satisfactory elucidation; but the period we came to was that of Soma-Suntira-Pandion; who is said to have driven these strangers away and to have ruled twenty years. This circumstance, if we admit it to be historical, must have occurred at a period considerably posterior to the commencement either of the Christian era, or that of Salivahana; but how long subsequent, it would be difficult, if not impossible, to say. Should the parallels and coincidences marked be nearly accurate, then there must be a very considerable chasm about the period indicated for the ascendancy of these foreigners; and we might fix Somasuntira some where in the seventh or eighth century; and some vestiges of the Kadamba family ruling over a part of the Malayalim country, wherein also these foreigners are said to have acquired an ascendancy, would induce us to suppose that some such period is not far from the truth: the matter will however come under further notice with a reference to the Kadamba dynasty.

But before we come to so comparatively recent a period, there is a considerable field open to research in other portions of the Peninsula; even from some time subsequent to the decay of the Magadha kingdom down to the tenth or fourteenth century. Our professed object would not demand any discursive inquiries beyond the immediate range of the Pandion kingdom, with some notices of its immediate neighbours; but a general survey of the whole field is interesting; it tends to illustrate the leading subject; may lead to future discoveries; and has been but little treated on, having by some been regarded as a total void; while yet materials do exist for fixing dynasties, sovereigns, and some events, with very tolerable accuracy; approaching often, in the matter of inscriptions, to a degree bordering on certainty.

Next to the Mugadha empire of Behar, various indices point to Calinga, or that portion of Telingana situated on the sea coast, near the Godavery river. The Ougein or Malwa monarchy, was probably contemporary with this, and has been made considerably more the subject of heroic fiction and fable; but this has not been left without sufficient notice to tell us that such a kingdom once was, and was also, in its day, illustrious; and with slight changes of locality, it was the motherland of various subsequent powers, till finally merged in the Mahomedan principality of Golconda.

Sir W. Jones gathered from the Puranas, through the help of his Pandit, that the city of Cilacila, supposed by him to be the country of the Maharashtras or Mahrattas, was once the seat of power: where five persons reigned, who were called Bhumanda, Bingira, Sisunandi, Yasonandi, and Praviraca, who occupied a period of one hundred and six years; after which the kingdom became the prey of barbarians. The Pandion Chronicle, probably from the like Pauranic source, says, that after the Mavunals were gone, one of the Kainguilan race, from among the Yemansals; ruled in the town called Kinguili, whose name was Vinthisaren; after whom, Puranjeyan, and some other kings, ruled down to Piraviren. As this last name is, without doubt, the same with Praviraca, we infer that the Kinguili of the Manuscript is the Cilacila, or Kilakila of Sir W. Jones's account. We conclude that the Calinga country, a part of the Sanscrit and classical Andhra, or Telingana, is the locality intended. A. D. Campbell, Esq. in his grammar of its mellifluous language, says, "Calinga stretched northwards, along the coast from the Godavery towards the Ganges. The nation is mentioned by Pliny as Calingæ proximi mari, and gentes gangaridum Calingarum; and the people and language of Telingana are still known to the inhabitants of the eastern islands by no other name than Calinga.* We have before seen (Vol. 1, p. 183.) that Buddhist traditions in Ceylon trace their religion to Calinga and Mugadha; the former name thus doubtless denoting Telingana. Mr. Wilson observes,† that, according to classical writers, “the kings of Andhra were sovereigns of great power in the early years of Christianity; and Pliny states of the Andhra king, that he was master of thirty walled towns, and could bring into the field one hundred thousand foot, ten thousand horse, and a thousand elephants.”

There appears to exist some doubt, or rather perhaps some grounds of conjecture, whether Vicramaditya did or did not extend his dominions on this frontier, even to the subverting of the ancient Andhra sovereignty: and if so, whether Salivahana, on his conquest of Vicramaditya, did not extend his power also over this region. He is included, as usual in other cases, among the list of monarchs. Mr. Wilson says,‡ “It is not unlikely that Vickrama may have extended his authority to the south of the Nermada; and Salivahana, whose capital, Pratishthana, now known as Pythan, stood upon the Godaveri, is a legitimate monarch of the Dekhin. The countries along the Godaveri, or between it and the Nermada, may have been subject to that prince and his successors early in the Christian era; and their authority may have extended east and south, so as to have comprised the upper part of Karnata and the western portion of Telingana or Andhra.” We rather doubt the correctness of one or two of these conjectures:§ but even according to them, do not perceive that “it is impossible to include Bhoja amongst the monarchs of the south;”|| for all accounts make him a successor, more or less remote, to Salivahana.

Nevertheless, it seems agreed on all hands, that the period subsequent for some centuries to Salivahana is excessively obscure; and the history of Andhra is as much so, at this time, as any other. We meet with nothing of a probability approaching to certainty until “about a century and a half after Salivahana, or in the third century of Christianity;”¶ when “traditions particularise a Mukunti-raja as flourishing,”

* Teloogoo Grammar, Intro. p. vii.

† Descriptive Catalogue of Mc.Kenzie MSS. Intro. p. cxxii. ‡ Intro. p. cxxiii. cxxiv.

§ See vol. 1, p. 252, et seq. || Des. Cata: Intro. p. cxxiii. ¶ Ibid. p. cxix.

who was of another race of Kalinga princes, and his country was "more to the south, in the Gantur (Guntoor) circar, and adjacent to the Krishna river, on its approach to the sea." He is said to have encouraged the settlement of Bramins in his country: his capital was Daranikota, west of Condapilli, and "his descendants are said to have reigned for eight hundred years."* Little further is known concerning them; but we feel a degree of moral certainty that Boja-rāja was one of these kings, both because Daranikota signifies "the fort of Dara," (or town of Saṭṭeya-Dhara. Vol. 1, p. 225) and because his descendants are represented to be succeeded, as usual, by the Yavanas. By his descendants we ought perhaps more correctly to understand generally his successors. We transfer Mr. Wilson's observations. "When Mukunti is not considered as the founder of a local dynasty, the "ordinary course of enumeration is, Salivahana, Madhava-verma, Kulaketana, Nilakantha, and Mukunti; and these princes are not held to be sovereigns of part of "Kalinga only, but of the whole of Telingana. They are followed by the Chola-Maharaja, intending thereby the series of princes so termed, as the period of their "government is said to be two hundred and seventeen years; bringing the whole to the "year of Salivahana four hundred and thirty seven (A.D. 515). These are succeeded by eight or nine Yavana princes. It is difficult to understand what is meant by "the term, as the name Yavana invariably implies foreigners, and in late times "Mahommedans. In general, the only name specified is Yavana-Bhuja; but in one "list† we have the following, named as his descendants: Nanda, who reigned sixty-two years; Bhadra, seventy years; Dumatsena, fifty years; Satyasena, forty-two years; "Sampati, sixty-seven years; Retnamadana, thirty years; Sumanta, fifty years; Vrihasena, "forty-six years: or altogether, with the reign of Yavana-Bhuja, which is called forty-one years, four hundred and fifty-eight years; bringing the last to the year of Salivahana 875 (A.D. 953). The succeeding princes are termed the Narapati, Gajapati, "and Aswapati, or the sovereigns of Warangal, and Orissa, and the Mahommendans.‡

* Des. Cata. Intro. p. cxx.

† The Pandion Chronicle speaks of eight Yevanal kings; but without specifying names. Vol. 1, p. 31.

‡ More correctly perhaps those of Vijianagur, Warangal, and Orissa. See Mr. Stirling's account of Orissa, As. Res. vol. 15, art. 5: also Des. Cata. p. 289.

"It appears, therefore, that the termination of the Yavana series is, as far as the chronology is concerned, fully two centuries too early. As to its historical accuracy, it is impossible to offer any conjecture, as nothing but names is traceable, and those names throw no light on the foreign origin of the individuals, as they are all genuine Sanscrit appellations. * Whether any such persons existed as these Yavanas is questionable; but the answer to the question must be sought in the countries between the Narmada and Krishna. Colonel Mackenzie's inquiries are, for the most part, bounded by the latter; except along the sea coast and the adjoining districts."* We submit, what indeed is only a conjecture, but which nevertheless is invested with some adjuncts of probability; and this is, that if the Yavanas are correctly supposed to denote the Greeks of Bactria, (See vol. 1, p. 259.) then it is possible that some king or conqueror from among them might have left some posterity, legitimate or otherwise, in India, native born and by a native mother, very possibly of high descent. In such case Yavana-Bhuja might denote either that son or his descendant: the term Yavana marking the foreign extraction; and Bhuja denoting arm or strength; while the other names in succession might be expected to be Sanscrit, both from maternal influence and Indian birth. Supposing this conjecture to be accurate, then this dynasty of a Grecian posterity must have held very extensive influence, seeing that their rule is admitted by the records both of the Pandion and Kudamba kingdoms. Traces every where appearing of their rule, it must, as a leading fact, be something more than artificial; though the details are not sufficiently numerous to allow us to consider any thing further than the mere fact, that such a dynasty once was, as historical.

With the intention of returning to the locality of this northern power in times subsequent to those now indicated, we pass over to the western and southern portion of the Peninsula. From such Manuscripts as are in our own possession, the notices of the Sera-desam are faint and few. It appears, however, that the deficiency is capable of being supplied from existing records; but not having the Manuscripts in possession, all that can be done is to give the following brief outline; one which the Manuscripts themselves might possibly enable us to correct or enlarge.

* Des. Cata. Intro: p. cxxiv.

Pauranic legends carry up the notice of this country to the time of Parasu-Rama; and even ascribe the existence of the whole western continent to him. This asserted incarnation of Vishnu made great slaughter among the Cshetriya princes of the solar-race in the north; and then gave their countries to the Bramins; who, in return for his liberality, banished him as a murderer. Parasu-Rama having no country to call his own, solicited one from Varunen, the god of the sea, who promised him an extent of land equal to that over which he could cast his battle-axe; the inseparable emblem of this avataram. Standing at Gokernam, in the north, in about latitude 15°, he hurled his axe even to Canya-Cumari, (or Cape Comorin,) the intermediate space being what we call the Malabar coast; and so much, as by agreement, Varunen yielded to him as his domain.

A hasty decision might declare this whole legend to be altogether fiction. We suspect that the fable commemorates, at least, one great leading fact. The nearest conjecture we can form respecting the era of Parasu-Rama is, that he lived sometime within the thousandth year after the flood. Now, if the astronomical principles detailed in volume 1, p. 153, are correct, there must have been a great retiring of the mass of waters from the northern hemisphere during the period within five hundred to a thousand years after the flood; and, unless the level of the Malabar coast be greatly beneath that of the coast of Coromandel, from this also a similar retiring of waters must have taken place at the same time; though uncommemorated, so far as we are aware, by any legend, as very little concerning it was known anterior to Rama-Chandra; whose era is posterior to that of the former Rama by some centuries.

When Parasu-Rama had obtained his domain, as before mentioned, he parcelled it out into seven Konkans, or divisions, named respectively, Kirata, Virata, Maratha, Konkana, Hayga, Tuluva, and Kerala. Some of these names, as Kirata and Virata, are taken from those of northern and more ancient countries. These seven provinces, it seems, had a population of fishermen; from which circumstance we may gather the general inference, that the retiring of the sea was gradual, though fable has incorrectly made it miraculous and instantaneous. If it did take place on the principles indicated, it must have been gradual. Parasu-Rama, it may be supposed, on coming to this newly recovered tract of country, easily gained an ascendency over its piscatory inhabitants. The better to secure it, and to retaliate on the northern Bramins who had expelled him, he made these fishermen become Bramins. Either at this time, or, as more probable, subsequently, the aforesaid seven provinces were subdivided into sixty-four districts; and the Bramins of these states formed a deliberative council of government for the whole. They reserved to themselves the property of the soil; let out the lands to inferior castes; intrusted war and defence to ten and a half divisions out of the sixty-four subdivisions; and placed the executive government in the hands of one individual, assisted by a council of four other Bramins, elected every three years.* It is not certain whether this very singular arrangement, considering its being in India, took place among the fishermen-Bramins, or at a later period. The reader may judge; for the legend says, that Parasu-Rama, on quitting the country, told his Bramins that, should they at any time have urgent occasion for his assistance, their wishing for his presence would be sufficient to bring him among them: a device quite common to the heroical period of Hindu history. The fishermen, unworthy of their elevation, felt doubtful of his veracity; and, in order to put it to the proof, summoned him without cause: indignant at which he reduced them to the rank of Sudras, in which light the Bramins of the Konkan are said to be still regarded. We incline to the opinion that the Bramins who formed the hierarchical government before described were not the Bramins of Parasu-Rama; but later ones, who migrated into the country at an after period: and for these reasons; because elective government is not purely Indian of the earliest ages, but originated among the dispersed from Babel in Chaldea and Assyria; because the Bramins of Malabar are said to have let out the lands to inferior castes; and because, after a time, the election of a president with an executive council was changed into the election of one sovereign, of the Cshetriya or military caste, only prescribing to him an oath, to acknowledge the authority of the Bramins, and to do nothing contrary to their interests,† or without their concurrence. This last proceeding is precisely according to the Cushite model of the dispersed from Babel; and it does not appear possible, according to Hindu opinions, that a Cshetriya prince could have derived a sovereignty, of limited character, from the inferior caste of Sudras. We suppose, therefore, a later immigration of Bramins, (possibly of Chaldean origin,) who improved or ornamented the legend of Parasu-Rama; reduced his fishermen-Bramins to their original level; and contrived to get the whole power of government into their own hands: but though we suppose so much, our readers will form their own opinion.

* Des. Cata. Intro. p. xcv.

† Ibid.

It is said that the elected military sovereign was from another country, not distinctly specified; and therefore not easily determinable. We greatly hesitate to admit Mr. Wilson's conjecture,* that they "had been induced or compelled to accept a military viceroy from the monarch of Madura;" for we think the transaction in question is more ancient than "the early ages of Christianity," in which he places it; and we believe that an act of interference so important would not have escaped notice in some one of our Manuscripts had it actually occurred.

The seven districts into which the Malabar coast was primarily divided, appear, after some time, to have been apportioned into the four provinces of Tuluva, Cuva, Kerala, and Mushica. Of these, Cuva is mentioned by Ptolemy as a town, not a country; and from Mushica, in all probability, came the port Musiris, mentioned by Arrian in his Periplus.† The last two seem to have been of little consequence; for the whole country was named after the two leading divisions of Tuluva and Kerala, the former to the north, and the latter to the south; and this division arose from a separation among the before-mentioned sixty-four Bramin families; of whom thirty-two took possession of one half, and the remaining thirty-two of the other half. On what account this arrangement took place, does not appear to be recorded. It seems however to be a necessary consequence, that the military sovereignty by election must have ceased: a conjecture which is confirmed by what information can be gathered regarding the northern portion.

For a change in the name, from Tuluva to Kadamba, seems to have been preceded by that state of the country which our Manuscripts usually express by the phrase of being "its own king," or without any established authority. The first king of the Kadamba dynasty in Tuluva, is stated to have been the offspring of Siva and Parvati; or, as another account states, he was born from a drop of perspiration from Siva, which fell on a Kadamba flower (Nauclea Daduga). The country, at that time, was without a king; and the people had recourse to a custom of which frequent mention occurs in Peninsular records; this is, the letting loose an elephant carrying a garland of flowers, after the performance of certain ceremonies, in which the concurrence of Bramins is of course essential; and the person to whom the elephant presents the garland is by that act considered to be chosen as king. The above-mentioned Kadamba in this case received the garland; and he was called Trinetra-Kadamba, from having, as asserted, Siva's third eye in his forehead; an allegory perhaps to indicate that he was rigid, or severe, in the administration of justice. He is placed high up in the Cali-yugam, or between 500 to 1000 B. C.; but an inscription occurs in his name S. S. 90, or A. D. 168. Precise confidence can be placed in neither of these dates; for when natives date any thing in the Cali-yugam, we have learned to regard the time as beyond their precise knowledge; and the very date S. S. 90, would lead to a suspicion that the inscription was antedated at some period when the era of Salivahana had come into general use, and that it referred to another Trinetra-Kadamba, so named after the founder of the dynasty. We should conjecture, by consequence, that if the first Trinetra-Kadamba were a real personage, the age in which he flourished must have been at least 500 B. C.

* Des. Cata. Intro. p. xcvi.

† Periplus Mar. Erythr. p. 32. And by Pliny in his Natural History. It was the port made by Hippalus, the first pilot who stretched across the Arabian gulf from the mouth of the Red sea.

Of two successors by some accounts, or five by others, little or nothing is said; but the third or fifth, named Mayura-Verma, is pre-eminently distinguished. He founded Jayantipur, being either Banavasi, or Kundapur, on the sea coast; but is chiefly celebrated for introducing the Bramins into the country: and here we meet with a singular contradiction; for traditions ascribe to him the division of the country, below the Ghats, into sixty-four districts, apportioned among the Bramin settlers. We feel obliged to explain this circumstance in a way which will avoid contradiction; and, at the same time, not be discordant to the spirit of Hindu history. We believe then the matter to be as already indicated; that an immigration of Bramins took place at an earlier period, who deposed the preceding Sudras; that the hierarchical government not working well, an elective military one was established; that this ultimately led to a schism or rent in the country; that the northern portion continued some time in an anarchical state, when possibly many Bramin families quitted it for happier lands; that at length those who remained in union with the people brought about the election of Kadamba; and, that his descendant, Mayura-Verma invited another immigration of Bramins, dividing his northern half-country into sixty-four districts, in imitation of the more ancient division of the whole coast; and thus making his country a copy in miniature of the primitive whole. It must be noted that a regular succession of kings is traced after Mayura-Verma; and without some such supposition as the one indicated, it seems impossible to reconcile the very opposite statement of a hierarchy of Bramins choosing an elective king, with an hereditary king inviting Bramins, and locating them in appropriated districts. Besides which, it must be remarked that the hierarchy possessed the whole country, whereas Mayura-Verma ruled over only the northern half. It follows, that the location of Bramins made by him was certainly posterior to the hierarchy; and we must account for that location, either by supposing a deficiency caused by time, or by imagining some flowing tide of Bramins from the north setting in towards this shore, and received with cheerful welcome. For a country to be without Bramins is, by established Hindu opinion, one of the greatest afflictions that Divine Providence can allow to alight on a devoted nation. Hence, in the former case, had a dearth of these benefactors occurred, Mayura-Verma would have earnestly sought to make up the deficiency; or if there existed only a moderate supply, a greater one would be welcomed, on the principle that too many of a good tribe could not come; inasmuch as they would bring with them a blessing, instead of proving a burden. It adds some weight to the conjecture, if we consider the fact, which seems to be authenticated, that the proportion of Bramins in the modern province of Canara (the one in question) is much greater than in other parts of the Peninsula.

It appears, further, that Mayura-Verma placed four (we had almost said Levitical) cities, each under a Bramin governor; which were those of Kasargudi, Barkur, Mangatur, and Kadaba. During the reign of his son the Bramins made an attempt to leave the country, but were brought back, and compelled thenceforward to leave a lock of hair on the forehead, as a distinguishing mark: the rest of the hair being shaven according to custom. The legendary account of Mayura-Verma, is the subject of a Sanscrit Surittiram, in the Devanagari character. It makes the successors of Trinetra-Kadamba to be Mudhukeswara, Mullinatha, and Chandra-Verma; the last of whom had two sons; and from the eldest of these, named after his father, came Mayura, who afterwards became king of Banavasi. It states that his son was called Trinetra-Kadamba. Mr. Wilson thinks that Mayura-Verma lived about one thousand years ago, or in the eighth or ninth century.* In general Mr. Wilson seems to us to err, if at all, on the safe side. We believe that Mayura must have flourished at an earlier period. Some reasons for which opinion will presently appear.

The son of Mayura is otherwise named Cshetriya-Verma, and Chandragada. This prince, by treachery and cruelty, extended his authority, and pushed forward the Bramins above the Ghauts. From this prince downwards there follows a list, of names only, of some seventy princes. The question arises, is the list real? or is it fictitious? We should say neither one nor the other. The greater probability is, that some of the names will be duplicates or repetitions of others; but that a portion of them must have had real existence, and regal authority. They are followed, as usual, by the Abhiras, Mauras, &c.; and Mr. Wilson again, somewhat too positively as we conceive, asserts, that "the list of princes given in the Puranas" (to wit, as we suppose, Abhiras, Mauras, &c.) "could have had no connexion whatever with the dynasties of the south."† We do not so plainly perceive this impossibility, in the face of uniform local testimony to the contrary; though it is just possible that the Pauranic accounts may have been copied out into the topical lists, and genealogical accounts, by way of rhetorical ornament and flourish. But then we find that these foreign princes bring us down to a Sankara-deva in S.S. 1258, or A.D. 1336: fixing those foreign dynasties some centuries earlier; as they are uniformly placed, be they whom they may. Mr. Wilson informs us, (Cata. p. 97.) that inscriptions of the Kadamba family are found as late as the twelfth century of the Christian era. Is the inscription one of Sankara-Deva? Whether it be or no, and whether any foreigners intervened or otherwise, let us take our stand at 1200 A. D. and then carry upwards a list of as many princes, out of seventy, as discretion may warrant; and we shall be landed at a period much anterior to A. D. 1000 as the time of Mayura-Verma. Let us take the whole seventy, and assign twenty years to each reign, and we are carried up to 200 B. C. But if we consider that there were certain intermediate series of foreigners, and that twenty years is a low estimate as an average of each reign, we may then discard several from the list of seventy princes, and yet be carried up as high. We have fixed the first Trinetra-Kadamba at 500 B. C.; or say thereabouts. At least a century must have been occupied by his immediate successors, down to Mayura-Verma. We may be above the true point, as Mr. Wilson is, we conceive, certainly below it; but we feel too much respect for his judgment, and too great diffidence of our own, to be any way positive. We note, notwithstanding, that "in other tracts" (exclusive of the Sanscrit Mayura-Verma-Cheritra) "current in the Dekhin, the Kadamba is inserted in the midst of the common Pauranic dynasties of the Kali age, or anterior to the Maunas and Yavanas." (Des. Cata. p. 97.) Mr. Wilson considers this to be "egregious blundering, or worse," because "intended to place the origin of the Kadambas nearly 1500 years before the Christian era." The simple fact, however, that other tracts and local traditions take this latter view of the case, deserves to be weighed in forming a definite judgment.

* Des. Cata. p. 97.

† Des. Cata. Intro. p. ciii.

Having brought this line of kings down to the real, or asserted, times of foreign rule, we here, as in other cases, pause; and turn to the more southern portion, or Kerala-desam. This seems to be the same with the Sera-desam; unless the latter should be a still smaller division at the extreme south. The limits of Sera-desam seem to have varied at different times; and the country has also been termed Konga-desam. The records of this principality do not appear to be so connected as those of others; deficient even as the best are. But a certain date seems to be afforded in the year of Salivahana 816, or A. D. 894, when the country is said to have been conquered by the Soren king. This is about the period usually assigned to foreigners; but in the brief account* of the Manuscript entitled Konga-desa-Rajakal, or kings of the Konga country, Mr. Wilson makes no mention of any foreign rule. This MS. appears to us, peculiarly valuable, from being the only one, as we conceive, bearing on this section of the south country. And, when it is considered that Mr. Wilson admits his want of acquaintance with the Tamil language, and his being obliged to follow, either imperfect English notes left by Colonel Mc.Kenzie, or the verbal accounts of natives, there will perhaps appear some reason in the wish, that this manuscript in particular could be inspected. The plan of printing manuscripts verbatim, with literal translations, as the foundation of general inferences from the whole at a future period, we feel convincingly persuaded is the only means of providing a safe chart to the general historian, in this long neglected, and supposed to be barren, field. The errors which we have perceived, in parts of Mr. Wilson's most valuable Descriptive Catalogue of the Mc.Kenzie MSS. at Calcutta, lower our feeling of confidence in results derivable from the whole; important as they are, in the character of an approximation: and our having seen and conversed with one of the individuals on whom Colonel Mc.Kenzie, and ultimately Mr. Wilson, must have depended for accounts of the contents of the Tamil Manuscripts, would by no means deduct from such a depreciated feeling. Until the Tamil Manuscripts relating to the Pandiya, Sora, and Sera kingdoms, have been examined by a European, well acquainted with Tamil; we must hold that their contents cannot be justly estimated; nor would a safe basis, for public judgment to rest upon, be provided; unless they are printed verbatim, with a literal version. Mr. Wilson says,† "According to this work" (Kongadesa-Rajakal) "the series of Konga or Chera princes amounted to twenty-six, from Viraraya-Chakraverti to Raja-Malla-deva; IN THE TIME OF WHOSE DESCENDANTS the kingdom was subdued by the Chola-Raja." To remove the vagueness of the words put by us in small capitals, we should be disposed to make every effort to get a sight of the MS. were it at Madras, and not at Calcutta. What descendants, or how many of them, intervened between Raja-Malla-deva and the Soren conquest? seems needful to be ascertained, before attempting the ascending series, up to Vira-raya. We suspect the ordinary introduction of the foreign rulers, whom the Soren king would be represented as chasing out of the country, assuming it thenceforward to himself. Allowing as high up as 500 A. D. for these foreigners, we might have to track our way upwards through the obscure periods of Boja, Salivahana, and Vicramaditya, to whom the descendants of Raja-Malla-deva would appear as tributaries, until we came to Mulla-deva himself; perhaps a century B. C.; and then allowing about twenty years each to his twenty-five predecessors, if real, we should make Vira-^araya to be about contemporary with Trinetra-Kadamba, of Tuluva. Obscurity however, almost impenetrable, rests over the period in question; and all we can hope for is, that such a beginning has been made by Colonel Mc.Kenzie and Mr. Wilson, as may ultimately lead to a sifting of the contents of all the Mc.Kenzie MSS. bearing on the subject; and yielding, by a clear induction, from all available data, something like a satisfactory and decisive basis for the conclusions of the future historian.

* Des. Cata. p. 198.

† Des. Cata. p. 199.

The list of kings from Vira-^araya (or the champion-king) to Malla-deva, is the following one:—Govinda-^araya, Krishna-^araya, Kali-vallubha, Govinda, Chat-^aurbhuj, Kumara-deva, Trivikrama-deva, Kongani-verma, Madhava-verma, Hari-verma, Vishnugopa, Krishna-verma, Dindikara, Durvaniti, Puskara, Trivik-^arama, Bhuvikrama, Kongani-Mahadhiraya, Govinda, Sivaga, Prithivi-Kongani-Mahadhiraya, Raja-Malla-deva, Ganda-deva, Satyavakya-deva, Gunottama-deva, Raja-Malla-deva; in all, twenty-six. Some of these names convey a suspicion of modern date, from the appellatives of Krishna so often occurring; for whether Krishna were so popular at as early a period as we have conjectured for these kings, is doubtful. Let it however here be observed, that the Soren conquest of the Sera-desam, fixed in S. S. 816, brings us to a period, where, in the other portions of this connective essay, we have deemed it expedient to pause, in our survey.

The Sora-desam next demands our attention. There are manuscripts in the Mc.Kenzie collection it appears, which, as we conjecture, on an accurate investigation, would probably yield materials of very considerable interest, as to this portion of the south country. We can only attempt a distant approximation to severe accuracy, from the rough outline of materials which Mr. Wilson has provided; taken in connexion with some others of our own.

If the statement of the Hari-Vamsa ought to be received as accurate, that the extreme south was peopled by descendants of the three brothers named Chera, Chola, and Pandiya, as we are rather disposed to believe, then it will follow that the statement derived by Mr. Wilson from one or two manuscripts, which do not seem to us to be unexceptionable in point of authority, is not to be received without qualification. According to Mr. Wilson, Trichinopoly must have been the first site of the Chola (Sora) kingdom, and its founder one Tayuman-Nale, a settler who came from Oude, or some part of upper Hindustan. Such a settler may have cleared the country around Trichinopoly; he may even have founded the village of Wariur (or Uriyur): but we greatly doubt whether this were the first capital of the Sora-desam. To us it appears tolerably evident, that the first capital was Kanchi (or Conjeveram), and that the foundation of this latter was nearly contemporaneous with the original foundation of Korkhi (or Madura). In all the earlier legendary tales, relating to the remote antiquity of Madura, the capital of the Sora-desam is stated to be Kanchi; and it is from scattered fragments of poets, patronised by kings of a later date, that we have, for our own part, met with the first mention of Uriyur, as the capital of the Sora kingdom. But we presume that circumstances afterwards pointed out the superior eligibility of Uriyur, as fertilized in its neighbourhood by the Cauvery river; but this could not have been until this neighbourhood, in the manifold wars which occurred, had been wrested from the Pandion government; for the ancient boundaries of this latter kingdom extended farther north than the Cauveri, even to the Vellar: which is also specified as the most ancient southern boundary of the Sora-desam. But, whatever may be the true state of the case as to comparative antiquity, Wariur (or Uriyur) was certainly the capital at one period of the history of the kingdom. It seems, also, that one king, named, among many others, Kulottunga-Soren, had an illegitimate son, who could not succeed him, to whom he assigned Kanchi, with a district around and beyond; part of it lying to the north, and requiring to be rescued out of the hands of a rude and anarchical people, by whom it was peopled. The name of this prince being:

Adonda, or by title Tondaman-Chakraverti; this division of the country was afterwards known as the Tonda-Mundalam. But there is reason to believe that it was held as a viceroyalty, or subordinate principality, chiefly because no separate records are known to have been preserved, nor any care taken to narrate the genealogical list of Adonda's descendants. There is also reason to believe that these removed the seat of their government to Arcot; partly because in Ptolemy's tables we meet with the term Arcati Regio Soræ; and partly because the Mahomedan principality was established there: for the Mahomedans seem uniformly to have continued their capitals in the towns which had been so considered, when under the dominion of aboriginal native princes.

It is stated by Mr. Wilson,* that lists of the Soren princes are preserved in the temples of Tripeti, Chandragiri, and Permatur, which give twenty-three kings, while other lists at Kondatur and Kanchi give eighteen; supplying also dates, or from S.S. 136 to 830 (A.D. 214 to 908), an interval of 694 years. It is about this period that our Supplementary Manuscript is most definite in its statement of intercourse, marriage-relations, wars, and mutual conquests, on the part of the Pandion and Soren kingdoms. In the Vrihadiswara Mahatmya, a Sanscrit work, found also in Tamil and Mahratti, sixteen kings are enumerated. We may be satisfied, therefore, that at least so many reigned, and very probably more. The Dravira country is said to be rich in Sassanams, or inscriptions on stone, of grants, by Soren princes; but their value is reduced almost to insignificance from being dated only in the year of some king's reign, without specifying either the date of the Cali-yugam, or of Salivahana.

It is exceedingly probable that neither names, nor notices, of rulers at Kanchi, antecedent to S.S. 136, are preserved in Braminical lists; for this reason, that before that period the Bauddhists or Samunals were supreme, if not sole, in power and influence in the Kanchi kingdom. The Madura-Stalla-Puranam testifies to this fact unequivocally; and an image, unquestionably of Buddha, was dug up by Colonel Mc.Kenzie's people, near Conjeveram,† which, as shown by the drawing of it given, is exactly on the same model with those recently brought in considerable numbers 'from Birmah' to Madras; though it is of better proportions and simpler workmanship: while its having been buried, would appear to indicate a desire, on the part of the Bauddhist votaries, to conceal it from the eye and search of succeeding kings, or conquerors, of a different faith. Whatever may be decided as to the common origin, connected with local variations increased by time and distance, of the Bauddhas and Jainas, it is at least certain that the former, or Samunals from Ceylon, had spread as far north in the Peninsula as to Conjeveram: or else that if the votaries of this image were Jainas, who migrated originally from the north of India; they then must be, in origin at least, the same sect, with the Bauddhists of Ceylon, and the opposite coast of the Bay of Bengal. But, waving this discussion, whether the original founder of Kanchi were of Braminical or Bauddhist persuasion, is perhaps not easily determinable. The probability is, that his emigration from the north was merely in search of subsistence; that no Bramins, or religious ministers of any kind, accompanied him; or were found among his descendants, until possibly the votaries of Buddha found their way to the place, and obtained an ascendancy; giving way to the Bramins at a much later period, through intercourse with other kingdoms, or foreign conquests: and, with a very great appearance of probability, through the contrivance of the Bramins in effecting the conversion of a Soren king, by introducing him at night surreptitiously into the Madura temple, as narrated in the thirty-fourth Tiruvilliadel * of the Stalla Purana; especially as thenceforward a period of amity ensued between the two kings; until the intrigue, specified in the following thirty-fifth Tiruvilliadel, led to renewed enmity and warfare. It may cause little surprise, considering that Bramins have been the usual guardians of all Hindu legendary history, when we find that accounts of Bauddhist kings of Kanchi have either never been written, or have been permitted to perish.

* Des. Cata. Intro. p. xxxvi.

† As. Res. vol. 9. art. 4.

Hence the sixteen or more princes, whose names, with some of their actions, have been preserved, are probably to be dated from S. S. 136, all above that period being nearly a blank. The names of the sixteen kings are, Kulottunga, Deva-Soren, Sasisegara, Sivalingam, Vira-soren, Keri-kala, Bhima-soren, Rajarajendren, Viramur-tanden, Kirtti-verdhana, Vijaya, Kanaka, Sundara, Kalakala, Kalyana, Bhadra. But as these names are not enough to fill up an interval of 694 years, with any thing like a consistent average, we ought possibly, with Mr. Wilson, to give a preference to those local lists which increase the number to eighteen, or twenty-three : the last probably being most correct. It is certain, for example, that there must have been more than one Vira-Soren ; for while Rajendra, who was the patron of the celebrated Tamil poet Kamban, is found to have reigned A. D. 886,* we have a Vira-Soren fifth in succession from Rajendra, who reigned about A. D. 918. We cannot suppose, with Mr. Wilson, that Vira-Soren and Rajarajendra were the same ; for though both names are titular, we are forbidden by the analogy of custom, as abundantly exemplified in the Pandion lists, to consider titles, usually distinctive of individuals, as given to one person. We rather presume, that in the list of sixteen a discretionary power must have been exercised in cutting out all duplicate or triplicate names, as being supposed to be erroneous ; whereas, a list without such names occurring, at least occasionally, is on that ground exposed to suspicion of defect ; for it is the habitual custom of all caste-natives of the Peninsula to give their own father's name to their first son, and thus grandfather and grandson are usually named alike. This simple circumstance would afford the fullest warrant for considering the list of sixteen princes as being defective, and for extending it to twenty-three ; while even that number, in a period of 694 years, gives an average of thirty years to each king, rather a large one, considering how modern is the period in question. The question perhaps cannot be adjusted without an accurate, and not intermediate, examination, by a European, of the Mc.Kenzie Tamil Manuscripts numbered by Mr. Wilson respectively 1, 2, 3, 4 and 7 † of his Descriptive Catalogue, under the head of Local History and Biography.

* Vol. 1, p. 80.

Accounts of the Soren kingdom narrate that it merged by marriage into the Pandion, during a period of 570 years. That intermarriages did take place is certain ;

* Ellis on Mirasi Right, Appendix, p. xvi. Des. Cata. p. 163 and 181.

† See List in the Appendix to this work.

but it is probable that, considering the length of the period, conquest is veiled under the softer term of marriage. Our Supplementary Manuscript admits that the Pandiya-desam was conquered by the Soren kings; and it also affirms the counter part, or that the latter country was, at more than one time, conquered by the Pandion rulers. Thus Sora-kulantagen (which being Englished means the destroyer of the Sora race) is said to have resisted and killed a Soren prince, and to have conquered his country: while his son Dairiya-vermu (a name implying courage) reigned over both kingdoms; but the son of the latter relinquished the Soren kingdom to the legitimate heir, perhaps as a tributary. In the next reign, Savuntira-pushana is represented as marrying the daughter of the Soren king; and we cannot ascertain the precise state of the relations between the two countries until we find Parakirama-Soren (or the valiant Soren) conquering the Pandion country, being aided from the north. A period of Soren rule occurs, until Deva-manokiren, a Pandion, re-conquered his own country, and the rival one also; reigning over both. But these events, if the order of the Supplementary Manuscript is worthy of being trusted, all occurred prior to S. S. 136; and considerably before the era even of Vicramaditya. We find also the names of Parakirama, Kulottunga, Panjala, Loga-retshaga; of which names, the second only occurs in the before-mentioned list of sixteen; and relates probably to a different individual. If we glance at the Madura Stalla Purana, we find (vol. 1, p. 70.) mention made of a Samunal king, ruling at Kanchi over the Soren kingdom, personal name not stated; of Karikala, a Soren king; (p. 73.) of Kadu-Vettiya-Soren, (p. 80.) the name means "The forest-clearing Soren," who is there said to have built Kanchi, and to have become a convert to the Saiva faith; and of Vicrama-Soren, (p. 96.) as invading the Pandion country, and with the aid of the Aswapathi, Gejwapathi, and Narapathi; names which indicate that this portion at least of the Puranam must have been written later than 1000 A. D. let the invasion itself have occurred whensoever it might. We have also an indistinct intimation about the Soren king in the reign of Kuna-Pandion; (p. 111.) for Kuna-Pandion seems to have acquired an ascendancy over the rival kingdom. Of the above three names, that of Karikala only occurs in the list of the sixteen. Reverting to the Supplementary Manuscript, and to the period immediately subsequent to the alleged ascendancy of the Yevanal and other foreigners, we find a succession of five Pandion kings, named Soma-suntera, Karpura-suntara, Cumara-segara, Suntara-raja, and Senmuka-raja, down to Meru-suntera-Pandion, who is said to have ruled over the Sora, Sera, and Pandiya kingdoms. His son, Indra-Varunen, is stated to have released the Soren king and crowned him, receiving his daughter in marriage. At a considerable distance of time, the Soren king is represented as being the second son of Sadhuru-sangaren, king of Madura, and younger brother of Vira-varma-Pandion. Again, Maguda-varदानen is represented as invading the Soren kingdom, and being killed in consequence. After an interval of some thirty or forty years, his grandson, Varuna-kulottungen, conquered the Soren king: but his son, Athi-vira-ramen, (the patron of literature, and himself an author,) is said to have been in the closest relation of amity with the Soren king; so that both joined their forces, and between them conquered much territory. The MS. dates the beginning of Athi-viramen's reign at 133 years before the Mahomedan conquest. This is said to have occurred S. S. 1246; the same date of the event being also given in the Pandion Chronicle. (Vol. 1, p. 33.) Hence Athi-viramen began to reign S. S. 1379 (or A. D. 1457). This is a period much later than to that to which we have as yet brought down the other portions of the present rapid survey; but now let us revert to it, by taking the names and dates in the ascending series, as afforded by the Supplementary Manuscript.

Mahomedan conquest S. S. 1246	Martanda 35	S. S. 1246
Some kings (Chandra-Segara, &c.) 75	Magura-Tuvasa 25	Deduct 518
Kula-Vartanen 33	Mina-Tuvasa	728
Athi-Viramen 25	Mina-Kethana 15	Three reigns 80
Varuna-Kulottungen . . 39	Chandra-Kulatipa . . . 20	Karpura 84
Vajra-Singhu 25	Indra-Varunen 23	Somasuntera 20
Maguda-Vardanen . . . 15	Meru-Suntera	134
Vira-Vagu 35	488	S. S. 594
Vira-Varma 40	Allow for 2 reigns . . 30	A. D. 672
Sadhuru-Sangaren . . . 34	518
Sadhuru-Vicaren . . . 25
Gunalayan 20
Kavalayanauten 4

Thus the driving away of the foreigners is fixed at about A. D. 700, and though a little earlier, yet not very far from the period ascribed to those foreigners from other inferences, as before shown. For their rule, with that of Boja, Salivahana, and Vicramaditya, including the alleged twenty-five reigns from Deva-pushana to Raja-Sartula, as viceroys or tributaries of Vicramaditya, and thus up to Raja-Kulottama, we have a period of more than seven centuries; or from the beginning of the era of Vicramaditya, B. C. 56, down to S. S. 594, or A. D. 672: being the most obscure period of all native history.—Again, taking the ascending series, we have—

Vicramaditya	B. C. 56	Calinga-Marrtana	45
Raja Kulottuma	80	Pararaja-Kesari	53
Deva-pushana	47	Jeyapunja	48
Raja-pushana	52
			381

Jeyapunja-Pandion is said to have been the cotemporary of Nanda; and the coincidence in the chronology is exact, beyond our expectation; for Chandra-gupta, who killed Nanda, was cotemporary with Alexander the Great, B. C. 320, and to Nanda a reign of 100 years is always ascribed. Continuing the ascending series, it will be as follows:

Jeyapunja-Pandion B. C. 381	Ananta-iruthैया (Pandion) 27	Parakirama-pushana . . 60
Devagamanokiren . . 60	Ananta-pushana . . . 60	Parakirama-Sartula . . 70
Loga-velshaga-Soren . 30	Savuntiriyān 70	Sama-Sartula 45
Panjā-Soren 35	Savuntira-pushana-Pandion 55	Vicrama-Kesari 30
Kulottunga-Soren . . 40	Anyanakadori 48	Virakesari (contemporary Virama-Soren 30	Dairiya-varma 33	with Jenamejaya) . . 55
Conquest of Ma- gura B. C. 576	Sorakulantaga 66	Jeyasingha 32
		B. C. 1227

By this process we come at the beginning of the era reckoned from the Cali-yugam. The same period is arrived at by comparing the Pandion Chronicle (at vol. 1, p. 33) with the Supplementary Manuscript (at p. 199), but with very different result. In the latter, the death of Vicramaditya, an event which occurred possibly about A. D. 78, is placed in the year 3179 of the Cali-yugam; fixing the commencement about 3100 (as stated in a note, vol. 1, p. 239). The Mahomedan conquest, fixed at S. S. 1246, and C. Y. 4425, gives also 3179 before Salivahana, or the death of Vicramaditya, for the beginning of the Cali-yugam, or, as before, 3100 B. C. To reconcile the period as dated in the Supplementary Manuscript, with that given in the Pandion Chronicle, (and more accordant with common Hindu opinion,) would be of some consequence ; could it be effected so as to prevent any just cause of rejecting the statement of the former, which is most consistent with common sense, and general probability. The years in the Supplementary Manuscript have all the appearance of being solar years. Adopt the supposition (not before made, that we are aware of,) that the years of the Cali-yugam are solstitial; the passage of the sun from solstice to solstice, or one half of a solar year, being accounted as one year: then from the beginning of the Cali-yugam down to the Mahomedan conquest of Madura will be 2212 solar years; and from the beginning of the Cali-yugam, fixed at B. C. 1227, down to the Mahomedan conquest, A. D. 1324, will give 2551 solar years; leaving some 339 years to spare, in order to provide for the different length in former ages of the solstitial periods, and of solar years;* and also for corrections or amendments in the number of years allowed for each king's reign in the Supplementary Manuscript. Add the consideration, that an astronomical observation, made by Parasera, both of the places of the colures, and heliacal rising of Canopus, is said to fix him 1391 B. C. Between Parasera and Jeyasingha of the Supplementary Manuscript six generations, or about 200 years, intervened : take this sum from the former, and 1191 B. C. remains as the beginning of the Cali-yugam. On these grounds we conjecture, and are almost persuaded to conclude, that the years of the Cali-yugam were solstitial, and that the beginning of a period which has so much perplexed inquirers, is to be fixed between 1200 and 1000 B. C. and probably most near to the former date.

It further results, from the survey now taken, that the list of 16, 18, or 23 kings, as derivable from Mc.Kenzie MSS. at Calcutta, cannot be considered as the earliest kings of Kanchi ; but that after the earliest came the period of 570 years, during which the Soren kingdom was merged in the Pandion, by reason of marriage or conquest; and then the dynasty of the aforesaid list, down to S. S. 830 (or A. D. 908); while it is evident that there were Søren kings who reigned down to a later period, so as to extend to the time of Athi-vira-ramen, in S. S. 1379 (or A. D. 1457); and even later still, as will appear in due course of our inquiries.

* In more ancient times erroneously reckoned at 360 days.

It may be needful possibly to anticipate an objection as to the authenticity of the Supplementary Manuscript, and its being capable, not merely from the contents, but their value, to bear us out in the conclusions, of some consequence, which have been in part derived from it. On this point it is obvious to remark, that it contains nothing legendary, or mythological, and is an extremely plain and unvarnished chronicle; that the incidents recorded, all appear natural, and the years of each king's reign subsequent to Vicramaditya and Salivahana are moderate, and in accordance with the nature of human life at the period indicated; that the alone exception, relative to Vicramaditya and Salivahana, receives an easy solution, on the principle of the currently believed tales about them, an examination of which, as given towards the close of our first volume, shews that there is a dark period subsequent to them, and that Vicramaditya ruled in reality about a hundred years; while the remarkably exact coincidence with fact, drawn from other sources, of Jeyapunja being the cotemporary king with Nanda of Magadha, gives a very strong and almost irrefragable proof of correctness and integrity, and corroborates the otherwise somewhat doubtfully long reigns between Jeyapunja and Vicramaditya, giving also an appearance of probability to the periods assigned to other reigns, from Jeyapunja up to Jeyasingha-Pandion. Invested with such features of simplicity and integrity, we believe the statements of the Supplementary Manuscript to be substantially authentic; and sufficient to bear out the conclusions thence derived, in connection with other sources of information.

This may possibly be the best place to advert to Mr. Wilson's notice of the Pandion kingdom, in itself valuable, as far as it goes; but brief and defective. In describing the founder of the kingdom as "Pandiya, a native of Oude,"* we believe there is an error, into which we suppose Mr. Wilson to have been led by the manuscript entitled in his Catalogue "Cholamandala, Tondi-mandala, Pandya-mandala-rajakal;" and numbered 4,* under the head of "Local History," &c. which, so far as we have been able to discover, is his only authority : which authority moreover is met and contradicted by the Hari-Vamsa ; by the manuscript quoted at p. 120 of vol. 1 ; and by the larger MS. detailing the lunar pedigree, at vol. 1, p. 219. The first Pandion, by these three, being considered as the offspring of Duruvasu, could not be of the solar line of Ayodhya, or Oude, nor be found among the subjects of that kingdom. Besides, the settler from Oude is stated to have followed in the train of Rama-Chandra ; while, if we trust the Stalla-Purana, (vol. 1, p. 57, compared with p. 77,) the visit of Rama-Chandra to Madura was posterior to its foundation, and the Pandion being the offspring of Duruvasu, (unless indeed it were at a very distant remove, and beyond credibility,) the same inference arises, which is, that he lived prior to Rama-Chandra and the war of Lanka. Mr. Wilson mentions lists of 70, and of 357 princes, which last he considers most probable " if the origin be so remote ;" adding, that " with Kuna-Pandion all the lists close." In the catalogue we observe the Sanscrit Halasya-Mahatmya, (No. 121, p. 91,) the Perawoliyar-Purana, in Tamil, (No. 27, p. 173,) the MS. No. 4, just adverted to, the Pandya-rajakal, (No. 7, p. 196,) as relating to this subject ; and the last (in the notice of which only any names of kings are specified) is remarkably defective, when compared with other lists. By consequence, the Stalla-Purana, which only comes down to the time of Kuna-Pandion, must be the standard authority. The later kings given in our Supplementary Manuscript are decidedly not included. In the MS. No. 4, (Cata. p. 195,) is an account of the Marawa province, and a statement that the Setupathis, or rulers at Ramiseram, had conquered their masters at Madura, reducing these to the state of feudatories for three reigns ; the same having occurred antecedent to the Vijia-nagaram ascendancy. Subsequently we have accounts in the Carnataka Dynasty of the Sethupathis, of considerable distinctness. Antecedently, the only intimation on the subject that we can derive is from the Stalla-Purana, (vol. 1, p. 77,) in the thirtieth Tiruvilliadel ; where the Sethu-rayen is no doubt the chief of the district named after the Sethu, or isthmus of Ramiseram : (for such it once was, though now an island by the gradual rise of the sea). No doubt the legend commemorates some invasion, real or threatened : but to discover the time in question, is no easy thing. It is of more consequence to inquire into the era of Kuna-Pandion. Mr. Wilson says the Tamil version of the Stalla-Purana was written in the middle of the eleventh century ; and that the original was therefore probably composed in the tenth, or early in the eleventh, century ;* fixing the date of Kuna-Pandion, the last prince whom it enumerates, to some antecedent term. The precise authority for this statement we could wish to see ; but have no means of our own of fixing the period of composition either of the original or version of the Purana. The mention of Aswapathi, Gejwapathi, and Narapathi, in the fiftieth Tiruvilliadel (vol. 1, p. 96.) strengthens the supposition of so late a composition, unless the terms may have been familiar to earlier ages, and adopted in a later one by the kings of Warankal, Orissa, and Vijianagaram. We further find Mr. Wilson repeatedly fixing the time of Kuna-Pandion about the time assigned for the composition of the Purana. Thus, (Intro. p. lvi.) “ There is reason to place Kuna-Pandya in the ninth or tenth century of Christianity.” (Ib. p. lxvii.) “ In the Pandyan kingdom the Jains rose upon the downfall of the Bauddhas, and were suppressed in the reign of Kuna-Pandya which could not have occurred much earlier than the ninth or tenth century, or might have been as late as the eleventh.” (Ib. p. lxxix.) “ The twelfth prince from Arimerd-dana is Kuna-Pandya. He is placed by some accounts in the Saka year 950, or A.D. 1028 ; and this agrees tolerably well with the date deduced for him from that of the translation of the Halasya-Mahatmya.” We rest not on trifling discrepancies in these passages, they being of little importance ; but could earnestly wish to see the exact specification of authorities literally and rigidly translated. For the conclusions we should come at from our own authorities would, at all events, place Kuna-Pandion at an earlier period. In the Supplementary Manuscript, which we regard as trustworthy, no place is assigned, or assignable, to Kuna-Pandion from the Mahomedan conquest, A. D. 1324, up to A. D. 672, in which interval, according to the statements of Mr. Wilson, he ought to be found. Above that period is the dark interim expressly assigned to foreigners; when transactions, such as those of Kuna-Pandion's reign, do not come within the range of probability. From Vicramaditya up to Jeyasingha, Pepiravahana, or Sittera-bagu, we find no Kuna-Pandion mentioned. Reverting to the Pandion Chronicle, we find (at p. 25. vol. 1.) a hiatus indicated, which in our notes we were led to consider as supplied by the Supplementary Manuscript; and such seems, to us, to be an unforced inference. We there find that Kuna-Pandion is placed higher up than this hiatus. It is implied, in our construction of circumstances, that some princes succeeded Kuna-Pandion, and among these we look for Sittera-vira-bagu, the father-in-law of Arjunen, and grandfather of Pepiravahana; from whom the Supplementary Manuscript carries down the genealogy with evident credibility. But if Jeyasingha-Pandion lived as early as B. C. 1227, then, allowing somewhat for the previous interval of disorder, we must suppose Kuna-Pandion to be placed about 1320 B. C.: and there accordingly we had located him, as nearly cotemporary with Tirudaracshasa and Pandu of Hastinapuri, before we were aware of Mr. Wilson's very different location of, we suppose, the same individual. Should Mr. Wilson's decision be the just one, then a very material alteration must be made in the whole structure of the different series, as they developed themselves to our inquiries; but then also the evidence of the Supplementary Manuscript must be peremptorily, and perhaps unduly, rejected; or else, to save such a consequence, Kuna-Pandion must be supposed therein to be spoken of under some other name.

* Des. Cata. Intro. p. lxxiv.

* Des. Cata. Intrô. p. lxxv:

The point which, with us, weighs against a high antiquity as assignable to Kuna-Pandion, arises from his extermination of the Samunals or Bauddhists. Were the era of Buddha's appearance correctly stated at 2101 B. C. there would be no difficulty; but if the Ceylon era (See vol. 1, p. 246.) be correct in fixing Buddha's death at 542 B. C. then certainly some time, even some centuries, would appear to be requisite, in order to allow his religion to proceed by way of Calinga, Siam, and Ceylon, to Madura. With regard to the minor statement, by Mr. Wilson, that "the Jains rose upon the downfall of the Bauddhas, and were suppressed in the reign of Kuna-Pandya," as he has not specified any authority, so we cannot appreciate it; but in the Stalla-Purana there is mention only made of Samunals and Puttar; both of which terms we have understood to be synonymous, and to denote the followers of Buddha; and we discover no period of the ascendancy of either at Madura, except in the reign of Kunā-Pandion. We add, that the Pandion Chronicle, which harmonizes with the Stalla-Purana, gives eighty-five kings from Kulasegara down to Kunā-Pandion; and the grandchild bearing the grandfather's name frequently occurs: the same being also observable, once or twice, in the Supplementary Manuscript. The reader must now be pleased to judge for himself, whether the origin of the Madura kingdom ought to be fixed in the third or fourth century before Christianity, as Mr. Wilson infers,* or at a much higher period, as we have conjectured; guided by data which could only be negatived by submitting the evidence of manuscripts implicitly to the test of our own discretion; and this mode of proceeding, to say the least, would more gracefully befit our readers than ourselves.

In the remainder of Mr. Wilson's brief notice of the Pandion kingdom, there is a valuable outline of details, with which those who have perused the first volume of this work must be familiar; and of which no repetition is needed.

As yet we have done no more than advert to a few of the incidents in the Supplementary Manuscript. They are however the leading ones. The commercial character of Kavalay-ananten; and his perishing at sea after a reign of only four years, is an incident of quite unusual occurrence. In the time of Sadhura-vicaren, we find the sanguinary worship of the goddess Cali had extended to the extreme south. Vira-varma is said to have conquered the Malayalim country; and if a viceroy were sent from Madura, it would seem to have been then; but this is at a late period, that is, S. S. 1018 (A. D. 1096). A little lower down, Athi-viramen, or Athi-vira-ramen, is to be distinguished as an author. He is popularly said to have translated into Tamil the Sanscrit Nishadha, founded on the interesting episode in the Mahabharata of Nala, and Damiyanti; though some other statements would induce the supposition, that he merely lent his name, and patronised the poet who was the real translator. It is in poetical Tamil, of the most abstruse composition: such things appearing to have been valued, as music now is, just in proportion to the difficulty of execution; and, by consequence, in false taste. The story however, in its native elements, as found in the Mahabharata, is of more simple and natural character, in which there is real pathos; and there would be more, were not the instrumental cause of Nalen's reverses, founded on reckless gaming. The narrative however is remarkable on account of a native superstition still extensively and practically connected with it. Sani-bagavan, or the guardian genius of the planet Saturn, was Nalen's secret but real enemy, throughout his sufferings; and at last, in their extreme point, he concedes a gift at Nalen's request, which is, that whosoever reads or hears the narrative of his sufferings, should be delivered from all his enemies. The natives do not regard this concession merely as the ingenious device of a poet to secure readers, but in the letter of the promise; and actually read it, or have it read to them, when in circumstances of difficulty, in order to be extricated out of them; and especially from such as may be attributable to Sani-bagavan; of whose malevolence he utmost dread is entertained. This is a superstition of which the writer has received various details, and the most confirming assurance.

* Des. Cata. Intro. p. lxxv.

Besides nominally or really composing the Tamil Nigazham, king Athi-vira-ramen also wrote a small collection of sententious maxims in the poetical dialect. The writer has made a translation of them; but as the insertion of it would not be suitable here, it will be reserved for a more befitting situation.

Of Athi-viramen's son, named Kula-vartanen, nothing is recorded but the years of his reign; and the kings who occupied the interval of seventy-five years, including Paracrama-Pandion, are not mentioned; nor could they be many. In the time of this last, the Mahomedan invasion and conquest occurred; when he was led away captive to Delhi, S. S. 1246 (A. D. 1324). As we have now brought down our account of the Madura kingdom to a later time than others; and as this event is one of magnitude, we may fix it as another period; and proceed to bring down our general survey to about the same era; as correctly and fully as we may be able to accomplish.

Thus far we have adverted chiefly to the three principal cotemporary kingdoms of the south, or the Sora, Sera, and Pandion kingdoms; which are generally found to be considered as connected with each other, in a more especial manner than with any other kingdoms. In the transition of our subject from the empires of Magadha and Ougeia, occasion also occurred of noticing the Calinga country, or that of Telingana. At some period nearly contemporaneous with the Andhra lords, there was a family named Chalukyas, whose capital was Kalyan; but the records concerning these are neither full nor very intelligible; and their rule, though once powerful, seems ultimately to have yielded to the ascendancy of a powerful kingdom in another part of Telingana, that of the Kakateya or Ganapathi princes of Warankal; who, at first feudatories or tributaries, at length shook off the yoke, and in the end became the masters. These must have been cotemporary with the Mukunti rajahs of Guntoor, before adverted to, who were on the south, and with the Gejwapathi princes of Cuttack, or Orissa, on the north. The very full account of this principality by Mr. Stirling, in the fifteenth volume of the Asiatic Researches, will sanction our dispensing with any particular notice of it, except to remark that, like other Hindu and idolatrous kingdoms, it at length fell before the all-devastating Mahomedan scourge: an event that took place in A.D. 1558,* when the Mahomedan general of Bengal invaded the country, and overthrew the independent sovereignty. The since become infamous temple of Jaganath, was at that time only in comparatively modern, and medium, repute; but the Mahomedans first shut it up, and persecuted its votaries; and then, by a superior refinement of policy, bethought of turning it to profit, by levying a heavy tax on pilgrim's going to visit it: a policy imitated in that locality, and elsewhere, by more civilized and better taught conquerors; on the part of whom the practice, with increased aggravations, is continued to the present day: in despite of thus far ostensible and nominal orders from the highest authority to wipe away a stain so odious from the annals of a nobler and more generous people; who, as we judge, ought never to have made Mahomedan prescriptive custom their guide.

In the central kingdom, between the Gejwapathis of Orissa, and the Mukunti rajahs of Guntoor, which, in common with the others, most probably arose on the dilapidated ruins of the ancient Calinga, the Ganapathis of Warankal, were at one time powerful and illustrious. The Kakateya family is traced from an ancient source of the line of Hastinapuri; from Janamejeya, through Sutanika and Cshemaca, to the sons of the two latter, named Vijayarka and Someedra. Their sons, named respectively Vishnu-Verddhana and Uttunga-Bhujr, disagreeing, the last named left the neighbourhood of Hastinapuri, and settled to the south of Godavery river.* It was however the settlement of a pastoral chieftain; and a foray of cattle by the Cuttack prince, led to the latter's following up his assaults in driving the descendants of the royal shepherd from the country. At Anumaconda a mixture of mythology and fact tended to the establishment of this line of princes, in the person of Madhava-verma. From him seven descents are reckoned down to Kakati-Pralaya.† He is fabled to have discovered a Parispatra, or philosopher's stone, which not being moveable, he moved his capital from Anumaconda to Warankal. The philosopher's stone, in all probability, was the discovery of the diamond mines of Golconda. Be this as it may, this prince was both wealthy and warlike: he defeated several surrounding petty powers, not excepting the Soren king, and freed himself, from vassalage to the Chalukyas of Kalyan. This prince was stabbed by his own son, owing to a mistake brought about by attempting to evade an alleged prediction of astrologers; and the father, blaming only himself, nominated the son as his successor. This son, named Rudra-deva, built, it is said, a thousand temples to Siva, with a view to expiate his crime. He raised tribute from some princes of Cuttack. His brother, Maha-deva, revolted, defeated, and slew Rudra-deva, taking the direction of affairs, and associating Ganapati-deva, son of Rudra, as partner and heir to the throne: a mode of proceeding which the reader of the Carnataca Dynasty of Madura will have perceived to have been common there, and fatal to the kingdom in the results.

* Des. Cata. Intro. p. cxxxix.

Ganapati-deva became illustrious; and as his predecessors had been termed Kakateyas, from Pralaya, so henceforward his descendants are called Ganapathis, from

* Des. Cata. Intro. p. cxxvi.

† Ib. p. cxxviii. The names are, according to the Pratapa Cheritra, as follow:—

Madhava-verma ..	160 years.	Yeruka	73 years.	Bhuvanika-malla ..	76 years.
Padma-sena	74 ..	Kuranki	76 ..	Tribhuvanika-malla	76 ..
Vennama	73 ..	Pendi Konda ..	25 ..	Kakati-pralaya ..	75 ..

Des. Cata. p. 302.

himself. Maha-deva lost his life in fighting with the rajah of Devagiri, and Ganapati avenged the quarrel; overcame that rajah, named Rama, and took his daughter to wife. He conquered the Velnad country, and a rajah of Nellore; a petty state existing there at this time. He was a votary of Siva, and a persecutor of the Jainas. He enclosed his own capital with an entire stone wall, whence it was called Yegasila-nagara; and he built other towns. He patronised literature; and established the secular Bramins as village accountants throughout his principality, to the displeasure of the sacerdotal portion of that order. He left no son; and Rudramadevi, his queen, assumed the government for twenty-eight years, until Pratapa-Rudra, (grandson of the queen, by her daughter's marriage with Chalukya-Tilaka,) had arrived to years of maturity, when the said Pratapa-Rudra ascended the throne. This event must have occurred about A. D. 1300.

Tradition assigns to this prince extensive authority and power. In the usual style of Hindu exaggeration he is said to have carried his armies as far north as to Prayaga, or Allahabad; and to have reigned in the south from the Godavery to Ramiseram: to which assertion, if worth much attention, serious objections might be opposed. It is perhaps probable that his kingdom, involving various tributaries, may have extended from Orissa to the Palar river, westward to the Ghauts, and north-west as far as Devagiri; otherwise called Deo-gerh, and by the Mahomedans, Dowletabad. But this great prosperity seems to have paved the way to his ruin, by exciting the cupidity and jealousy of the Mahomedans; now becoming rapidly an all-absorbing and destroying vortex for the native powers of India. And, as usual, these rapacious foreigners were invited by one native prince to destroy another; while both were ultimately to prove victims. The Gejwapathi rajah of Orissa, rendered apprehensive by the ambition and increased power of Pratapa-Rudra, made application to Delhi for assistance,* and an army being sent, Warankal was besieged, but the assailants were repelled; other assaults shared the same fate, and successive armies were defeated. But it seems that Madhava-verma, before mentioned, had obtained from the goddess Padmakshi a boon, resembling the: one obtained by Vicramaditya from the goddess Kali; that is to say, that the said Madhava-verma, and his posterity, should enjoy an uninterrupted series of prosperity during one thousand years. This fortunate period having expired, Warankal fell before the attacks of its assailants; and Pratapa-Rudra was taken prisoner, and carried to Delhi; where he would at least have Parakirama-Pandion, the captive king of Madura, to keep him company. The Mahomedan historians, who confirm the native traditions on these points, fix this leading event at A. D. 1323, being one year earlier than the Mahomedan conquest of Madura. Pratapa-Rudra was released after a time by the Delhi Sultan; and returning to Warankal, died there. His son, Virabhadra, succeeded; and, for what cause does not appear, Warankal was again taken in his reign; and, as some accounts say, destroyed, but others, and the Mahomedan narratives among them, do not agree in this point, since they speak of a subsequent succession of comparatively powerless princes, which a few authorities describe as tributaries to the Gejwapathis of Orissâ; perhaps by reason of the conquest of Pratapa-Rudra. Be these later and minor particulars as they may, the Mahomedans finally took possession of Warankal;† and under their rule it became known to European merchants as the kingdom of Golconda.

* Des. Cata. Intro. p. cxxxii. .

Mention has a little before been made of Deogerh, or Dowletabad. Its foundation is ascribed to a shepherd, named Ramji, who discovered a treasure in the mountain, which he thus expended. The transaction is fixed in the year of the Cali-yugam 2500: "about five centuries before the Christian era," says Mr. Wilson; but, if our view of the construction of the Cali-yugam era, stated a little before, (at p. 72,) be correct, that mode of calculation would make the period to be at about 100 to 150 B. C. It may be here noted, that Ellora, or Ellore, another name of this place, is properly Il'ur, or the town of Ila, the son of Vaivasvata transformed into a woman, and married to Buthen, the son of Chandren; of whom mention has been made in the first volume (at p. p. 231, 235). The sculptures at this place have attracted considerable attention; and, in a few ill-regulated minds, have led to immense absurdities of hypothesis and declamation. Mr. Wilson says they are ascribed to Ilā; but in a preceding page, (lxix.) following Mr. Erskine, he speaks of them as modern; perhaps about the fifth or sixth century of the Christian era, and as being the work, in part, of Jainas. We allude to the subject in passing, chiefly to note the great similarity of workmanship with the sculptures at Mavaliveram, (or the Seven Pagodas,) near Madras; which name has been somewhat pedantically translated and paraphrased into Mahabali-puram; first we believe by Mr. Goldingham, in the Asiatic Researches. We are not entirely convinced of the accuracy of the paraphrase; but will not insist on the subject here, further than to remark, that tradition ascribes these sculptures to a tribe of Kal-tachar (or stone masons) from the north; that Jaina workmanship is conspicuous; and, that the whole cannot be of very remote date. We presume the work to have been done by artists from Ellore; engaged for that purpose by the king of Mavaliveram; who may possibly be the king of Mavalivanam; of whom a brief mention occurs at p. 25, and who may claim some further notice.

Reverting to Ellore, or Deogerh, its founder, Ramaji, is said to have had Hemanda-Panth for his minister, who invented the Mahratta character. This kind of letters is doubtless more modern than the Hala-Kanada, used we believe at Ellore, and certainly at Mavaliveram. After Ramaji, come the names of Yuvanasha, Dandaka, Indradyumna, Darudhya, and Rama-rajā; which, if names of real kings, may be considered as those of persons named after an earlier line, in a different locality: Rama-rajā, contemporary with Pratapa-Rudra, and able for a time to resist his arms, appears to have been the most illustrious of the series. After him the accounts are obscure and confused; and it suffices to know that this chieftainship, like many others, was at length swallowed up by the Mahomedans; who gave it in their language the name of Dowletabad, or "The abode of plenty."

A casual mention was heretofore made of Nellore, as the seat of an independent principality. It appears to have arisen out of a fragment of the more ancient Soren kingdom; and to have had its independent chiefs, until the powerful ascendancy assumed by the Ganapathi rajahs of Warankal. A contested succession occurring,

* Des. Cata. Intro. p. cvi.

Ganapati-deva was called in, who restored a Nellore rajah that had been expelled by his competitor, named Bayana; but some accounts make the newly installed rajah, named Amboja-deva, to have been a fugitive from the western country, imposed on the people of Nellore as sovereign by Ganapati-deva; the contradiction however, from the state of parties, seems easily solvable. On the death of Amboja, without issue, Manakesava was made viceroy by the king of Warankal. His son was Manava-Siddhi, who patronised the Telugu poet Tikkana Somayaji, continuator of the Telugu poetical version of the Mahabharata, from the third to the twelfth parvam (or book) inclusive; the first and second, perhaps also the third, having been translated by Nanniah Bhatt, a poet, and grammatical commentator.* Contiguous to the Nellore Circar, was the territory of the rajah of Velnad, or Palnad, whom Ganapati-deva, of Warankal, subdued: but this principality subsisted after the downfall of Warankal; and Katama, its chief, being at war with Manava-Siddhi, of Nellore, both rajahs lost their lives in the contest; and the dominions of both were then subdued and appropriated by the Reddis of Kondavir.†

The Kondavir principality arose out of the ruins of the Warankal kingdom, as did other obscure Pallia-carer also; but this one seems to have been most conspicuous. The first of the family was a farmer, who discovered the philosopher's stone, (or some vein possibly of diamonds); who from Anumaconda removed to Kondavir; which fort, with those of Venuconda and Ballamconda, he built and left to his descendants.‡ Seven chiefs of note are numbered among his posterity, of whom Anavama-Reddi is most distinguished. An inscription at Amareswara, on the Krishna river, mentions some of his acts, and fixes him in S.S. 1283, or A.D. 1361. Cāpilesvara, rajah of Orissa, who ruled from A.D. 1451 to 1478, invaded Kondavir, and took Condapillay; beginning the work of subversion, which was completed in the time of Virabhadra Vama-Reddi by Krishna-rayer, of Vijianagur, in the beginning of the sixteenth century. Kondavir continued to be a part of this state, until it also was subdued by the Mahomedans. The rajahs of Kondavir seem to have patronised Telugu literature, during the term of their independent sway.

* Campbell's Teloogoo Grammar, Infra. p. viii. † Des. Cata. Intro. p. cxxxvii.

‡ Des. Cata. Intro. p. cxxxv.

Among other mutabilities of earthly things, the Reddi caste people are now known at Madras chiefly in the humblest occupations.

Farther to the south there was a somewhat early race of princes known by the name of Yadavas, which would imply their having been of the line of Krishna, or simply shepherds. Narayan-varam, (or the gift of Vishnu,) was the name of their capital, but Chandragiri was their strong hold; and Tripeti, the most famous temple. Wherever there is a temple of distinguished note, we may be always sure that a dynasty of kings once existed in the immediate neighbourhood; and thus this last-mentioned temple, which is still a great resort for pilgrims, appears to have owed its origin to the rulers in question. The dynasty is said to have consisted of eighteen princes, of whom Toya-Yadava seems to have been the most distinguished. Chiefly, as it would appear, from his having protected Ramanuja, an apostle of the Vaishnava sect, who being driven out of the Soren kingdom, took refuge above the Ghauts; and at Chandragiri. By his instrumentality, and the aid of the Yadava king, Tripeti, which had been a Saiva-stallam, became a temple of Vishnu, and the Saivas were compelled to depart, not, as is probable, without persecution and bloodshed. The duration of the Yadava princes is stated to have been from S.S. 730 to 1012, or from A.D. 808 to 1080.* In what manner they arose, or by whom finally overcome, does not appear.

Still further south, and above the Ghauts, the Haysalas, or Belalas, were once very powerful. The founder is said to have been of the family of Yadu, or of the line of Krishna. His celebrity arose, in the first instance, from having killed a tiger, receiving as a reward a certain percentage on grain, from the villagers; aided by which tax, he made himself increasingly formidable by means of his followers, and of imposts continually increased. The name Belala is derived from Balam, strength; but it seems open to question, whether this race of kings were not of that agricultural caste of Sudras known by the name of Velaler. The number of these kings is said to have been nine by some accounts, or seventeen by one genealogical list. Inscriptions extend from S.S. 991 to 1235, or A. D. 1069 to 1313; being 244 years. The commencement of their power is uncertain; but at about the latter period they were certainly conquered by the Mahomedans: whether finally destroyed is not so certain.

The first capital of this state was Talcad. To Haysala, the founder, succeeded Vinayaditya, whose son was named Yerayenga, or Vitala-deva; and thus far the Jain religion had prevailed. Vishnuverddhana, the fourth prince, introduced the Vaishnava religion; and patronised Ramanuja, who had been driven from the Soren country. The particular incident tending to bring about the change, may be seen in Colonel Mackenzie's papers on the Jainas, in the fifth volume of the Asiatic Researches. Vishnuverddhana is said to have captured Banavasi, a large town and emporium on the Malabar coast; which, in some of our manuscripts, we find termed Tiruvanasi, and sometimes represented as the capital of the Sera kingdom. The capital of the Belalas was subsequently removed to Dwarasamudra, according to some traditions, by Vijaya-Narasinha. Under this prince, and his predecessor, Vira-Belala, the principality acquired its greatest power. A subsequent prince, termed Saiva-Belala, seems to have patronised the faith of Siva. The decline of power began in his reign; and during it grants appear to have been made in the name of Danaicker, his military prime minister. From this circumstance we may gather a little elucidation of a dark period in the account of Madura, to which we shall have immediately to advert. Dwarasamudra was captured by a Mahomedan army A. D. 1310—11; and it is doubtful if this kingdom ever recovered entire independency, till the time when a new race of princes, at a much later date, arose from a descendant of the Vijianagara dynasty.

Referring now to the Pandion Chronicle, (chap. 5, sect. 1,)* and to the Supplementary Manuscript, (sect. 7,)+ it will be seen that these two authorities agree in dating the Mahomedan conquest of Madura at S. S. 1246, or A. D. 1324, which being shortly after the conquest of the Belala kingdom, would lead to the supposition that the conquerors came thence. The two MSS. also agree in fixing the Mysore conquest at S. S. 1293, or A. D. 1371. Hence we should infer that the Mysore kingdom must have, to some extent, recovered itself during the interval of about forty-seven years. In following particulars the two MSS. widely differ, as a comparative statement will shew.

PANDION-CHRONICLE.

Mahomedan Inyasion . . .	S.S. 1246
Mahomedan Governors . . .	48—1294
Mysore Conquest	1293
Three persons ruled	33—1326
Add one year	1—1327
Leckina-Naicker	47—1374
Five persons	45—1410
Narasi-Naicker	3
Tenna-Naicker	15—1437
Narasu Pillay	4
Timmapa-Naicker	5
Kattiya-Naicker	2
Chinnapa-Naicker	4
Vijaya-Naicker	5
Visvanatha-ayen	9
Varathamanner.
Dumichu-Naicker	1-8
Visvanatha	1-4
Vittilpu rajah	12
Three Naickers	3—1484
Visvanatha-Naicker	1481

SUPPLEMENTARY MANUSCRIPT.

Mahomedan Invasion . . .	S. S. 1246
Mysore Conquest	1293
Soma-Segara	17
Soma-Suntera	35
Raja-Raja	22
Raja-Kunjara	16
Raja-Segara	18
Rama-Varmen	30
Vartha-Raja	19
Cumara-Singhu	16
Bhima-Sena	40
Perataba-rajah	15
Vara-guna	27
Cumara-Chandren	22
Varatungen	8
Kulottungen	19
Chandra-Segara	35
Fifteen kings ruled	345 years,
	or to S. S. 1638
Conquest by Nagama-Naicker .	1354

A difference so entire, as regards rulers, can only be explained, so far as we know, by reference to a practice which appears to have obtained in weak Indian governments, wherein the king seems to have been a mere pageant; and all real power in the hands of the commander of the army. Even so we have seen, just before, that while Saiva-Belala was king of Mysore, the real power was in the hands of Danaicker, his military prime minister: so that even what ought to have been royal grants were made in the name of the general. And by reference to the last section of the Carnataca Dynasty it will be seen that Vijia-Cumara, the last sovereign, nominally such, of that race, was a mere pageant of state in the hands of Myana. We presume, in consequence, that when the Mysore general, Campanudiaver, had driven away the Mahomedans, he set up the Pandion race, according to the statement of the Supplementary Manuscript; but that himself and his descendants held all real power; and are hence recorded in the Pandion Chronicle. The reader may also, if he pleases, consider the uniform tendencies of all past Hindu governments to split up into small principalities, under ambitious chieftains; and if such were the case then, it might in another way account for one king nominally reigning, but over a portion of the country only; while feuds and fightings among the chieftains would account for their number, and for their passing so rapidly off the scene. As regards the accession of the Carnataka lords, the Pandion Chronicle passes by Nagama-Naicker, and speaks of the accession of Visvanatha-Naicker as in S. S. 1481 (A. D. 1559); while the Supplementary Manuscript dates the conquest of Madura by Nagama-Naicker at S. S. 1354 (A. D. 1432). We are persuaded that this last date is too early by about one hundred years; being perhaps the mistake of a wrong figure, 3 for 4, by the writer or copyist of the manuscript. For the date of S. S. 1454 being assigned to Nagama-Naicker, will agree best with the period of Krishna-rayer's reign, as fixed by the best authorities; whose general Nagama-Naicker was. Besides, while the Supplementary Manuscript gives to fifteen reigns 345 years, and makes out the same number by distinct specification, it brings us thereby to a period too low down; while if we take 1293 from 1354 we have only 61 years for the fifteen reigns, or an average of 4 years each, which is too little; while by adding an hundred years more to 1354 we have an average of nearly 11 years to each reign, which is still little enough. Between the first conquest of Nagama-Naicker; his usurping the kingdom; being deposed; the death of Chandra-Segara; and the final election of Visvanatha-Naicker, an interval of some few years must have occurred. Hence, to fix the first conquest by Nagama-Naicker at about S. S. 1460, and the instalment of his son, Visvanatha-Naicker, at about S. S. 1480, seems to us best to accord with the true state of the question: supposing that the interval of twenty years may be tolerably well accounted for; and not pretending to exact and definite certainty.

During this interval from the place where we left them, the Sera and Soren kingdoms must have had their mutations. Being of opinion that manuscript materials exist for making out a somewhat connected account of this period, with regard to these kingdoms, we would not, without timidity, enter on any further notice of them with defective data. The conquest of the Sera-desam, by Aditya-verma-Soren, in S. S. 816, did no.

lead, we are informed by Mr. Wilson,* to a lengthened rule by the Soren kings only; but the principality seems not very long after to have lost its distinct name, and to have been partitioned out between the Belala, Pandion, and Soren monarchies. The Kerala province would appear to have passed from the Belalas to the Rayers of Vijianagaram, who deputed viceroys; of whom eighteen are reckoned as ruling during a period of 216 years. The last of the series was named Cheruman-Perumal, who turned Mahomedan: and, as a consequence, his state was divided into eighteen separate principalities; either by himself, as some accounts narrate, or, as perhaps is most probable, by the setting up for themselves of so many feudal chieftains, consequent to what would be deemed his apostacy. It is stated that these things occurred in the ninth century, which could not be; both because Mahomedanism had not become well known and formidable in the south of India before the thirteenth century, and because any ascendancy of the Rayers of Vijiana garam, we may be certain, could not take place except between A.D. 1200 and 1600. Hence there must be a long interval between S.S. 816, or A.D. 894, and A.D. 1200, very imperfectly filled up. The greater probability is, that during that period the three states before-mentioned, or the Mysore, Madura, and Tanjore sovereignties, ruled the Malabar coast, alternately, or conjointly. The statements in the Supplementary Manuscript (sect. 6,) would appear to confirm such an opinion; for Meru-Suntera-Pandion; therein fixed by calculation at S.S. 628, is said to have ruled over the Sera kingdom; and Vira-Varma (S.S. 959,) to have conquered it; that is, as we presume, from the Soren king, whose conquest we have seen dated at S.S. 816: but as this would make Vira-Varma fight against his own brother, it becomes rather probable that he united with him to repel the Belalas; who, between S.S. 816 and 959, might have acquired the Malayalim country, while the Pandions and Sorens were fighting with each other, as we infer, from the Supplementary Manuscript, was the case in the time of Sadhuru-Vicaren, who preceded Virz-Varma about sixty years.

Turning to the Soren kingdom, we find that Rajarajendra, (adverted to at p. 68,) who it is possible reigned in the middle of the ninth century, was a powerful and warlike prince. He is described as an almost universal conqueror; and of the Pandion king among others; although from the Supplementary Manuscript we can find no place for such conquest, except in repelling the invasion of Maguda-vardanen; but then his era is fixed by the same authority at about S.S. 1634, a disagreement of more than a century, in point of time. So uncertain however are these dates, that a century more or less, may possibly be a tolerable approximation; and it is just probable that the conqueror of Maguda-vardanen may have been Rajarajendra-Soren. Soon after the Soren princes appear to have extended their conquests and their power far northward; and we should presume this might be in the time of Athivira-ramen, (S.S. 1379,) who united his arms with those of the Soren prince; and who perhaps ought to be placed a little earlier in date. But the Yadava princes checked the progress of the Soren invasions in the eleventh century;* and the Kakâteya princes expelled them from the northern provinces in the twelfth century. In that century also the persecution of the Vaishnava zealot, Ramanuja, is fixed. There must have been a continued succession of Soren princes, down to the visit of the Rayer's general, Cottiya-Nagama-Naicker, to replace Chandra-segaren on the throne; and still running parallel with the Pandions, from Athivira-ramen down to the last; though, as we presume, never conquered by the Mahomedans, and most probably benefiting by the unsettled state of the Pandion kingdom after their expulsion, and down to the actual driving of Chandra-segara from his throne: leading to his appeal to the Rayer, and to that entire change which brought about the supremacy of the Carnataca dynasty; at first as viceroys from Vijianagaram, and, on the fall of this state, as independent sovereigns.

*Des. Cata. Intro. p. xciii.

We have in vain looked for distinct indications, as to date, of the removal of the Soren capital from Uriyur. Tradition uniformly assigns as the cause a shower of sand, which buried the town, and destroyed many of the inhabitants. A legendary and absurd mythological reason is assigned, in the profanation of a muni's garden and stealing from it some Sivendha flowers, inducing him to pronounce a malediction on the city; a tale too inane to be dwelt on for a moment; but the fact itself, of a shower of sand, or mud, which seems to be well attested, and to border on the marvellous, if not miraculous, may admit of a few observations as to possible secondary causes. We have more than once seen, at Madras, sand-clouds raised to some height, and as distinctly defined as other clouds; but distinguishable from great peculiarity of colour: these have been only slight and partial phenomena. But particularly in August 1824, and in June 1833, we noticed the whole atmosphere unusually darkened; and a strong wind, followed by considerable deposit of sand from a loaded atmosphere, which did not become clear till after the lapse of a quarter of an hour. The last occurrence of the two was the most remarkable: both took place after a period of unusual drought, and in the season of the strong westerly winds. Let it be supposed that a superincumbent rain-cloud should discharge its contents over this substratum of fine sand raised by the wind; and then, in such a particular locality, a shower of mud must literally descend; such as tradition declares did rain down on Uriyur. The miraculous part of the business, which at the least seems to partake of a special visitation of Divine Providence, is the pouring down of such a mud-shower on one precise locality, the capital of a kingdom. The seat of government was removed, it is said, to Combaconum, which retains some tokens, though not strongly marked, of having been the seat of power. At Maiyaveram, about twenty miles north, there are the remains of a palace and of a choultry on the plan of that of Trimal-Naig at Madura, though smaller and less splendid. At what time the capital was transferred to Tanjore, we have not discovered. It must have been antecedent to the march of Cottama-Nagama-Naicker to restore Chandra-Segara (about S. S. 1460, A. D. 1538); for his dethronement is specifically attributed to the king of Tanjore. We find notices afterwards, in the Carnataca Dynasty, of differences between the king of Tanjore and Visvanatha-Naicker, leading to the transfer of Trichinopoly from the former to the latter. By the end of the seventeenth century the Madura lords had become too formidable to the king of Tanjore, unaided. Having invoked the aid of the Mahrattas, Ekoji, the half-brother of Sivaji, at the head of an army, defended him from his neighbour, but proceeded to assume the government; * thus commencing the Mahratta dynasty of Tanjore, and ending the ancient

* Des. Cata. Intro. p. lxxxix.

* Des. Cata. Intro. p. xc.

Soren line of princes, about two centuries after the extinction of the ancient race of Pandions.

We have now only to add some notice of Vijianagaram, and shall have completed the outline survey, which connects the leading manuscript in this volume with those in the preceding one.

The origin of the Vijianagaram kingdom is not without attendant obscurity, both as to manner and date. A distinguished scholar, named Madhava, with the titular appellation of Vidyaranya (or forest of learning), according to the mythological part of the statement, propitiated the favor of the goddess Bhuvanesvari, (a form of Parvati), and was in consequence directed to the discovery of a hidden treasure, which he bestowed on two brothers, named Harihara and Bukha-Raya. These last two persons appear to have been sons of Sangama, most probably a feudal chieftain of Tuluva, under the Belala rajas: but they themselves were, apparently, soldiers of fortune, who had been in the service of the Warankal kings; and, on the overthrow of this state, by the Mahomedans, all accounts agree, that the two brothers carried with them a remnant of military forces, who were Telinganas; and, by their means, aided by the counsels and wealth (however acquired) of Mudhava Vidyaranya, founded a new city on the south bank of the Tungabhadra, or Tembudra river; which afterwards became very extensive, connected suburbs being on the north bank. The date usually given for this location is S. S. 1258, A. D. 1336; and the building, according to the first plan, is said to have been finished S. S. 1265, or A. D. 1343.* This date Mr. Wilson † supposes may be too early, because the earliest of the grants of Bukha-Raya is dated A. D. 1370, and the latest, 1375. But this might very well be, if Harihara reigned, in chief, down to A. D. 1350,‡ and Bukha-Raya thenceforwards and down to 1378. And if, as Colonel Wilks has stated,§ the capture of Warankal, in A. D. 1323, led to the formation of this more southern kingdom, which was destined, for two centuries, to check the progress of the Mahomedans, then it would seem that the foundation must have been as early as A. D. 1336. Mr. Wilson indeed admits that the traditionary chronology is probably not very far from the truth. A list from Permatutur, it may be noted, fixes that foundation so early as A. D. 1215. The descepdants of Harihara (who is sometimes called Aka-Hurryhur) have been termed the Hurryhur dynasty; and sometimes that of Kuruba. The number is thirteen.* The names are—Vijaya, thirteen years; Visvadeva, eight years; Rama-deva, seven years; Virupaksha, five years; Mallikarjuna, seven years; Ramachandra, seven years; Saluvaganda, seven years; Devaraya, fifteen years; Kumbhaya, five years; Kumara, four years; Saluaganda, seven years; Saluva-Narasinh, forty-nine years; Immadideva, eleven years; coming down to A. D. 1488, and dating the accession of Vijaya in A. D. 1341. Some of the names are also conjectured to be interpolated.† The names and dates substantiated by grants are stated by Mr. Wilson to be—Bukha-Raya, A. D. 1370—75; Harihara, 1385, 1429; Deva-Raya, 1426—58; Mallikarjuna, 1451—65; Virupaksha, 1473—79. It is not indeed necessary to suppose, that every prince must have made a grant, and every grant recorded; yet still the difference between A. D. 1479 and 1488 is unimportant. Details of events in this interval, after the foundation of the capital, are not attainable. The name of the city is said to have been at first Vidyanagara,‡ or the City of Learning, in compliment to Madhava: but was afterwards called Vijayanagara, or the City of Victory. The progress of the state appears to have been considerable in Tuluva, Karnata, Telingana; but checked, on the north, by the Mahomedan Bhamini sultans. A rising state does not usually at first attract jealous notice from its neighbourhood; and, at a somewhat later time, the resistance made to the attempt of Mahomed III. to remove his capital from Delhi to Deogherh led to great weakness, dissensions, and divisions among the natural enemies of this state; by which means, as Colonel Wilks has remarked, the rising kingdom was allowed to gain strength, before the subsequent struggles, which finally ended in its overthrow. Nevertheless, from circumstances only obscurely recorded, a change of dynasty took place by the accession of Narasinha to the throne. At all events he came to it irregularly; and was of a different family and country to those preceding him.

* Hamilton's East India Gazetteer—Art. Bijnagur. † Des. Cata. Intro. p. cxliii.

‡ Hamilton, lb.

§ South of India, chap. 1.

* Des. Cata. pp. 291—2.

† Ib. p. 293.

‡ Colonel Wilks, and Hamilton's Gazetteer.

His reign was twenty-one years, between A. D. 1488 and 1509.* His illegitimate son, Krishna-Raya, was the most famous of all the Narasinha dynasty: his conquests were extensive, and his power, nominally at least, very great. It is not certain that internal good government kept pace with external splendor and conquest: probably not so. His reign is fixed at A. D. 1509 to 1529† or twenty years. Mr. Wilson states ‡ that it was this prince who sent Nagama-Naicker to assist the Pandion king against the Soren invader. In the Carnataca Dynasty, or smaller MSS. we do not find the name of the Rayer specified. Colonel Wilks (in a note, p. 54, chap. 2,) says that Nagana-Naidoo founded the dynasty of Madura Naicks, being sent by Achuta-Rayer, (successor to Krishna-Rayer,) at about A. D. 1532. This is seventy-two years later than we had taken the liberty, by a conjectural emendation, to place him (p. 88); and it does not consist with the date usually assigned to Krishna-Rayer. The Carnataca Dynasty does not give us the date of Nagama-Naicker's usurpation, nor that of the accession of Visvanatha-Naicker; but it fixes a very important proceeding in his reign at S. S. 1354, or A. D. 1432, being the same date which the Supplementary Manuscript assigns to the conquest by Nagama-Naicker, and considerably antecedent to the accession of the Narasinha dynasty. We presume, therefore, that this date is much too early, because some considerable time must have elapsed between the two events, and for reasons before urged. Upon the whole, there would seem to be a greater concurrence of circumstances in the person of Krishna-Rayer than any other; but the dates do not accord. Suppose we adopt the conjectural emendation of 3 being written for 4, adding one hundred years to the date in the Supplementary Manuscript, which is S. S. 1354; then S. S. 1454, or A. D. 1532, brings us to the third year of either Sadasiva or Achuta-Rayer, and to the precise date given by Colonel Wilks; which, by the way, we had not noticed when adopting the conjecture in question. Possibly this date may be the exact truth; but if so, we must carry the correction along with the dates given in the Carnataca Dynasty. It is some confirmation that it accords with the date assigned to Visvanatha-Naicker in the Pandion Chronicle, which is S. S. 1481, or A. D. 1559, allowing twenty-seven years for intermediate events. The matter may perhaps be further attended to as we proceed. Nagama-Naicker, at all events, must have been general to Krishna-Rayer, having the southernmost portion of that king's extensive conquests assigned to him as his military government. It is also probable that the complaint of Chandra-Segara-Pandion was preferred to Krishna-Rayer towards the close of his reign; and that the orders to repel the Soren and replace the Pandion king were given by him. During the accomplishment, Krishna-Rayer in all probability died; and the circumstances immediately following his decease would no doubt encourage Nagama-Naicker to set up for himself in the newly conquered kingdom. For Krishna-Rayer had no legitimate male children; and Achuta-Rayer, the nearest heir,* variously termed brother, cousin, and nephew, was absent; and the late Rayer's minister, ostensibly according to the deceased king's order, set up Sadasiva, a pageant prince, under his own tutelage, until the return of Achuta-Rayer, and his assumption of the sovereignty. Here are circumstances very favorable to Nagama-Naicker's rebellion; and even without express treachery to his former master. If such were the state of circumstances, we must presume that though Visvanatha-Naicker rose into notice and employ under Krishna-Rayer, yet that it was by one of the latter's successors, that the founder of the Carnataca dynasty was formally designated to the viceroyalty of Madura.

* Des. Cata. p. 292.

† Ib.

‡ Ib. Intro. p. lxxx.

As the decline of the Vijianagaram state after Krishna-Rayer, and its total overthrow by the Mahomedan princes, after the battle of Tellicotta, in which Rama-rajá, the ruling prince, was slain, must come under further notice in the progress of our annotations on the Carnataca Dynasty, it will not be needful to proceed with the subject in this connective survey. Our inquiries have had a wide range, often with feeble light to guide them: the conclusions come to by consequence are not always certain; but they give us at least some rude traces, and general outlines, sufficient to enable us to perceive, that the course of public affairs in the Peninsula of India was, on the whole, as busy, as fluctuating, as sanguinary, and as iniquitous, as those of any other portion of the world during the same period.

* Des. Cata. Intro. p. cxiv.

NOTES.

PANDION CHRONICLE.—CHAP. IV. SEC. 5.

The Rayer dynasty in this section is not placed in its due chronological order; but considerably too early, as the foregoing survey will suffice to make evident. The names also of the different rulers are not given in regular order; and the periods assigned to their reigns appear too great. The names and dates given in a page a little preceding this, were taken from the first volume of Professor Wilson's Descriptive Catalogue. It may not be amiss, for the sake of general comparison, to add the names and dates as they are given, from materials furnished by Colonel Mackenzie, by A. D. Campbell, Esq. in the Introduction to his Teloogoo Grammar.* It is described by that gentleman as, "Translation of an extract from the Gutpurtee Manuscript in his (Colonel Mackenzie's) valuable and extensive collection, containing, in the form of a prophecy, a chronological account of these kings;" and is the following one.

Y. M. D.

"A.S. 1258, A.D. 1336—1 In the Saleevahan Sakum 1258, in the year Daatoo, on the 2d of Vysakum month, on the new moon, Hurryhur Raya will commence his reign at Anagoondy.

	The whole of his reign will be	14	0	0
1272,	1350—2 After him, his brother Booka Royaloo will succeed in that kingdom and will reign	29	8	0
1301,	1379—3 Next Hurryhur Royaloo the second will rule	22	0	0
1323,	1401—4 After him Veejaya Booka Royaloo will rule	17	0	9
1340,	1418—5 Upon his death Palla Booka Royaloo will rule	16	0	0
1356,	1434—6 After which Gunda Dava Royaloo will rule	20	0	0
1376,	1454—7 After him Raja Saker Royaloo will rule	0	9	0
1376,	1455—8 After that Veejayooloo will rule	0	10	0
1378,	1456—9 Proudha or Pratapa Dava Royaloo will rule	21	0	0
1399,	1477—10 After him Veera Royaloo will rule	4	0	0
1403,	1481—11 After him Mallicar Royaloo will govern	6	0	0
1409,	1487—12 Ramachundra Royaloo will next rule	1	0	0

		Y. M. D.
A. S. 1410, A. D. 1488—13	Veeroopacha Royaloo will govern	2 0 0
1412,	1490—14 Narasinga Royaloo will rule	5 0 0
1417,	1495—15 After him Narasa Royaloo will rule (including 5 years in the name of)	13 0 0
1426,	1504—16 His son Veera Narsimha Royaloo from the Cycle year Raktachee A. S. 1426.
1430,	1509—17 The second son of Narasa Royaloo , named Krishna Royaloo , will rule from the Cycle year Sookla of the Visaka month	21 0 0
1452,	1530—18 From the Cycle year Veecrooty Achoota Dava Royaloo will reign	12 0 0
1464,	1542—19 From thence Saleca Timma Raaze . From the begin- ning of the Cycle year Soobacroot in the Jasta month, Rama Royaloo will rule 22 years in the name of . . .	22 0 0
1486,	1564—20 Sadaseevoo Royaloo and keeping him in his pos- session. The kingdom of Veejeyanagur will then end with Rama Royaloo .

1451,	1569—	The country will be in great confusion then for . . .	5 0 0
1451,	1569—21	In the Cycle year Pramodoota Teroomal Royaloo will establish himself as king, at Penoogonda , and will rule	0 11 0
1494,	1572—22	His son Sree Runga Royaloo will then reign from the Cycle year Angeerasa of the 10th of Vysakam . .	14 0 0
1507,	1585—23	After which, from the Cycle Paardeva of the 10th of Maugum of the full moon Vencataputty Royaloo will rule 28	8 15

After him, of the kings of the Chundra race none will remain; and foreign kings will rule the land, de-riving their authority from no legal right.

1536,	1614—24	First Chicka Royaloo will rule	0 4 0
1552,	1630—25	After him Rama Rauze , changing his true name to that of Ramadava Rayel , for	15 5 0

After this, the country will be in great disorder for some time, and prodigies and portentous omens will appear between the year Bahoodanya and Nundana . . .

(Here the Account terminates in a prophetical annunciation of a Deliverer of the Hindoo race.) From circumstances, observes Colonel Mc.Kenzie, we may infer that this account was written A. D. 1630."

PANDION CHRONICLE, CHAP. V. SEC. 1.—SUPPLEMENTARY
MANUSCRIPT, SEC. 7.

The irruption of the Mahomedans into the Peninsula seems to have been accompanied with as much vigour, rapidity, success, and barbarity, as in any other instance of their well known predatory invasions. The first Mahomedan force that crossed the Tapti river* was led by Alla-u'din, nephew and afterwards successor of Ferose, the Patan king of Delhi, in A.D. 1293. This expedition was directed against Deva-jiri, or Deogerh, heretofore mentioned (p. 82—3), the Tagara of Ptolemy, and the modern Dowletabad. The place was then plundered, and the extent of the spoils encouraged another invasion, when the place was finally taken, and Rajah Ramdeva was carried prisoner to Delhi, in 1306, by Kafoor, or Melick-Naib, general of Alla-u'din. The first army that crossed the Kistna river was led by Kafoor against Dhoor-Summooder,† (more correctly Dwara-Samudra,) the capital of the Belala kingdom, then under the government of Belal-deva. This was A.D. 1310. It is intimated by Ferishta‡ that this incursion was partly caused by the failure of an expedition sent against Warankal in the preceding year. He tells us, that in A.D. 1309, Alla I. sent to reduce Warankal, without success; and next year Melick-Naib was sent out by him, who invaded the Carnatic, (meaning the Mysore country,) took Belal-deo prisoner, and then pushed on his depredations to Seet Bunder Ramessar, a Mahomedan way of expressing the Sethu, or (in former days) isthmus of Ramiseram. It is added, that this general built a mosque there;§ and that he again invaded the Dekhan (or South) in 1312. The same author, in another work, according to Colonel Dow's translation, assigns a further cause as the excitement to the attack and plunder of Belal-deo. Alla I., who had come to the throne by the murder of his uncle Ferose, meditated the placing himself at the head of a new religion, and also devised a scheme of universal conquest. Alla-ul-mulk, the chief religious authority at Delhi, put his life in his hand, and ventured to dissuade the monarch against his scheme of a new religion; prevailing unexpectedly in this point, the king sought to gain his approbation of the plan of universal conquest, preparatory to which he had already vaingloriously assumed the name of Secunder-Sani, or Alexander the Second: the religious man pointed out strong reasons against this measure also, and advised the prosecution of conquests in the south of India.|| This advice prevailed; and Melick-Naib Kafoor was appointed to the command. If any thing could add to the ignominy of being conquered, it might be found in the infamous character of Alla I., and the, if possible, still more detestable Kafoor. The spoils of this expedition against Dwara-Samudra were immense: the historian speaks of 96,000 maunds of gold,¶ and chests of jewels and pearls; silver, being thought an incumbrance, was thrown away by the soldiers in their return. Some allowance must be made for exaggeration. There is no doubt however that en-

* Colonel Wilks, South of India, chap. 1.

† Its site has been identified by Colonel Mackenzie with the ruins near to Hallabi, 106 miles N. W. of Seringapatam. Colonel Wilks, Ib.

‡ History of the Dekhan, Scott's translation. § Scott's Ferishta. || Dow's Ferishta, 2d edition, vol. 1, p. 251.

¶ Ib. p. 277.

couragement to a great extent was given to an invasion of the South. How far Kafoor penetrated in his second expedition, does not distinctly appear. Our manuscripts fix the conquest of Madura at S. S. 1246, or A. D. 1324; and, as this date agrees with the statement in Dow's Ferishta, it renders the account of Kafoor's having penetrated to Ramiseram rather questionable. For the complete subjugation of the South is therein ascribed to Mahomed III.,* and stated to have been accomplished in 1326. He is said to have "reduced the Carnatic to the extremities of the Dekhan and from sea to sea, obliging all the rajas to pay him tribute." This Mahomed III., of all human monsters, was one of the most extravagantly absurd and ferocious. His leading out his army on a hunting excursion into a peaceful district, then telling them they were come to hunt men,† and carrying back thousands of heads, hanging them over the city walls, is a sufficient specimen. From the expressions used in the Pandion Chronicle, the Mahomedan conquest would appear to have been attended with great cruelties; and it must be remembered, that at that period the Mahomedan armies were endued with a religious frenzy, as considering themselves divinely commissioned to root out idolaters and punish idolatry,‡ wherever they could acquire the opportunity and the power to do so. Under these circumstances, the removing the image of the tutelary deity into a place of greater safety, in the Travancore country, was but a natural proceeding on the part of the Bramins. We, on the other hand, may feel more sympathy with the people than with the images. The Mahomedan rule at this time, under various chiefs, most likely generals or military commanders, is fixed at forty-eight years by the MSS. or from S. S. 1246 down to 1293. This latter date, left blank in the Pandion Chronicle, is given in the Supplementary Manuscript. It may be observed that the construction of the manuscripts, the names agreeing with plural verbs, induced us to translate as there written. We have subsequently been inclined to conjecture that Nemian might not mean a proper name, but one nominated from Athi-sultan-mulk, although the construction rather favors the translation given. Before the death of Mahomed III. he had lost, by his absurd and impolitic measures, whatever had been gained by his predecessors or himself; and the Patan empire of Delhi, we are told by Ferishta; was reduced to the same limits which bounded it before the successful reign of Alla.§

PANDION CHRONICLE, CHAP. V. SEC. 2, 3.—SUPPLEMENTARY
MANUSCRIPT, SEC. 8.

We have before adverted (p. 87) to the difficulty of reconciling the differences, in these

* Dow's Ferishta, vol. 1, p. 301.

† Ib. p. 308.

‡ We need not perhaps be surprised at such a persuasion resting on their minds, when we find the "sure word of prophecy" declaring what should be the character of Mahomedan armies. Revelation, chap. 9, v. 16—21. The reader, who may not have attended to this view of the subject, will do well to consult Bishop Newton's sound and judicious exposition of prophecy (vol. 2, chap. 9). The period assigned to their licence he fixes between A. D. 1281 and 1672. The calculation, however, pertains to Europe and professing Christians, and also relates more especially to the Furcans. The Afghans, or Patans, and afterwards the Moguls, appear to have had a somewhat different office assigned to them in the mysterious dispensations, or permission, of Divine Providence.

§ Dow's Ferishta, vol. 1, p. 323.

places, of the two manuscripts, and may now simply refer the reader thither. We should be quite at a loss, but for the Mahomedan annals, to account for so speedy a recovery of the Mysore power after the defeat of Belala-deva and plunder of his capital in A. D. 1310–11. The Mackenzie MSS. or inscriptions, yield no distinct traces of their power or influence after that disaster. But from Ferishta we are enabled conclusively to infer, that either the conquered king himself, or his son, must have retained the kingdom, most probably in the character of a tributary to Delhi. It will be remembered also, that in A. D. 1323, Warankal, the capital of the Ganapathi kingdom, fell before the Mahomedans; and, according to the account given by Ferishta, in A. D. 1343, Kisnanaig, son of Lidderdeo, of Arinkil (or Warankal), went privately to Belal-deo, the prince of the Carnatic, (that is Carnata,) and represented to him the importance of combining against the Mahomedans. For such a league the time was certainly favorable: since Mahomed III. had wasted all his means; had made himself ridiculous and hateful in the eyes of his subjects; had depreciated the currency of the country; and had failed in an expedition against China, wherein numbers of his best troops had perished, partly by the snows of Himalaya, and want of supplies, partly by the Chinese army opposing the invaders. Under such circumstances the league formed by the aboriginal native princes proved formidable and successful. Ferishta says, that Belal-deo built a strong city on the frontier of his dominions, and called it Bigur; that the Mahomedans were driven away on all sides; and, that within a few months Mahomed had no possession in the Dekhan† except Dowletabad: being the city which he had so injudiciously sought to make his capital, giving it this name, instead of its former one of Dwara-Samudra. Whether Bigur be the same with Bednore; or whether it may intend Vijianagaram, or some other locality, we do not determine. Ferishta states, that at the death of Mahomed III., A. D. 1446, a kind of empire was long established in the Dekhan independant of the crown of Delhi.‡ This empire must, apparently, be the rising kingdom of Vijianagaram; and though its origin is not very clearly stated, either in Mahomedan or native annals, yet it is probable that the beginning of real power must have been antecedent to the foundation of Vijianagaram, as commonly reputed, in A. D. 1336; and the league before mentioned, which may have had the aid of counsel from Madhava-Vidyaranya, might have been its real commencement, or between the overthrow of Warankal, A. D. 1323, and the era of the foundation, 1336.

It is sufficient for our immediate object thus to have a clue given whereby to trace the possibility of a Mysore army driving away the Mahomedans within so short a period of time after the sacking of Dwara-Samudra, and forty-eight years after the capture of Madura; the date assigned to this rescue S. S. 1293, A. D. 1371, agrees very well with the other indications given. Campanudiaver, the general of the Mysore rajah's forces, we suppose to have been a feudal chieftain as well as military commander: for Udiaver, we conceive to be the Tamil mode of spelling the word which Colonel Wilks terms Wadeyar, that is, the lord of thirty-three villages; a title subsequently assumed by the Mysore kings of another dynasty, and borne also as a title by the Jangama priests. The reader must be apprized, or reminded, that the reigning dynasty at Mysore did not succeed to the throne until a later period than the one now in question. In the Preface to this work, a conjecture was thrown out as to the possibility of this Mysore general having established himself, or his own descendants, in authority at Madura; but, if so, it must, in all probability, have been in the character of Dalavayi, or military commander, often more authoritative than the regal post itself: as the question has been discussed, at p. 87 of this volume, to that we must again refer. Whether the Mysore general extended his authority to Tanjore; whether the Mahomedans had acquired any power there; or whether the capital of the Soren kingdom had yet been removed from Uriyur, we cannot determine; though some of the Mackenzie MSS. would probably yield, on examination, the requisite data. The Mysore general, most probably, came to the rescue of Madura direct from the Ghauts, by the Gujulhuttee pass.

† Dow's Ferishta, vol. 1, p. 312. ‡ Ib. vol. 2, p. 45.

The miracle in the Madura temple, on the entry of Campanu liaver, will not be so surprising to the reader—who considers the various modes of entry accessible to the Bramins—as the same miracle seems to have been in the eyes of the Mysore general. Most temples have private doors, or else wickets in the greater gates; and, besides, a little light is thrown on this subject by the thirty-fourth Tiruvilliadel.

PANDION CHRONICLE, CHAP. V. SEC. 4.—SUPPLEMENTARY MANUSCRIPT, SEC. 9.—CARNATAKA DYNASTY, SEC. 1.

We now come to the point where the last-mentioned manuscript, the leading one in this volume, meets the two others. The much greater fulness of details in the latter manuscript will enable us to dispense, for sometime, with any further minute attention to either of the two former ones. The discrepancy of dates in these two, as to the commencement of the rule of the northern viceroys, has been adverted to and reconciled:* we have no date mentioned, in the last one, till section 5; and by the time when we come to that section, we shall have had the assistance of dates in some minor manuscripts, to be adduced in evidence on various details.

The writer of the History of the Carnataka Governors, termed by us, for brevity's sake, the Carnataka dynasty, has made a slip of the pen at the outset, inasmuch as Penukondai is a distinct place, at some distance from Vijianagaram, and of later foundation; but he probably intended Anagundi, and being a Southron, confounded the two together. Anagundi was a suburb on the north bank of the Toomboodra, and Vijianagaram-Proper on the south bank; somewhat analogous, in the main feature of the case, to the city of London and the borough of Southwark. The remaining ruins attest the ancient extent; and, to some degree, the bygone splendor; though on the latter point European and Asiatic ideas widely differ. The Durga referred to in this first section, is most probably the form termed Bhuvaneswari, which the sage Madhava Vidyaranya is said to have propitiated, so as to lead to the first foundation of the town, by the two brothers Harihara and Bukka-rayer.

We infer, that from the time of Vicramaditya downwards, the worship of the sanguinary goddess Kali had continued to prevail in those northern portions of the Peninsula. The Nava-rattiri, a festival of nine days to her honor, was publicly observed, we shall see, by the offset kingdoms in Mysore and Madura; and, from the mode of celebration in these, we infer that a main point of the amusements was in the combats of gladiators with wild beasts, on the model of ancient Rome and modern Spain. This festival in honor of Durga still continues to be celebrated in Saiva temples, and throughout the Peninsula; though, of course, not in the same national manner: it is held in the month Peratasi, or September. At that time peons, or soldiers, pay homage to their weapons, the same in kind as to their idols; the artisan worships his implements; the writer does divine honors to his pen; and the school-boy makes pujai to the books he is learning. So puerile is idolatry in its concomitants! as if the instrument were more than the hand that wields it; not to say any thing further of the system. Our readers of course are endowed with reflection; and they will not, we presume, require any further remarks on the contents of this section of the manuscript, whether legendary or historical, either to strengthen their credence, or add to their information.

CARNATAKA DYNASTY, SEC. 2.

Previous to making any observations of our own, on this portion of our subject, we would introduce the mention of some minor manuscripts in our possession; which, from the preface to them, appear to have been copied out and put together by the head Bramin at Madura, in consequence of the visit of the late F. W. Ellis, Esq. to that place, in the year 1819. They stop at different periods; leaving open the conjecture of their having been originally written at earlier and various dates; but, as a whole, they form one native book, as large as the manuscript under annotation. With a slight exception of some frivolous or wholly irrelevant matter, they bear on the elucidation of this northern dynasty which ruled at Madura. Hence, notwithstanding their containing some repetitions of matters before narrated, we shall introduce them, seriatim, as they generally add something new, or put some known fact in a new point of observation. We know not if these MSS. came into the possession of Mr. Ellis, but suppose they did not, from his having died at Ramiseram so soon after his visit to Madura. The head Bramin was then named Mirtanjeya-Pattar; and, in order to avoid circumlocution, we shall refer to them as the Mirtanjeya Manuscripts. The first of them, goes over the matter of the opening sections of the Carnataka Dynasty; but with a few additional circumstances. It is the following one.

A DESCRIPTION OF THE CARNATAKA LORDS

Who ruled in the Madura country; at first governed by Kula-Segara-Pandion, and lastly by Chandra-Segara-Pandion.

The Maha Raja, who ruled in Vijianagaram, had placed Nagama-Naicker in charge of collecting the reveques, or tribute, arising from the southern countries; being Nanchi-nattu, or Travancore, and the district of Arcot. The Rayer's own army consisted of 20,000 cavalry, and 6,000 elephants, which were placed under Nagama-Naicker's command; besides which, he had of his own retainers 6,000 cavalry, and 20,000 infantry. While he thus held an extensive and responsible charge under the Rayer, he made a pilgrimage to Casi, in consequence of having no child; and there, in the presence of the god called Visvanatha, he, during forty days, maintained a restricted diet, without salt, and was engaged in performing devotions. On the forty-first night, in the third jamam (or watch), the god Visvanatha appeared in a dream, and said, "For a length of time you have been paying homage to me. To-morrow, when you are performing the morning ablution in the Ganges, we will exhibit to you the image of an emerald lingam; if you render homage to it, you will receive a son, and will acquire great fame." According to the dream, on the morrow, when they bathed in the Ganges, an emerald lingam struck upon their feet. On examining the ground with their hands, they found a very beautiful lingam. Taking it up with unspeakable joy, having come into the presence of the god, and having performed many charitable donations, receiving the favor of the god, they again returned to Vijianagaram. While they were occupied in performing ceremonies of worship to the emerald lingam, the wife of Nagama-Naicker was delivered of a son. They named the child Visvanatha-Naicker, and day by day had him instructed in learning and general knowledge, and in the art of fencing; until, at the age of sixteen years, the young man had become very accomplished.

முனமதுரையில்குலசேகர்பாண்டியன முதலகடைசி சந்திரசேகர பாண்டியனுக்
 குப்பி ருக்கறனனாடகத் துரையளபட்டம் ஆண்ட பேர்களுடையவிபரம். பென்னவெ
 ன்ருலவிசையறகறம் மகாராச-ரா-ராயர்வர்கள்தொச்சகாநாஅதிகாறத்துக்கு ஆறக்காடு
 முதலநாருசியநாட்டுவனா க்ரும்ராச்சியத்திலவருலாருர்பணம் யாவததும்நாகமநாப
 க்கர்வர்கள மாரிபத்தாயசெயது ராயர்வர்கள் காசாதபெலாயிருபதி நாயிர்வருதினா ஆ
 ராயிர்மயானையிவர்விசாரணையாகநேமிததுயி துவலலாமல நாகமநாயக்கர்வர்களசொந
 தத்தில ஆராயிர்வருதியுமியிருபதியுயிர்ம்கா ல்பலமும் வச்சுக்கொண்டு ராயர்வர்கள்
 இடத்திலசுலவிசாரணையுயிருக்குமிடத்திலிவருக்கு புத்திரசநதானமில்லாமலகாசிக்
 குசுதிபுருஷிள இருவரும் போயவிசுவனா தறசனனிதானத்திலநாறப்பதுனா அலவன
 மாயசாப்பிட்டுக்கொண்டுபசணைபண்ணிக்கொண்டிருநத்திலநாறப்பததொருநாளரா
 ததிரிமுணுசாமத்துக்கு விசுவனா தசுவாமிஇவர்களுக்கு சொறப்பணம் சாதிச்சதுவெரு
 நாளாயநம்மைக்கோரிபிராத்தினைபண்ணிக்கொணரியிருந்ததீநிகளேநாணையதினம்கெங்
 கையிலபிரதவிதானம் பண்ணுகுர் போதுமறகதவிங்க சொருபமாயகூட்சிகொடுக்கு
 ரோம்அறதவிங்கததைபூசைபண்ணிக்கொண்டு வறதாலபுத்திரசநதானம்உண்டாகுது
 அனைக்கிறத்தி பெறநிருப்பீர்களபென்று சொறப்பணம்சாதிச்சமெகாக்கி உதையாதி
 யிலசுவாமிபையிராப்பததிச்சுஷதானம்பண்ணுகுர்போதுமர்கதவிங்கம்முளங்காவில
 தட்டுபட்டுது பென்னமோவென்றுதடவிப்பாறக்கும்போதுமகாதேசோபுருசமாய
 மர்கதவிங்கம்கயயிலகப்பட்டுது அபாறமானசநதோஷததுடனே யெறிததுக்கொண்
 டுகவாமிசனனிதானத்துக்குவதது அனெகதானதறம்மங்களசெயதுசுவாமிகடாட்சம்
 பெறனுமருபடியெதாவிதானம் விசையறகர்ம்வறதுசேநது மர்கதவிங்கததுக்கு பூசை
 புனஷக்காரம்செயதுகொணரியிருக்கும்போதுநாகமநாயக்கர்வர்களபெணசாதிக்கெந்
 ப்பமாயருமார்பிறதநார்அயருக்கு விசுவனா தநாயக்கொன்றுபேரிட்டுநாளுக்குநாள
 விததைபுத்திசாமுசாதனையளகறதுசுல்லத்திலேயுமகாப்பிறவீணிதையாசபதிருவயசு
 ஆச்சுதுஅப்போதுராயர்வர்கள் சமஷிதானத்துட்டம்நவாரத்தினைபண்ணுகைக்கிராய

At that time, according to the established custom of the capital, it was incumbent on the Rayer to go out to hunt during the Nava-rattiri feast; and having spread nets, on a wild buffalo being caught, then it must, according to rule, be presented as a sacrifice to Durga. Visvanatha-Naicker, being sixteen years of age, went out to the king's hunt at the Nava-rattiri feast, when the animal, as usual, was caught; but it had uncommonly strong and lengthy horns, extending even to the rump, so that no one could, by a single blow, separate the head from the body; and there was great grief, arising from an apprehension of danger threatened to the state. The Durga appeared to Visvanatha, and bid him go and offer his services on the occasion; adding, that if the blow were struck with his hand, the head would fall from the animal's shoulders. Accordingly Visvanatha-Naicker went to the Rayer; and on asking permission to cut off the animal's head, the same was accorded. On striking the beast, he severed the head from the shoulders at a blow. The Rayer was greatly rejoiced, and praised him highly, giving to him the royal jewels which were on his own person; and said, "As you were born by a peculiar favor of the gods, I shall make you ruler of some kingdom:" thus giving him a promise of future promotion.

Soon after the kings of the Anga, Vanga, Calinga, Casmira, and Nepala countries withheld the tribute to the Rayer which they had been accustomed to pay; of which he received information from his agents employed in the different zillahs. The Rayer, being displeased, sent Visvanatha-Naicker, at the head of an army, and he conquered all these kings; and having carefully arranged for the future payment of the tribute, according to past customs, he returned to the Rayer; and, on reporting his proceedings, the Rayer was much satisfied with him, made him many presents, and kept him near his own person, he being in high favor.

During this state of circumstances, Vira-Segara-Soren, king of Tanjore, forcibly took possession of the kingdom of Madura, ruled by Chandra-Segara-Pandion; in consequence of which act, the latter came to the Rayer and preferred a complaint. The Rayer sent for Nagama-Naicker, and said to him, "Since the country of Chandra-Segara-Pandion is within the boundaries of your jurisdiction, you will go and conquer Vira-Segara-Soren; and, by every available means, having obtained posses-

ஸ்வர்களே டைக்குபோயவையளகடிகாடறியெருமைக்கிடாயபிடிச்சவநதுதறக்
 கைக்கிபெலிகுதிததுவாராதிரிபணிகைமாமூலாயிநடநதுவருகுறதுவிசுவநாதநா
 யக்கருக்குபறினாவதுவருஷம்நவராத்திரிபணிகைக்கிராயர்வர்களே டைக்கு
 போயகாட்டுமகிஷம்பிடிச்சகொணடுவததிலஅநதமகிஷிததுக்குகொம்புபெரிசாய
 வாலுமட்டுக்கும்பினேடிருநதபடியினுலேயிததைஒருவெட்டிலேயார்வெட்டிது
 தக்கைக்கிபெலிகுதிக்கப்போறார்களேயேதோசமஷிதானதுக்குலயம்வருகுநாயிருக்
 குதெனதுவெசமையிருக்கும்வரையிலவிசுவனாதநாயக்கர்சொறப்பனததிலதுக்கை
 யம்மாளவநதுஅநதமகிஷிததைநீவெட்டுகுறும்பெனதுகேட்டுஅநதமகிஷிததைவெ
 ட்டினுலொண்டுதுண்டமாயலுரும்பெனதுசொல்லிஅநதமெரைக்கிராயர்வர்களே இடத்
 துக்குவிசுவனாதநாயக்கர்போயநானவெட்டுகுறோனெனதுஉததிர்வுகேட்டதில்அப்
 படிக்கிததானேஉததிர்வுகுதிதுவிசுவநாதநாயக்கர்மகிஷிததைவெட்டினதிலகொம்பு
 அறதுஒருவெட்டிலொண்டுதுண்டமாச்சுதுராயர்வர்களேமகாசநதோஷிமாயிவரைமி
 கவும்கொண்டாடிஅப்போதுதரிச்சயிருநதராயபூஷணங்கள்யெல்லாம்பிவருக்குதரிச்
 சுமகாவர்ப்பிறசாததினாலேபிறநதவர்ஆகச்சேநம்மைப்போலேஒருதேசதுக்குசி
 ம்மாசனாதிபதியாயசெயலிக்குறோம்பெனதுசொல்லிவாக்குக்குதிதுயிருநதார்கள்
 இப்படியிருக்கும்போதுவடக்கேஅங்கவங்ககளிங்ககாசமீர்னெபாளதேசததிலராசா
 க்களராயர்வர்களுக்குமாமூலாயக்குதிதுவநததோப்பாபணங்குடாமலநிராகரிச்சுக்
 கொண்டிருநததிலசறக்கார்மனுஷிளஅநதஅநதசிலலாவுலேயிருநதுளனாதிஅனுப்பி
 விச்சார்கள்அப்போதுராயர்வர்களேபெரிசேபம்செய்துவிசுவனாதநாயக்கரைஅவா
 ளபெரிசஅனுப்பிவிச்சஅநதராசாக்களயெல்லாராயும்செயிச்சமாமூலப்பிறகாறம்
 தோப்பாருமிக்கும்படிகுதிட்டம்செய்துமருபடிராயர்வர்களேஇடத்துக்குவநதுயிநத
 விநததாததம்சொல்லிராயர்வர்களேசநதோஷமாய்அனேகம்வெகுமானம்செய்துநிரம்
 பவும்பிரீதிகாமாய்வுச்சுக்கொண்டார்கள்இப்படியிருப்பதிலதஞ்சநகர்மீர்செகர்சோ
 ளனமதுதாசநதிர்செகர்பாணடியனராச்சியத்தைஅபகரிச்சுக்கொண்டசநதிர்செகர்
 பாணடியனராயர்வர்களேஇடத்துக்குவநதுபிராதுபண்ணிக்கொண்டதிலராயர்வர்களே

sion of the country, you will then restore it to Chandra-Segara-Pandion." Nagama-Naicker, as he was ordered, conquered Vira-Segara-Soren; but instead of giving up the country, he retained possession of it for himself. On this intelligence reaching the Rayer, he sent for Visvanatha-Naicker, and said to him angrily, "Your father, instead of giving up the kingdom, has kept it for himself." Visvanatha having obtained the Rayer's permission, put himself at the head of the royal forces, and advanced near to Madura; and then sent word to his father to give up the kingdom to the Pandion, or else it would be needful to take him by the hand and lead him to the Rayer; yet he (Nagama-Naicker) did not come peaceably, but assembled an army, and came against his son to offer him battle. As Visvanatha was born by divine favor, he overcame and dispersed his father's forces, and took his father prisoner. On his afterwards restoring the Pandion, the latter, overcome with joy, said, "Your father before settled the difference between me and the Soren by conquering him, and now you have overcome your father on my behalf, and have given me the kingdom: what equal return shall I render to you? As my family is diminished, and I have no heir, the Soren, after my death, will take forcible possession of my kingdom. You therefore are my adopted son; and to you I wish the kingdom to descend after me." Saying this, he conducted him to the temple, where in the presence of Minatchi he had him invested by the Pattar, or head Bramin, with the crown, the dagger, the sceptre, the seal, and the fish-umbrella, even as if delivered to him from the hand of the goddess herself. Visvanatha-Naicker placed Ariya-Natha-Muthaliar, and also the commander of the forces, named Kesavapa-Naicker, with the Pandion, as his assistants; and then, taking his father along with him, he returned to the presence of the Rayer. On reporting the success of his expedition, the Rayer was much gratified, and said, "We forgive your father in consideration of what you have done;" adding many presents.

Some time after, intelligence arrived that the Pandion was deified (deceased). On the announcement being conveyed to the Rayer, he said (to Visvanatha-Naicker) "Since that Pandion adopted you as his son, giving you the kingdom and the seals, and also in fulfilment of my former promise to you, (the government shall be yours)." The Rayer had him anointed, gave him the goddess Durga, which had

நாகமநாயக்கரைவரவளைச்சு உன்னுடையதில்லா காவல்ச் சேர்ந்ததநதீர் செகர்பாண்டிய
 னபிராதுபண்ணிக்கொண்டதுனாலேநீர்போயமாந்தவீர்செகர்சோளனைசெயிச்சுபாண்டிய
 னுக்குயேதாப்பிறகாறம்ராச்சியம்வாங்கிடுததுவர்ச்சொல்லிஉத்திரவுசெய்தமெ
 னாக்ருநாசமருயக்கர்சோளனைசெயிச்சுபாண்டியனுக்குராச்சியம்வாங்கிக்குடாமலத
 ம்மிடவசம்பண்ணிக்கொண்டார்அந்தசமாசார்மீராயர்வர்கள் தெரிநதுவீசுவனாதநாய
 க்கரைஅளப்பிவிததுஉம்முடையதகப்பன பாண்டியனுக்குராச்சியம்சூடாமலதம்மிட
 வசம்பண்ணிக்கொண்டா னொன்றுகொப்பிபண்ணினதிலவீசுவனாதநாயக்கர் ராயர்வர்கள்
 ஓடததிலஉத்திரவுவாங்கிக்கொண்டுதம்மிடதளததுடனேமதுனாக்ருசம்பமாயவநதீர்
 வகிபாண்டியனுக்குராச்சியம்ஒப்பிவீச்சுவர்ச்சொல்லியும்அப்படிசெய்யாதவனாயிலஉ
 ம்மைகயபுடனேகூட்டிவர்ச்சொலவியும்உத்திரவாயவநதீருக்கு னெயெனதுஎன்றதி
 கொண்டதில அவர்சமாதானததுக்குவருமலமகனமேலேவினோதிச்சுசண்டைக்குவந
 ததிலவீசுவனாதநாயக்கர்வறப்பிறசாதியர்'னபடியினாலேயெதிரிதளததைபலாயினப்ப
 றிததிதகப்பனானாகைய வசப்படுததிக்கொண்டு பாண்டியனுக்கு ராச்சியம்சூடுததில
 பாண்டியனொம்பவும்சந்தோஷப்பட்டுஉனதகப்பனார்சோளனைசெயிச்சுயெனபக
 யைதீர் ததார்தீர்'யென நிமித்தியம்பிதாவை செயிச்சுராச்சியம் சூடுததீர்இதற்குபிரிதி
 உபகார்மீநானெயெனக்குடுக்கப்போனெயெங்கவமிசததாளசிறநிச்சுப் போபை
 டியினாலேயும்'யெனக்குபிறக்காலாம்சந்ததியிலலாதுனாலேயும்'யெனராச்சியம்சோள
 னஅபகரிச்சுக்கொளவானஆனதுனாலேநமக்குநீர்தானபிளனை உம்முடையவமிசபாற
 ம்புரியமாயராச்சியபரிபாலனம்செயதுகொண்டுவர்ச்சொல்லிமீனாட்சிதேவீசனைந்தா
 னததுக்குகூட்டிபோட்பட்டததுசமுதாமிம்மெங்கோருததினாமசசததுவசம்அம்
 மனைசனைந்தானததிலவயதது அம்மனையினாலேக்குடுக்கும் பாவ்ணையாப்பட்டர்கை
 வினாலேவிசுவநாதனுயக்கருக்கு சூடுப்பிசகஅரிநாய்கமுதலியானாயும் தளவாய்கெச
 வப்பனுயக்கனாயும்பாண்டியனிடத்தில்தேமிசக தகப்பனாயும்கூட்டிக்கொண்டுந
 துராயரிடத்தில்தமாசார்மீசொன்னதில ராயர்'ொம்பவும்சந்தோஷப்பட்டுஉம்மிடநி
 மித்தியம்தகப்பனான செய்தகுறநமட்டுமெமிச்சோமெனதுசகலவெருமானமும்செய்

precedence over the royal throne, with much wealth, and invested him with the titles of Chief of the Pandiya country and Lord of the Southern throne, together with royal banners; and then sent him away.

On coming to Madura, he constructed seventy-two bastions to the fort; and appointed seventy-two Palliya-carers, corresponding with the bastions. He also caused the fort of Trichinopoly to be built. He likewise conquered the five independent princes to the south, who acknowledged no earthly superior. He reigned twenty-six years. His second in power, Ariya-natha-Muthaliar, constructed thousand-pillar'd choultries in Madura, Tinnevelley, and other places.

The son of Visvanatha-Naicker was Raja-Periya-Kistnama-Naicker.

பிரதனனும் சிருதுனானைக்குப்பிரபாணடியன் தெய்வீக்மானொனறுச்மாசார்மவந
 துராயருக்கு அரியப்பண்ணிவிசத்திலஅந்தபாணடியனே உம்மைபுத்திர்பாவுகமாய்செ
 ய்துராசியமும் அவருடையமுத்திரையனும் உமக்குகுறிதது இருக்குறபடியினாலேமு
 னாலே தாம்வாக்குதததுவம்பண்ணினமெரைக்குபட்டாபிஷேகம்பண்ணிராய்பீட
 ததுக்குமுதனமையானதுறக்கிமகாலெட்சுமியுங்குறிததுபாணடியமண்டலாதிபதியெ
 னறும் தெட்சணசிம்மாச்சுத்திபதி யெனறும்பேருங்குறிததுராயவிருதுகன்குமிதது
 அனுப்பிவிசசார். மதுவைநதுசேர்நதுமதுவைகோடடையெருபத்திரொணடுகொத
 தளததுடனேகடடிவிசசுயெருபத்திரொணடுகொததளததுக்கும்யெருபத்திரொணடு
 பாளையகாரரைநேமிசசுதிரிகாடும் கோடடைகடடிவிசசுதெட்சணததிலசுவாதினமா
 ய்காததிருநதபஞ்சதிருவடிராசாக்களையும்கெயிததுராசியம்ஆண்டதுவருஷம்- உய
 கூ-அவர்அதிகாரி அரியநாயகமுதலியார்தமதுவைதிருனலவெலிமுதலாகியஷதவங்களுக்
 கெல்லாம்ஆயிரக்காலமண்டபம்கடடிவிச்சார் அவர்குமாரர்ராஜாபெரியகிஷணப்பனா
 யக்கர்.

CARNATAKA DYNASTY, -Sec 3.

• As the name and influence of Ariya-natha-Muthaliar appear so very conspicuous in this and following sections, we shall here insert two others of the Mirtanjeaya Manuscripts : of which, one relates wholly to him, and the other principally so, though in part adverting to other matters, and carrying forward the Carnataka line of princes to a more advanced period. It will hence appear that the part taken by Ariya-natha-Muthaliar in the change of the royal dynasty was not a trifling one ; but any conjectures founded on these indications may for the present be spared. A summary retrospect may be entered on afterwards. The two manuscripts alluded to will now follow.

BIOGRAPHICAL NOTICE OF ARIYA-NATHA-MUTHALIAR.

If the greatness of Ariya-natha-Muthaliar be inquired into, it must be replied, that it was boundless; and that many, even kings, have not been equal to him. Tradition has handed down the following things concerning him.

When Ariya-natha-Muthaliar was twelve years old, one named Nambiyan, who was performing pujai to Pulliar (Ganesa), saw a cobra-capella defending him by the shadow of its head from the sun's rays while he was sleeping; and going to him, took him by the hand, saluted him respectfully, carried him home, gave him food; then received from him a written document,* and advised him to proceed to the north. As soon as he had gone thither, and was connected with the suite of Panja-Muthali, elder brother of Nagama-Naicker's agent, the Rayer gave to the said Muthali a royal palanquin.† Nagama-Naicker introduced Ariya-nathen to the presence of the king, when two circumstances of propitious result occurred: the one was his explanation of the almanac and astrology, and the other, his pointing out the means whereby the buffalo's head might be struck off at one blow. In consequence of the Rayer's approbation hence accruing, Ariya-natha-Muthaliar was numbered among the ministers of state, and placed at their head. He then had a plough and an ox-goad made, both of gold, and sent them as a present to his elder sister. And on occasion of his own marriage, in the presence of the Rayer, he expended ten lacs of gold rupees, fed forty thousand of his relatives, including both those grown up and children; and he provided the marriage expenses of a great number of his relatives, at various places, on their return towards their homes.

Subsequently he procured an interview of the Pandiya-rajā with the Rayer; he assembled the various chiefs, or commanders of forces; and, taking Visvanatha-

* Verbal tradition says, that the Bramin Nambiyan foretold to the youth that he would become wealthy, powerful, and illustrious; and on the young man objecting that he was merely a husband-man, the Bramin reassured him; and to shew his own confidence in the prediction, took from him a written engagement that when his prosperity should happen he would give half of his acquirements to the said Bramin.

† The writer intends to intimate that this magnificent and rare donation came to the Muthali through the propitious influences attending on Ariya-nathen.

அரிபநாபகமுதலியார்வர்களபெருமையைவிசாரிக்கும்போது அளவிலை அனேக ராசாக்களிருந்தபேர்களுக்கும் இலை அது எப்படியானால் முன்னோர்கள் பெரியவாளசொ லலக்கேள்விப்பட்டது அரிபநாபகமுதலியாருக்குப் பணிநீர்ப்பயதிலநல்லபாம்புருநியதிந ணம் முகத்திலே படாமலபடத்தினாலே கொடைபிடித்ததை பிள்ளையார் பூசைபண னுருதநம்பியார்சுணுகூடடிப்போயிடபசாறம்பண்ணி விருததுபண்ணிவிச்சுகையெ முததுவாங்குகொண்டு வடக்கேபோகசொலவிதம்பியார்சொலபடிக்கு ராசமானியரா ஸ்ரீராயர்வர்களகொட்டியமவிசாறணைநாகமனாயக்கர்வர்கள் கிட்டவிசாறணைமுதலியார் வர்களதமையனபஞ்சமுதலியார்வர்களகிட்டப்போனவுடனேதமையனுக்கு ராயர்பல லக்குமிதநாள் அப்படி இருக்கும்படிததிலநாகமனாயக்கர்முன்னுக்கு ராயர்வர்கள்பேட டியாயிபஞ்சாங்கம்சொதிஷிம்சொன்னது -க- துறகைஅம்மனுக்கு காட்டெருமைக்கி டாவெட்டுகுறதற்கு ஒருவெட்டுலேவெட்டும்படியாயிடபாயம்சொன்னது -க- இத்தொ ண்டுபுத்ததியிலே ராயர்பாதது நம்முடவாசலமத்திரியனாக்கெல்லாம் முதலமைபென னுசகலவெகுமதியுருந்தது இருக்கும்போது தமக்கையாருக்கு பொன்னாலேளையும் பொன்னாலேதார்கொம்பும் கொடுத்தனுப்பிவிச்சு வெருவாயிப்பததுவட்சம்மொசுரு சிலபண்ணி -சயஅது- ம்பேர்டறவினமுறையார் குருசுருளநதையருடனேபோசனம் பண்ணிவிச்சவநதபேருக்கெல்லாம்வதைநும்ஜவறணங்குமிததுஇநதபடிக்குராயர்வ ர்களமுன்னுக்கு தமக்குகலியாணம்நடநதபினபுதம்முட்டறவினமுறையார்வளியிலே அனேகம்பேருக்கும்கலியாணம் பண்ணிவிச்சார்மதுரைப்பாண்டியராசாவுக்கு ராயர் பேட்டிபண்ணிவிச்சபாணையப்பட்டெல்லாம் கூடபாணையம்சேகர்மாயிதளததுடனே முதலியார்வர்களவிசுவனாநாயக்காரும் கூட்டிக்கொண்பவநது பாண்டியதேசத்திலே இருநதசலவியமெல்லாந்தீது பாண்டியராசாவுக்குபட்டங்கடடிவிட்கவிசுவனாநாயக் கருக்குகோட்டைக்கட்டணியாயிநேமுகஞ்செய்துவெருடிரவியம் அனுப்பிவிச்சு பெரி யபாணையததுடனே மதுரையிலே இருக்கும்போது வடக்கே இருநதுவெருசேனைதளத துடனே துலக்கர் மிருட்டியர்வநதுரையர்பேரிலே வெருசண்டைபண்ணுருதபோது மதுரையிலே இருநதுமுதலியாரும் வெருதளததுடனே போய்சண்டைபண்ணுருத போதுஅநதபுத்தத்திலேராயர் முடிநதுபோருறவேளையிலே ராயர்அஷிதாட்சிஎழுதி

Naicker with him, came to the Pandion country; and having there rectified all existing disorders, he caused the Pandion king to be crowned, and instructed him to prepare and send to Visvanatha, as an acknowledgment for the crown, a large sum of money, made up in parcels, the contents not being counted; while he himself remained at Madura with a large army. But when the Mahomedans and Mahrattas had invaded the Rayer's dominions, he proceeded thither from Madura, with a great force; and when the Rayer fell in the midst of the battle, the Rayer wrote and gave him a bequest, to the effect, that after his decease the Muthaliar should be accounted as his adopted son; and, giving up the country to him, bid him conquer the invading army. In obedience to this command, having paid homage to Durga, by her approval and aid he overcame the Mahomedans and Mahrattas; and then expressing his desire to assume the crown to his relatives and other friends, they advised him not to do so. He therefore divided the Rayer's dominions among the three following persons: that is, Visvanatha-Naicker, the son of Cottiya-Nagama-Naicker; Vira-ragava-Mapali-Naicker, of Tanjore; and the ruler of Srirangham (Seringapatam), of the Mysore country. He retained the office of commander-in-chief of the forces of all three of these kingdoms. He built many Saiva and Vaishnava temples, Rayer-towers, and pillar'd choultries; and caused many repairs of sacred places to be made. In the ceremony of anointing (the image) in the night of Siva, he expended twelve thousand gold rupees. Afterwards he built walls and fortifications at Tirisira-puram (Trichinopoly), at Madura, at Tanjore, at Seringapatam, and at Raya-vellur, (in the north,) and at Palamcottah; as also at other places. He established two thousand of his relatives, at the villages of Sora-kukamtaren, Nageri, Tirumangalam, Putta-neri, and other places: building them houses, and giving them lands for cultivation. He also gave countries to seventy-two Palliya-carers. He besides appointed villages to remit hundis (or bills of exchange) to Casi (Benares), for the purpose of daily feeding there one thousand Bramins, in the name of the before-mentioned officiating priest of Pulliar's temple, named Nambiyan.

Thus he caused many charitable acts to be performed; and was very illustrious for his bravery and skill in combat. Agreeably to this description an equestrian statue may be seen, as cut out in the thousand-pillar'd choultry, and also in the new choultry (of Trimal-Naig, at Madura).

கொடுத்தது நமக்குப் பிறகாலம் நமக்குப் பிள்ளைநீயென்று சொல்லி சீமையை ஒப்புக் கொடுத்த
 அவநதபாணியதை செயிக்க சொல்லி வாக்கு கொடுத்தபடிக்கு துறகை பூசை பண்ணி அ
 வள்கி துறையினாலே துலுக்கர் மிறுட்டியர் பாணியதை செயம்பண்ணி ராயர்பட்டம் தா
 ம்கட்டிக்கொள்ளவே னுமென்று தம்முடைய வினமுறையார் பெரிய மனுஷினை கேள்
 கும்போது அப்படிக்கு உமக்கு பட்டம் வேண்டாமென்று சொல்லி விட்டார்கள் அந்த
 மெரைக்கு ராயர் சமஸ்தானம் சீமையை கொட்டிய மநா கமரூயக்கர்குமார் விசுவநா
 தநாயக்கருக்கு ஒரு புவகும் தஞ்சாவூர் வீரராகவமாப்பிளையு கருக்கும் சீர்ங் கபட்டணம்
 மயிருர் சீமைகற தருக்கும் இப்படிக்குப் பட்டங் கட்டி விச்சு முதலியார் வர்கள் இறந்தமுன்று
 சமஸ்தான ததுக்கும் மேலாக தளகறதம் சேனாதிபதியாக இருந்தது கொண்டு அனேகம் சி
 வஸ்தலம் விஷ்ணுஸ்தலம் தோறும் ராயர்கோபுறமும் ஆயிரக்கால மண்டபமும் அனேக
 ம்திருப்பணியும் சிவராத்திரி பன்னிராயிறம் மொகரா சிலவுபண்ணி அபிஷேகக்கட்டளை
 யளும் செய்விச்சு அப்பால திரிசிறப்புர்கோட்டை மதுரை கோட்டை தஞ்சாவூர்கோட்
 டை சீர்ங் கபட்டணம் கோட்டை ராயவேலூர்கோட்டை பாணியம் கோட்டை முதலாகிய
 கெட்டிஸ்தலங்களில்கோட்டையளும் கட்டிவைத்து தங் கள உறவின முறையாருக்கு சொழ
 குலாநதான நகரி திருமங்கலம்புத்தனேரி முதலாகிய கிருமங்களிலொண்டாயிரம் குடும்ப
 ததுடனே இருக்கவீடு வாசல விபசாய ததுடனே இருக்கச் சொல்லி விட்டு குடுத்தது - எயுஉ
 ப்பாணியபட்டுக்கும் சீமை விட்டு குடுத்த முனபிள்ளையார் பூசை பண்ணுகுற நம்பியாருக்
 குகாசியிலே நிதி பபடிக்குப் பிறமணாருக்கு சககிறபோசனம் நடக்கும்படியாயி உண்டி
 யளும் கிருமங்கலம் விட்டு குடுத்தார் இப்படிக்கு அனேகம் புண்ணியங்களை பண்ணி விச்சு
 வெகுசுவுரியபாருக்கிற மங்கலாடனே கிறத்திசாலியாக இருந்தார் எப்போதும் இப்படிப் ப
 டட அரியநாயக முதலியாரை குறுதியினபேரி லஆயிர்கால மண்டபத்து தூணிலேயும் பு
 துமண்டபத்து தூணிலேயும் செயி திருக்குறதைப்பா தது கொள்ள தெரியலாகும்.

THE ROYAL LINE OF THE CARNATAKA PRINCES.

Sometime after the year of Salivahana 1400, in the Kaliyutti year, in Panguni month, the 15th day, Cottiyam-Nagama-Naicker having entered the Madura kingdom, he placed a fortified camp to the south of the town of Tirumangalam, and to the south of the Camandala-manda river, and remained there some time. Afterwards having come to the town called Cayatatur, on the 15th day of Kartiki month, and Ravuttiri year, on the first approach to Cayatatur of Visvanatha-Naicker and Ariya-natha-Muthaliar, accompanied by an army, *Kistnama-Naicker died. The matters which were in consequence needful to be done, were accomplished by Visvanatha-Naicker and Ariya-natha-Muthaliar, in conjunction; when they returned to Madura.

In S.S. 1482, on the 11th of Margali month, and Ravuttiri year, on a propitious day, Visvanatha-Naicker was anointed and crowned, in the presence of the goddess Minatchi; and Ariya-natha-Muthaliar was appointed to the station and authority of principal minister and commander of the forces, and he assumed the two seal rings of both offices. While discharging the duties of both these responsible stations, the extent of country acquired was from Utatur and Valikondapuram,† on the north, even to Caniya-Cumari (Cape Comorin) on the south; to Coyambutur, Irodu, Taraburam, and Mele-Muli, on the west; to Ramiseram, and the sea, on the east.

While the Maha-rajā, Visvanatha-Naicker, was holding the sceptre in Madura, he caused his son, Cumara-Kistnapa-Naicker, to be anointed, on the 11th day of Tai month, in Rudirothkari year. During the reign of this prince, in the Acheya year, Ariya-nayaga-Muthaliar called some of his relatives from Peru-naḍu, in the Kanchi district of the Tondamandalam, and constructed for them a fort, at a place called Sora-vantan, in which he built three hundred houses, and gave to them: he also

* What person is intended is not known.

† More commonly spelt Ootatoor and Wolconda: the former is a town, thirty miles north of Trichinopoly; and the latter, a fort and pettah, about five miles from Toloor, on the bank of the Vellar river.

கறஞ்சுடநாயக்கமார்பட்டஞ்சாலிவாகனசகரதம் - தசா - க்ருமேலசெல்லாநின்
 நகாலபுததி - ஸ்ரூபையகுனிஸ் யடுவ - கொட்டியமநாகமநாயக்கர்வர்களும்மதுரைக்
 குவநதுதிருமங்கலததிக்குத தெறகுக்கமண்டல மண்டநதிக்குததெறக்கே கோட்டை
 போட்டுச்சிதுதநாளிருநது அதனபேரிநகபததாறதுக்குவநதிருக்கிறபோதுர்வுததி
 ரி - ஸ்ரூகார்ததிகைஸ் யடுவ - விசுவநாதநாயக்கர்வர்களும்அரியநாயகமுதலியார்வர்க, ஞநதளசமெதமாகிக்கபததாறதிலவநதிறயகினமாததிர்ததிலகிஷிணமநாயக்கர்அருபா
 சமாண்மாய்ச்சிவலோகப்பிருத்தியமாரூர்அதநருநடக்கவேண்டியஅமாக்கிதிகைகள்வி
 சுவநாதநாயக்கர்அவர்களும்அரியநாயகமுதலியார்அவர்களும்கூடஇருநதுசகலமு மு
 கப்பிச்சுத்திரும்பமதுரைக்குவநதுசாலிவாகனசகரதம் - தசாஅயிட - க்ருமேறசெல
 லாநின்நர்வுததிரி - ஸ்ரூமார்சுழிஸ் யடுவ - சுதினததிலமீனாட்சியம்மாளசனனிதானததில
 விசுவநாதநாயக்கர்வர்களுக்குப்பட்டாபிலேகருசெயலிச்சுததழகறதப்பிறதானிக்கம்பூ
 ணிஅதிகாரமும்அரியநாயகமுதலியார்வர்களுக்குக்குடுத்துஉபயமோதிர்புநதநித்துக்
 கொண்டிதழகறதப்பிறதானிக்கம்பண்ணுகிறநாணியிலவடக்கேஉளட்டததுர்வாலிகொ
 ணடாபுர்மும்தெறகே கனனிமாருமரிவனாக்கும்மேறகே கொயம்புததுர்யீரோடுநா
 ராபுர்மேலே மலைமுதநகினக்கே இராமேசுர்மீளிகடலவரைக்குரு சீமைகடழமதுரை
 யிலிருநது - மகாராசமானியராஸ்ரீ - விசுவநாதநாயக்கர்வர்களசெயகோஷசெலுததுகிற
 நாணியிலஅவர்களபுத்திரனகுமாறகிஷிணமநாயக்கர்வர்களுக்கு மதுரையிலருததிரோ
 காதி - ஸ்ரூதைஸ் யடுவ - பட்டாபிலேகருசெயதுராச்சியபார்ம்கிக்கிறகாலததிலேஅ
 ட்செய - ஸ்ரூ - ராசமானியராஸ்ரீ அரியநாயகமுதலியார்வர்களதெண்ணடைமண்டல மகா
 ஞ்சிபுரஞ்சீமையிலேயிருநதபெருநாடடிலஉறவினமுறைபாரிநசிறுதுபெரைவர்வனை
 ததுசெயுதவநதானிலெபாடடியாளுகருந தனசாலிலெகொடடைபொட்டிகொடு
 ததுஅதிலமுன்னாறுவீடுகடடிகொடுதது அதிறகாஞ்சிபுரங்கருகளபயா அவர்களை
 யுமொவனைததுமடாலைபமுங்கட்டிகொடுததுஅதிலிருநதுபூசைநெய்வெததியவகொ
 ணடருளசொலவிததொண்டைமண்டலத்திலிருநதுவநதஉறவினமுறைபாருகருமற
 வறஞ்முதிலசெயலதநருவெள்ளாணியினை வீரககுட்டியானமுதலபெருங்கொலலன

called thither the guru of Kanchi-puram, and constructed for him a temple and dwelling; giving him instructions to perform the rites of worship, and present the usual offerings (of fruits, &c.) In order to perform the needful services to his relatives from Tondamandalam, he placed Vellan-pillay, Vira-Kuttiyal, Peran-Kollen, Tachen, and, under these, eighteen other laborers in their different trades; together with Pariars for free-hired work, and other Pariars who were slaves. Having appointed these people to their several occupations, he recommended his relations to live and prosper; and thus those who came from Peru-nadu lived in the place called Sora-vantan.

Down to the 19th day of Kartiki month of Angila year, (Cumara-Kistnama-Naicker) held the government; and from the 20th of the same month and year, down to Avani month of Manmatha year, being twenty-two years and nine months, his son Virapa-Naicker reigned. From Peratasi month of Munmatha year, down to Vyasi month of Pilava year, or five years and nine months, Cumara-Kistnama-Naicker (reigned). On the 7th day of Sittari month of Survari year, Ariya-nayaga-Muthaliar delivered up both seal rings to his lord, and obtained the world of Siva; (that is, died). Ariya-nayaga-Muthaliar held the united offices of minister and generalissimo during four reigns, or thirty-eight years and nine months. From Avani month of Pelavi year, down to Tui month of Dundami year, or twenty-one years and eight months, Mutthu-virapa-Naicker reigned. From the 7th of Masi month of Dundami year, to the 4th of Masi month of Velumbi year, or thirty-six years, Tirumali-Naicker reigned. In this time the office of generalissimo was held by Ramayer. From the fifth day of Masi of Velamba year, down to Vyasi month of Vigari year, or four months, Mutthu-virapa-Naicker reigned. From Ani month of Vigari year, down to Ani month of Dundami year, or twenty-three years and two months, the adopted son, Choka-natha-Naicker, reigned. In his reign Chinna-tambi-Muthaliar was generalissimo for seven years. After that time Bramins held the office. From Adi month of Dundami year, down to Sukila year, or eight years, Ranga-Kistna-Mutthu-virapa-Naicker reigned. From Pramotutha year down to Vicrama year, or nineteen years, Vijia-Ranga-Chokapa-Naicker being a minor, Man-gamal ruled: from Visva year down to Virothikirathi year, the third of Masi month, is thirty-one years. Down to that time is the period of the Carnataca line of princes.

மச்சனடபபபதி னெட்டுததொழிலாளிகளைபுலகையிட்டுப்பறைபன கயிலிபப
 றையையும்பிறததேகமாய்க்கொணடுவததுவை ததுச்சுப சீவனங்களாகச்செய்விச்சுக்
 கொணடருக்கச்சொலிச்சொழவ நதானிலெபெருநாட்டுறவினமுறையாரிப்படிக்கு
 முததனமாகவாமுததுவருகிறநாளையிலஆயகில - (ஸ்ரீ)கார்த்திகைமீயுகவு - வரைக்கும்
 பட்டருசெலுத்திஆயகில - (ஸ்ரீ)கார்த்திகைமீயுகவு - முதலமனமத - (ஸ்ரீ)ஆவணிமீ
 வரைக்கும் - (ஸ்ரீ)உயுகமீ - க்குமேலஅவர்கள்குமாரீன வீரப்பராயக்கர்வர்களபட்ட
 மனமத - (ஸ்ரீ)புடடாசிமீ - முதறபிவ - (ஸ்ரீ)வைகாசிமீ - வரைக்கும் - (ஸ்ரீ)ருமீ - க்
 குமேலக்குமாரீகிஷ்ணமநாயக்கர்வர்கள சாறுவதாரி - (ஸ்ரீ)சித்திரைமீ எவு - அரியநாய
 கமுதலியார்வர்களஉபயமோதிர்மிர்ணடுகறததாக்களகையிற கொடுததுப்போட்டுச்
 சிவலோகப் பிறுத்தியாசூர்கள அரியநாயகமுதலியார்வர்களதழகறதம் பிறதானிக்கரு
 செயலிச்சுப்பட்டம்நாலுக்கு - (ஸ்ரீ)கயிஅமீ - பிவ - (ஸ்ரீ)ஆனிமீ - முதலததுத்திமி
 (ஸ்ரீ)தைமீ - வரைக்கும் - (ஸ்ரீ)உயுகமீ - க்குமுததுவீரப்பநாயக்கர்வர்களுக்குப்பட்
 டம்துத்திமி - (ஸ்ரீ)மாசிமீ எவு - முதலவிளம்பி - (ஸ்ரீ)மாசிமீ சவு - வரைக்கும் - (ஸ்ரீ)கயி
 கூ - திருமலைநாயக்கர்வர்களப்பட்டம்இக்காலத்திறழகறதப்பிறதானிக்கம்ராமய்யனவ
 ர்களவிளம்பி - (ஸ்ரீ)மாசிமீ எவு - முதலவிகாரி - (ஸ்ரீ)வைகாசிமீ - வரைக்கும் - மீச - க்கு
 முததுவீரப்பநாயக்கர்வர்களபட்டம்விகாரி - (ஸ்ரீ)ஆனிமீ - முதலதுத்திமி - (ஸ்ரீ)ஆனிமீ
 வரைக்கும் - (ஸ்ரீ)உயுகமீ - க்குதெததுப்புத்திரீனசொக்கநாதநாயக்கர்வர்களபட்ட
 ம்இதிலவமு - (ஸ்ரீ)சினனதம்பிமுதலியார்வர்களதழகறதப்பிறதானிக்கம்செயதார்கள்
 அப்பாறபிராமனாத்தழகறதப்பிறதானிக்கம்துத்திமி - (ஸ்ரீ)ஆடிமீ - முதலச்சுக்கில - (ஸ்ரீ)
 வரையும் - (ஸ்ரீ)அ - கொங்ககிஷ்ணமுததுவீரப்பநாயக்கர்வர்களபட்டம்பிறமதுத - (ஸ்ரீ) - மு
 தலவிக்கிறம - (ஸ்ரீ) - வரையும் - (ஸ்ரீ)யுக - க்குவிசையொங்கசொக்கப்பநாயக்கர்வர்களவா
 விபமானதாலமங்கம்மாளபட்டம்விசுவவருடமுதலவீரோதிதிதுது - (ஸ்ரீ)மாசிமீ எவு
 வரையும் - (ஸ்ரீ)கயி - அதுவரையிறகறகுடசபட்டம்சரி.

As in the foregoing MSS. and in the principal ones also, so frequent reference is made to the names of months and years, according to the native mode of reckoning, it may not be amiss, for the sake of distant readers, to give the order and explanation of both. And first, the native months.

Tai . . .	From the 12th of January to the 11th of February.
Masi . . .	" 12th of February " 11th of March.
Panguni . .	" 12th of March " 11th of April.
Sittari . .	" 12th of April " 12th of May.
Vyasi . .	" 13th of May " 12th of June.
Ani . . .	" 13th of June " 14th of July.
Adi . . .	" 15th of July " 14th of August.
Avani . .	" 15th of August " 14th of September.
Peratasi . .	" 15th of September " 15th of October.
Arapisi . .	" 16th of October " 14th of November.
Kartikiya .	" 15th of November " 13th of December.
Margali . .	" 14th of December " 11th of January.

Secondly, the native years. These are reckoned in a cycle of sixty; as follows.

1 Pirapava	21 Saruvasidhu	41 Pilavanga
2 Ibava	22 Saruvatari	42 Kilaka
3 Sukili	23 Virothi	43 Savumiya
4 Pramotutha	24 Vikurathi	44 Satarana
5 Prasorpathi	25 Kara	45 Virothikiruthu
6 Angirasa	26 Nandana	46 Paritabi
7 Strimuga	27 Vijia	47 Pramatica
8 Bava	28 Saya	48 Ananta
9 Iva	29 Manmatha	49 Racshatha
10 Dathu	30 Dunmuki	50 Nala
11 Isura	31 Yevilambi	51 Pingala
12 Vegudaniya	32 Vilambi	52 Kalayudhi
13 Pramathi	33 Vigari	53 Sittaradhi
14 Vikirama	34 Sarvari	54 Ravuttiri
15 Visu	35 Pilava	55 Dunmathi
16 Sitteraibanu	36 Subakiruthu	56 Dundumi
17 Subanu	37 Sobakiruthu	57 Rudirotkari
18 Daruna	38 Kurothi	58 Radhiraasha
19 Partiva	39 Visuvavisu	59 Krothana
20 Vijia	40 Parapava	60 Acheya

Of the present cycle, the first year, or Pirabava, was A.D. 1807. The present year, 1835, answers to Manmatha, which began on the 12th of April; and thence to April of the following year, answers to Salivahana Sagartam 1758. Thus, the year of the Christian era being given, to find the S.S. year deduct 77 after the middle of April, or beginning of Sittari month, and 78 from the beginning of Tai month, or middle of January, up to the middle of April. The S.S. year being given, add 78 from the beginning of Tai, or middle of January, up to the middle of April, and 77 thence to January of the following year. In general we have been content with simply adding 78 to the S.S. year; but as the doing so may sometimes occasion an error of a few months, the reader will hereby be enabled to make the correction, in any case where severe accuracy may be required.

CARNATAKA DYNASTY, SEC. 4, 5.

We may now take a general retrospect of the foundation of this new dynasty. We must previously repeat the observation that the date given in section 5, of S.S. 1354, as that when the bastions of the fort were built, is wrong. It has been seen that this is the same date assigned to the conquest of the country by Nagama-Naicker, subject to the correction of writing S.S. 1454 in place of S.S. 1354, and corresponding with A.D. 1532. And though the year of the Cali-yugam 4583 agrees, according to the customary reckoning,* with S.S. 1354, yet that date we presume may have been guided by the other one. From the third of the minor manuscripts just given, the conquest by Nagama-Naicker is put "some time after S.S. 1400;" consequently, the latitude of expression will permit the extension of the date to S.S. 1454. The instalment of Visvanatha-Naicker is fixed at S.S. 1482, A.D. 1559; differing only a year, or perhaps a few months, from the date assigned to the same event in the Pandion Chronicle. To fix this instalment at S.S. 1481—2, seems to be accurate; but as the dates so minutely given in the Carnataka Dynasty do not accord therewith, it may be best to leave the question of dates alone for some time, until we descend to a more recent period, and can bring others from the Pandion Chronicle, or more recently still, from known public events, fixed as to times of occurrence, by other authorities; by which intermediate aid we may re-ascend to a final adjustment of this particular.

From Mr. Campbell's list of the Rayer dynasty, (Royaldu, by the way, being the same in meaning, in Telugu, as Rayer in Tamil,) it appears that Krishna-Rayer ruled twenty-one years, from S.S. 1430 to 1452 (A.D. 1509 to 1530); Achyuta-deva twelve years, from S.S. 1452 to 1464 (A.D. 1530 to 1542). There then succeeds an interval of usurped powers on the part of Timma-raja and Rama-raja, though Sadasiva is nominally king for twenty-two years, from S.S. 1464 to S.S. 1486 (A.D. 1542 to 1564). At this last date the fatal battle of Tellicotta took place, in which Rama-raja was slain. An interval of five years of Mahomedan plunder and desolation occurred, after which (S.S. 1491, A.D. 1569) Trimala-Rayer re-established some remnant of the past empire, at the fortified position of Penu-Konda, beyond which time, for the present, we need not descend. With the above dates the two lists given by Mr. Wilson† very accurately correspond; the only variation being, that one list puts the five years of disorder into the reign of Sadasiva, and the other into that of Trimala-Rayer;

* Beschi's Tamil Grammar, Chap. 5, p. 186.

† Des. Cata. p. 292—3.

neither of the lists mentioning Rama-raja, who was properly only minister; but who, by his haughtiness and ambition, involved the kingdom in his own destruction.

Now, from the foregoing dates, it will appear probable (as before inferred) that Nagama-Naicker received his orders to support Chandra-Segara-Pandion from Krishna-Rayer; that he had effected the conquest in two or three years after; but that, availing himself of the unsettled state of things at Vijianagaram, during the earlier years ascribed to Achyuta-deva, when Timma-raja's influence, as minister, was predominant, he took measures to confirm himself in the independent sovereignty of Madura; that Achyuta-deva, having himself taken the reins in hand, despatched Visvanatha on the expedition against his father; that Chandra-Segara-Pandion ruled as a tributary for some little time, supported by the northern army, with Ariya-natha-Muthaliar at their head; that, his death occurring, Visvanatha-Naicker was installed by Sadasiva, by virtue of the Pandion's asserted adoption, and the promised protection of two former Rayers; that he actually entered on his government about six years previous to the battle of Tellicotta; that the combination of Mahomedan princes, ending in that disaster, summoned Ariya-natha-Muthaliar, with his army, to the support of the Rayer's throne; that Rama-raja fell in the battle, when the bequest mentioned in the second of the preceding Mirtanjeya MSS. might indeed have been made, but it is more probably invention; and that then Ariya-natha-Muthaliar returned with the collected remnant of his forces to Visvanatha-Naicker, who now, by the train of circumstances, became an independent prince, as he also proved himself to be an able and beneficent one. Ariya-natha-Muthaliar might have had some influence over Mysore and Tanjore as asserted: it is not impossible, though it seems improbable, that he could have been military commander-in-chief to all three states. The new dynasty in Mysore, founded by Vijeya and Krishna from Vijianagaram, was however then begun, and as they might have known Ariya-natha-Muthaliar at the capital, so they might afterwards have profited from his aid or advice. The threatening power of the Mahomedans may also have awed the divisions between the Madura and Tanjore kingdoms into concord; but the two powers were no longer in anywise equal; and it is probable that peace, by the king of Tanjore, could only be purchased by sacrifices, of which the cession of Trichinopoly in lieu of a place comparatively insignificant is perhaps a sufficient example.

Throughout the whole narrative, as regards Visvanatha-Naicker, it is hardly possible to fail of remarking, that he is portrayed uniformly as a talented, brave, and benevolent man. The, at first sight, very doubtful proceeding of offering his services to the Rayer against his own father, on a little closer inspection will appear in a different light. For since some one must undertake the duty, no one could perform it with so much tenderness, and with so many precautions as the son; and whereas a stranger would have been reckless of the life of Nagama-Naicker, and a rival or enemy would have sought its extinction on the field of combat, his son could, and no doubt did, take such measures as would in a manner ensure its safety. The carefully keeping his father under guard for some time, until the Rayer's anger should abate, marks a like wise precaution.

The second of the Mirtanjeya MSS. would appear to intimate that Ariya-natha-

Muthaliar, owing to his education by a Bramin, was in repute with the court of Vijianagaram as an astrologer; and that he devised the plan as regards killing the buffalo, which superstition rendered necessary, and of which Visvanatha was chosen to be the instrument: the asserted appearance of the goddess in a vision being only machinery, invented to work upon the superstition of the populace. If so, the close alliance between the future king and his minister-general, and the great power of the latter, is accounted for; although the extensive authority confided to him might have been partly in imitation of the fashion which had prevailed at Vijianagaram, but with very different results, owing to the difference of mental ability, and other qualifications, between Sadasiva and Visvanatha. The works undertaken at Trichinopoly and its neighbourhood shew a princely liberality; and a considerable measure of wisdom also, so far as regards fortifications, irrigation, and building of villages for cultivators. It must be remembered that great numbers of emigrants, from the scene of Mahomedan plunder and devastation, were to be provided for; and their descendants in the Madura country still speak the Telugu language. In the romantic engagement with the five independent chiefs of Tinnevelley, (if the same be not fiction,) the like unity of character is observable in Visvanatha. We suppose them to have been some of the eighteen chiefs who had by this time divided the ancient Sera-desam among them. In this case, the conquest seems to have proved subsequently beneficial to the inhabitants, by an extension of the liberal policy to the banks of the Tembaraveni which had lately been exerted on those of the Cauvery. In the division of the country into feudal chieftainships, wherein the minor MSS. make it probable that the advice of Ariya-natha-Muthaliar was followed, there may be a doubt as to the wisdom of the policy; and the enlargement of the fort of Madura was, we should say, to weaken instead of strengthening it. A hill-fort on the rock five miles S. W., as already observed,* would have been more to the purpose. It appears that Ariya-natha-Muthaliar long survived his master: both seem to have merited no ordinary praise. Always excepting (in our own judgment) the patronage of temples, shrines, and Bramins, wherein those two remarkable individuals must be judged by the opinions of the times and places which they lived in; we, for the rest, hardly know any instance, from native history, of character so well and so uniformly sustained; or of two personages, each able, acting together with one design, with popular benefit, and with extraordinary credit and success to themselves.

If we revert for a moment to the Rayers, it is not to find there, especially in the contemporaneous period, any thing equal or similar. Krishna-Rayer was, in his day, illustrious; and his name seems to be popularly the best remembered. He was a great conqueror—a

* See vol. 1, p. 169. And we are glad of an opportunity, in passing, to remark, that the name of Colonel Wilks was there inserted through inadvertency for Colonel Welsh; it being in the amusing, but not always trust-worthy reminiscences of the latter gentleman that the statement is found. His story of royal tigers on Secander-mali, and of hunting them, when they were so stupid as only to shew their heads now and then to servants merely, dreading a rifle by instinct, is most facetious certainly; we would, if possible, add veracious. The sketch given of the fort and palace of Madura is extremely incorrect; and must have been drawn on the voyage home, or elsewhere, from memory. There are other sketches in the book which we should think are more carefully done.

patron of learning—but withal, we believe, of dissolute morals. His conquests were chiefly over native princes, chiefly south of the Toombodra, and, at the utmost, of the Krishna river. The asserted supremacy over the Cashmere and Nepaul countries, we should conjecture to be somewhat hyperbolic; although, in all probability, some ascendancy did exist over the Cuttack country. But from the Krishna to the Cauvery we should suppose him to have had tributaries, or subjects, among the aboriginal natives; and these northern and southern boundaries present a magnificent extent of domain. The princes of the Kuruba line were in all probability careful, plodding, and prudent men, who were content, after the first establishment of power and dominion, with slow but solid acquisitions. Krishna-Rayer, as the second of the Narasinha family, brought with him what may be termed plebeian blood, together with the vigour and energy which usually mark the outset of a new dynasty so founded, on the ruins of an old one, wherein indolence and pride of descent have produced feebleness and degeneracy. Krishna-Rayer seems to have aimed at splendor. He built the large tower* of the pagoda at Conjeveram; and the like model of these lofty towers elsewhere introduced; procured for them, as we shall see, the designation of Rayer-gobaram, or a tower after the Rayer's fashion; that is, a large and lofty tower. From the Cathamanchari (a college printed book) we learn that his chief minister was named Appaji; and to this Appaji is therein attributed the credit of detecting the Padshah of Delhi, when purposely disguised, from the midst of his ministers, and notwithstanding a mock king being on the throne; because Appaji, at his first entry, saw that no one regarded the puppet king, while every eye was directed to the real one, though appearing only as a common person amidst the crowd of courtiers. This anecdote has been related of the ambassador of another country: we know not to whom it may really belong. From the same authority we find that Krishna-Rayer maintained a court-jester, named Tennul-Rama-Kistna; some of whose coarse and practical jokes† are handed down (authentic we pre-

* Campbell's Telugu Grammar, Intro. p. xii.

† The following, as one of the least exceptionable, may serve as a specimen.—The mother of a Rayer who ruled in former years, at the time of her death, expressed a strong wish for a mango-fruit; but before the Rayer could cause it to be brought and given to her she died. After waiting a few days, he ordered the Bramins to be summoned, and inquired of them what was to be done in the case of any one who died while longing for a mango-fruit. They replied, that if he caused a thousand mangos of gold, each one weighing a hundred pilams (a pilam is one ounce and a half) to be made, and if he gave these to a thousand Bramins, then that longing appetite would be removed from the departed soul. The Rayer caused the same to be done, and bathed on the day of her death. Thereupon the Rayer's jester, named Rama-Kistna, said to all the Bramins, "I am waiting to do you some small service, you must condescend to me;" and with this request he called them to his house. When some among them went, he carefully closed the door, and immediately on causing them to be seated in order, he took a branding iron, that had been heating in the fire on the hearth, and bringing it, said, "My respected mother, before she died, said, that if she were branded with a hot iron she would live; but before this could be done she attained the heavenly world. In consequence, in order to give her satisfaction, you must be pleased, with a cool mind, to receive it in her stead;" and saying so he cauterized some of them. Being greatly frightened, they all made their escape, and carried their complaint to the Rayer. He called for Rama-Kistna, and said to him angrily, "Knave! what hast thou done?" He replied, "When my lord's mother died, what she wished for was given to them—in like manner, what my mother desired, in order to satisfy her, I gave to them." The Rayer, ashamed, remained silent.

Cathamanchari—Art. 31.

It is understood that a Tamil printed work is in circulation, entitled Tennal-Rama-Kistna-Sarittaram; but it has not been seen by the editor.

sume) with more care than the actions of the monarch himself. But Krishna-Rayer especially sought to make his court distinguished by the resort thither of learned men. He patronised Sanscrit and Telugu literature; and the principal Telugu works are dated in his reign.* Among the learned men of his court, eight are most celebrated, and to these were given the title of Ashtadig-gejwa, or the eight elephants that support the world, at the cardinal points and their bisections, by allusion to the Pauranic fable on that subject. But withal there is great reason to consider Krishna-Rayer to have been of dissolute manners. Indeed licentiousness seems to have been the crying sin of the time and country; and it must be confessed, that over the manners and morals of both Mahomedan and Hindu princes, of this period, a veil may be most decently drawn. Rare indeed are the examples of kings, who being possessed of arbitrary and irresponsible power, have, at the same time, exhibited the virtues that adorn and sanctify our common nature.

It is scarcely possible to treat of the Vijianagaram state, without also adverting to the young and formidable rival among the Mahomedan powers, which sprung into being as if expressly to oppose it. We have before seen that the Afghan, or Patan, empire of Delhi had made irregular but powerful irruptions to the south of the Krishna river; and that Deva-giri, Warankal, Dwara-samudra, and even Madura, towards the extreme south, had suffered severely in consequence. But the temporary ascendancy acquired was chiefly owing (under divine sufferance) to the energy and capacity of two bad men, Alla u'din, of Delhi, and Kafoor-Melick-Naib. Under the cruel, weak, and wicked, government of Mahomed Tughluk-shah, or Mahomed III., a rapid dismemberment of his Dekhan possessions took place. To the south and north of the Toomboodra river, the kings of Carnata, Vijianagaram, and Warankal, had exerted themselves so as to drive the Mahomedans over the Krishna: and while the Warankal kingdom continued for some time after in a weakened and declining state, that of Vijianagaram absorbed the more ancient Belala power, and rose with vigour and rapidity into an independent and extensive principality; which Mahomed, and his immediate successors, were otherwise too much occupied, and too much weakened, even to attempt to oppose. It is, however, observable, (and we write under correction,) that Divine Providence seems to have put the scourge of idolatry into the hands of the Mahomedans; themselves, at that period at least, among the most fanatical of the human race; and by fanaticism, we mean to designate religious zeal mingled with intolerance and cruelty: the two latter characteristics being necessary to distinguish it from simple enthusiasm; which, according to circumstances, may be good or bad; but fanaticism is always bad; and is the worst demon that ever put on the garb of religion for a private purpose. That Mahomedan fanaticism should have had such free course allowed to it, may be accounted for from the bad being often set to correct the bad, whereby they mutually punish each other. Hence perhaps—for we do not dogmatize—it may have been that a rival, so formidable to the Rayers of Vijianagaram, arose in the Bhamini dynasty of Kulbunya. When the former was young and vigorous, it successfully resisted the Patans of Delhi; but from the robust and mature period of Krishna-Rayer's reign may be dated the turning point and gradual decay. Conquest, over aboriginal natives, had fanned Krishna-Rayer, with its crimson wings, as far as it was well possible to go; and the age of ease, luxury, and dissipation began. If the vices which these things, especially when taken in connexion with a grovelling and degrading idolatry, tend to produce, must have chastisement extended or permitted, then an infant state, but of rapid growth, nurtured in an abomination of idolatry, and believing itself invested with a divine commission to punish, convert, or else exterminate, infidels, would seem to be, of all other instruments, precisely the one most suitable. Such a one in reality the Mahomedan principality, which had its capital at Kulburga, and its offset subsequently at Bijapur, ultimately proved.

* Des. Cata. Vol. 1, p. 297,

The fortunes of Housson, an obscure peasant, have such a resemblance to those of Ariyanatha-Muthaliar, that if the latter be in nowise a copy or imitation of the former, we should infer a frequent predilection, among Bramins devoted (if we may so call it) to astrological science, for telling the fortunes, or prognosticating the future lot of those who, from physiognomical or incidental circumstances, may seem to them to promise well; remembering that one fortunate conjecture would do to set off against a thousand failures. Be this as it may, the Bramin Kangoh (as his name is spelt in Scott's Ferishta) foretold to Housson (or Hussan) that he would rise to royal dignity; and exacted from him a promise that when this prosperous event should occur, he would make the said Kangoh his financial manager. Housson soon after, while ploughing, turned up a pot full of ancient gold coins, which he carried to the Delhi monarch, who, pleased with his honesty, gave him a rank and command in the army, with a government in the south. Some Guzerat chiefs, who had revolted and had been subdued, took refuge in Housson's government, and were protected by him and other commanders in the south. The Delhi monarch hereby penetrated their views of future self-aggrandizement; and despatched an Amir to call the whole of them together, and then lead them away prisoners to Guzerat. They put off obedience as long as possible; but at last came together, and set off towards Guzerat, under his charge. On the frontiers however a consultation took place; when, feeling persuaded that their lives were in imminent peril, they broke away, and raised each one the standard of revolt, but with combination and unity of purpose. The cruelties of Mahomed III., and the detestation in which he was held by the subject people, brought great numbers into the confederation; and at length the governor of Dowlatabad (Mahomed's own relative) becoming apprehensive of treachery and betrayal, evacuated the place to preserve himself and his family; and the town being given up to the confederates,* they became possessed, even without a siege or battle, of the place which Mahomed had so foolishly sought to make his capital. Under these circumstances the confederates proceeded to elect Ismael, an Afghan Amir, as their sovereign; while Housson was made general, with the title of Zuffer Khan. The monarch of Delhi took measures to subdue this revolt; and when the two armies were in presence, Ismael's heart failed him, and he retreated to the capital, leaving Zuffer Khan to fight the imperial army. He did so, and beat them; and Ismael, finding afterwards that his general had won the suffrages of the confederate forces, prudently thought proper to retire, pointing to Zuffer Khan as the most suitable person to take his place: a designation greatly applauded by all the nobles. The former peasant Housson was accordingly crowned in A. D. 1347, by the title of Sultan Alla u' din: the black umbrella of the Abassides was adopted, in direct contrast to the white umbrella of Delhi, as the emblem of sovereign power and token of the royal presence; similar in effect to the royal standard among European nations. Ismael received the title of Amir al amra, or Prince of the Nobles;* but events proved that the honor was only nominal. The new Sultan was reminded of his former promise by the Bramin Kangoh, who was made minister of finance; and is said to have been the first Bramin ever so employed, at least by Mahomedans.† The Sultan himself, an Afghan by tribe, further took the title of Bhamini; as some say, by a pretended descent deduced from Bahmen, a king of Persia, but, as others say, to do honor to the Bramin; that word having been colloquially and commonly pronounced Bhamini by the Mahomedans.‡ Kulburga was, at that time and for some after reigns, the capital of the new sovereignty.

* Ferishta's History of the Dekhan, by Scott, vol. 1, p. 1—6.

So far matters seemed only to indicate a schism in the Mahomedan government; but it had other work to do in reserve. The Telinganas of Warankal (very unwisely) assisted the Bhamini monarch against Delhi, thereby strengthening a near and vigorous natural enemy in revenge against one more remote, already enfeebled and crippled. Of such service they afterwards received the wages. On the other hand, the Bhamini had apparently either taken some places from the Vijianagaram kingdom, or else merely held them by the same tenure as other portions of the sovereignty wrested from Delhi. Allu u' din Bhamini died in A. D. 1357, after a splendid reign; and was succeeded by Mahomed Shah Bhamini, destined to be the first scourge of Vijianagaram. The dates of the coronation and decease of the first Bhamini Sultan are given according to Ferishta, which agree best with those contained in the Carnataka Dynasty, but we shall soon find ourselves in the midst of anachronisms, when compared with the authorities of McKenzie MSS. before cited. The final discussion of this question it has been already intimated is as yet postponed.

Soon after the accession of Mahomed Shah, the rajas of Bijanuggur (or Vijianagaram) and of Telingana (or Warankal) sent to him, requiring him to restore to them the places and the country south of the Krishna, which had been conquered by his father. Mahomed was not in a condition to return a direct negative, having just impoverished his treasury by the expenses attendant on equipping his mother for a pilgrimage to Mecca. He therefore contrived delays; and at the lapse of a year and a half, when his mother had returned, and his funds were in better condition, he returned a positive refusal. An army was in consequence sent against him, under the command of Nag-deo, of Warankal, which army Mahomed defeated. In A. D. 1371.§ circumstances singularly illustrative of the times occurred. A horse-dealer brought some poor animals to Mahomed for sale, and on being asked how he dared to affront a Sultan with the offer of such horses, he replied, that he had prepared very superior ones, which had been intercepted by Nag-deo, at Vellumputtam, accompanied with expressions of contempt for the Sultan. This was quite enough as an incitement to Mahomed, and war against the contemptuous Nag-deo was forthwith resolved on; but the sultan-geographer did not precisely know where Vellumputtam was situated. He set out with an army to find it; but made some halts and delays, from ceremonial and other causes, and seems to have needed the spur of a witticism. Inquiring of a Mahomedan religious, what was the distance to Vellumputtam, he was answered that it was so far off, and that he might reach it within a certain very disproportionate length of time, if he only made as much speed as he had been lately doing. This repartee was quite to the point with the petulant Shah: he instantly determined on leaving the heavy body of his army behind, and selecting a light, and but slender, body of cavalry, advanced by forced marches through the very heart of the Telingana country, in which Vellumputtam was situated. Some Afghans, in disguise, were sent forward to hold the guards of Vellumputtam in parley; and, while thus engaged, the cavalry of Mahomed, with himself at their head, galloped up to the gates: the guards were sabred by the Afghans before they could give the alarm; and the place was taken by a coup-de-main. Nag-deo paid the forfeit of his life for his haughtiness and security; and the town became a scene of plunder and devastation. After this daring enterprise, Mahomed had great difficulty to effect his retreat, being hemmed in on all sides, his direct path only being excepted, by the forces sent against him; whose want of courage alone prevented their taking the severest possible retribution. The retreat was effected by means of a timely reinforcement, but not without the loss of the greater portion of the detachment that he had headed in this affair. The weakness of the Delhi power having been ascertained, Mahomed again invaded the country of the Telinganas, and they sent to sue for peace; adding, that if the terms were acceded to, they were prepared to make the Shah a rare and costly present, very desirable for a king. The consideration weighed with Mahomed: peace was concluded; and he received, as the price, a very splendid throne of ebony, gold plates, and jewels of immense value.* This present induced him to put aside his father's plain silver throne; even though enhanced in value by himself at his succession. The new throne was the wonder of the day; and, perhaps, of all things most in tone with the temper and sentiments of a semi-civilized and Asiatic mind.

* Scott's Ferishta, vol. 1, p. 6—9. † Ib. p. 10. ‡ Ib. p. 18. § Ib. p. 16—19. The date must be 1361.

Mahomed now gave himself up to pleasure; and we again find another proof of his acting by impulse, as well as of the tiny hinges on which most important events often times turn. A troop of singers and dancers from Delhi came to exhibit before the Shah; bringing with them some new and rare compositions, in esteem at that court. In the extravagance of his approbation, and something the worse for wine, the Sultan directed his father's aged and discreet minister to give the musicians an order for liberal payment on the Rayer of Vijianagaram. The prudent minister wrote the draft, though he neither sealed nor sent it; but the Sultan inquired, the next day, if his order had been obeyed; adding, that the matter had been long meditated, and that he threw away no idle words. The document accordingly had the Shah's signet attached to it, and was despatched.

* Scott's Ferishta, vol. 1, p. 22.

Kishen-Roy,* to whom it was delivered, put no bounds to his indignation: a little wisdom or discretion would have taught him to treat the rodomontade with silent contempt. Unhappily for himself and his subjects he did not possess, or at least did not exercise, so much discretionary self-command; but gave vent to his resentment, and had the presenter of the order paraded about the streets of his capital on the back of an ass,† being the most contemptuous possible degradation. Matters being thus irremediably compromised, and not choosing to wait for an invasion, which perhaps he had better have done, Kishen-Roy assembled an army, which marched by his orders to Oodnee, the place since usually known by the name of Adoni; and thence it proceeded to lay siege to the fortified town of Mudkul; which seems to have been an old bone of contention. Mahomed was not prepared for such instantaneously vigorous measures; and his not being prepared, for what he might easily have anticipated judging from the tone of his own mind, very clearly shews, that he had been guided by impulse, and not by deliberation, as he pretended; though indeed indistinct plans of conquest on Vijianagaram might have been entertained by him before the developement induced by the illusive influence of melody and wine. It is by consequence just possible that the matter might have dropped, had Kishen-Roy been, in the abstract, a little wiser, and comparatively not perhaps almost as foolish, and quite as petulant as Mahomed. But let the reader mark, if he please, as we proceed, the disastrous consequences, to unfortunate subjects, of having such heads set over them as these. Alas! that the shields of the earth should have been frequently composed of such sorry materials. The army of Kishen-Roy took the town of Mudkul before Mahomed could bring it relief; and, with an unjustifiable barbarity, put the whole garrison, amounting to six hundred men, to the sword. On this disastrous news reaching Mahomed, he became frantic: the ceremonies of religion in the obsequies of the martyrs to Islam were brought forward, to inflame the passions of his army and people; and he himself vowed that he would not sheath his sword until he had caused one hundred thousand infidels to be slain, in revenge of the death of the faithful, and in propitiation to their departed spirits. He was not one to utter a word of this kind lightly, the point on which he prided himself: it struck in too well with his inherent propensities, and with the glory of Islamism, to be revoked. He marched with an army, if not stronger in numbers, yet doubly strong in being armed by the wildest fanaticism. The two armies were encamped on the two banks of the Krishna river; and the Rayer, who seems to have been there in person, in anticipation of an engagement the next day, sent off a large body of elephants, loaded with treasure and heavy valuables, on the road towards Vijianagaram; which convoy made but small progress, being impeded by rains during the night, and the consequent bad state of the roads. A statesman-like foresight would perhaps have prevented his bringing these things into such a situation; but it was, we presume, bad generalship to send them away, as it intimated anticipations calculated to dispirit his army. Mahomed being apprized of the despatch of the convoy,

* Transposing this name into Tamil orthography, it should be Krishna-Rayer: however the date by no means accords with the one most usually assigned to him.

† Scott's Ferishta, vol. 1, p. 23, 24.

resolved to strike there; and, crossing the river at some distance, with a chosen band, before dawn fell on the convoy, threw it into disorder and flight, and captured booty at his pleasure. The Rayer, being panic-struck, retreated; leaving the country between the Krishna and Toomoodra rivers open. This affair Ferishta places in Hegira 767, marked by his translator as A. D. 1365, making the difference between the two eras to be 598 years.

Mahomed Shah, finding little to oppose him between the rivers, crossed the Toomoodra, and formally invaded the hitherto undisputed dominions of the Rayer; which the previous spot of war was not. Ferishta notes, that he was the first Mahomedan sovereign that had invaded this territory; though it had in former times been overrun by Kafoor and others. Kishen-Roy now made Hoje-Mal his general; and placed under his command forty thousand horse, and five hundred thousand infantry; that is, if Ferishta be accurate: while Mahomed, on numbering his troops, found he had under him fifteen thousand horse, and fifty thousand infantry, besides artillery.* He advanced ten thousand horse, and thirty thousand foot, under the command of Bahader-Khan, retaining five thousand cavalry and twenty thousand infantry with himself, as a reserve. "The armies of light and darkness" were now in presence, and met each other: from dawn till four in the afternoon a doubtful combat was waged; the two lines were like fluctuating "waves of the sea," and "many of the faithful drank the sherbet of martyrdom," to employ the metaphors of the historian. One of the Mahomedan wings had given way, when the reserve came timely forward; and an elephant of Bahader-Khan, breaking loose, ran against an elephant belonging to Hoje-Mal, creating confusion in the centre of the latter's army; at which critical time, and important place, a charge made by the Mahomedans gave the decisive blow. Hoje-Mal was killed, and his army fell into confusion. A terrible slaughter was made by the reserve cavalry; and before it was ended the imperial umbrella and the Shah appeared; not to sheathe the sword, but to give it keener edge. Mahomed halted for a week on the field of battle; and then set forward in pursuance of his vow of extermination. Kishen-Roy, who must be presumed to have been not very remote from the scene of action, retreated; and was followed by Mahomed during three months; until, at last, the invading army came within sight of the Rayer's capital. As Mahomed found himself unable to bring on an engagement, he determined on a feint; and, proclaiming himself sick, commenced a retreat. He was followed by Kishen-Roy and his troops: the warfare being however confined to gasconades and petty skirmishes. Mahomed re-crossed the Toomoodra, and encamped on a spacious plain; where he resolved on changing his manœuvre, as his army was dispirited. He made his plan and intentions known to a very select few; and gave directions to these to have their bands ready on a certain spot at midnight. Kishen-Roy, being encamped on the other bank, yielded to security; and, as Ferishta asserts,† passed the greater portion of the night, with his court, in drinking, and looking on at the debasing spectacle of the Hindu natch. The character and customs of Hindu princes render this circumstance but too probable; and perhaps a sense of security was conveyed by the idea of being in pursuit of a retreating foe. Before morning his camp was thrown into disorder by the night attack of Mahomed; which assault being unexpected, little resistance was made. It was a mere rout, attended with horrible carnage. Kishen-Roy fled to Vijianagaram; and the whole intervening country now became a scene of the most barbarous atrocities. The aged, the helpless, even women and children, were not spared.* The ensanguined vow of Mahomed was to be accomplished. The Rayer was now beset, in his capital, by the Bramins and others of his people, clamouring for peace. Ambassadors were accordingly despatched to Mahomed, who gave ear to the proposals, dictating his own terms: and, among other things, insisting that the draft in favor of the musicians should be paid; which caprice also being complied with, gave him satisfaction, as he was unwilling to have a light word recorded, as uttered by him, in the pages of time. When the terms were settled, the messengers made a representation, and gentle remonstrance, on the subject of the wanton cruelties that had been exercised, on which a voice from among Mahomed's own people declared that he had exceeded his vow; and Mahomed, admitting that he might have more than doubly fulfilled it, adduced his zeal for Islam; but promised, at the same time, that, in future, no more such outrages should take place, on unarmed and helpless persons.† Having received the elephants and treasure, specified by the treaty, he retired. The whole campaign‡ was one of bravery, skill, and withal, barbarity, against superior numbers, without a master-mind; and endued with dangerous contempt for a supposed insignificant foe. On the Hindu side also, though there was enough of superstition, there was no fanaticism.

* Scott's Ferishta, vol. 1, p. 27.

† Vol. 1, p. 29.

For some time afterwards the kings of Telingana and Vijianagaram are represented as paying tribute.* The latter years of Mahomed Shah's reign were tranquil. It lasted in all seventeen years; during which period he is said to have slain 500,000 unbelievers in defence of Islamism! He died Hegira 776,† and is profusely praised by his Mahomedan historian.

* Scott's Ferishta, vol. 1, p. 30.

† Ib. p. 31—36.

‡ It is very remarkable, that in this campaign Mahomed first brought artillery into use, having his guns served by Turks and Europeans. The use of rockets had long been familiar to Hindus: this weapon is, beyond doubt, the famous Agniasteram, of which such marvels are narrated in their most ancient epic compositions; but artillery, awkwardly managed as it may have been, must have had appalling effects on the people to whom it was first opposed. We may perhaps be pardoned the passing observation, that the use of artillery, and fire-arms in general, is one of the prophetic marks accompanying, and distinctive of, the progress of Mahomedan warfare against apostate Christians or idolaters; and, in order to shield ourselves from taunt or rebuke for making such an observation, we again refer to Bishop Newton, and leave the onus probandi with him. (See Newton on the Prophecies, Vol. 2, p. 223.) We have intimated an impression, that the scourge for chastising idolatry in India was given to the Afghans, as it was given into the hands of the Turcomans and Ottomans in Europe. The rage of both divisions, of what may be termed one army, as actuated by the same spirit and object, began at the time announced, proceeded during the permission accorded, and ceased, with some inconsiderable exceptions, at the period limited; according to the declarations of a book, much scoffed at it is admitted, and much disgraced in the esteem of many by crude interpretations; but which has been proved, by sound and undeniable comment, to have foreshewn the end from the beginning; and which must, by consequence, have proceeded at first from the dictation of wisdom and knowledge such as dwell not with mortal men, being unaided. We make this allusion in passing, not only because we wish to trace events to their superior as well as secondary causes; but because we also wish to convey at least one friendly note of warning to any who, not being themselves idolaters, yet give the system encouragement, support, and stability; and call it policy, because immediately profitable; not knowing, or not duly considering, that in the end, and speedily too, it may prove to be short-sighted policy, and ruinously destructive. If the unhallowed alliance be not cut, and idolatry be not left to its own means; to support, prop, and maintain itself, from its own ample resources; then the alliance will most probably be cut by a power equal, or made equal, to the purpose: the intrepidity of which may the Almighty avert, for the sake of the millions of the people. May He avert it, by causing British protection to be withdrawn from idolatry.

His successor, Mujahid Shah, had no sooner come to the throne, than he demanded to have the forts and places between the Kistna and Toomboodra rivers delivered up to him by the Rayer.‡ Kishen-Roy refused compliance; and this time the Mahomedan power was the first to move. The Rayer encamped on the banks of the Toomboodra; and during the advance of Mujahid, the latter had an adventure with a tiger, which he killed single handed, having skilfully pierced the animal's heart with an arrow. The fame of this exploit was such, that if we are implicitly to credit Ferishta, the Rayer did not dare to venture an engagement, but continued for not less than six months to draw Mujahid on through the jungles: another reason for this proceeding however appears, in his expecting the assailant army to be attacked and weakened by jungle-fever. The Rayer must also have diverted the Mahomedan from the capital; for Ferishta gravely tells us, not only that Kishen-Roy fled towards Seet Bunder Ramisser, (or Ramiseram,) but also that Mujahid amused himself by looking at Seet Bunder Ramisser,§ and repaired a mosque which had been built there by the bands of Kafoor, or his followers. Moreover, Mujahid did not forget to punish the infidels; and, after having been thus occupied, he suddenly retraced his steps, and with a small band appeared before Vijianagaram. A Hindu temple, situated on a hill, attracted his notice, and considering it to be a duty, devolving on the faithful, to destroy it, he carried it by an unresisted assault, and rased it to the ground. By so doing he aroused against himself the very feeling of fanaticism which he should have allowed to remain quiescent. The whole city was moved, at the outrage perpetrated in their view, as if with one mind. In the first onset Kishen-Roy was somewhat worsted; but the battle was renewed, on succours being brought by his brother. A long and doubtful combat|| was waged; signalized, among other things, by a self-devoted Hindu horseman stealthily approaching the Shah, by the banks of the river, and rushing on him in a desperate charge. His iron helmet protected him from the consequences of the blow that actually fell on his head; and, before it could be repeated, the horseman was despatched by those at hand, whose attention had been before diverted. Davood Khan, who had charge of a strong post, necessary in order to secure a retreat, quitted it on finding matters at an emergency; and was abused for doing so by Mujahid in no measured terms. The Hindus, discovering the advantage given, took possession of the abandoned post. Mujahid was obliged to retreat in the best way he could; and though the matter is smoothed over by Ferishta, yet it is quite evident that he was seriously worsted, and repelled. The historian here tells us, that Kishen-Roy's ancestors had ruled for 700 years;¶ that hence he had accumulated great wealth, and acquired extensive power; that his dominions were more extensive than those of Mujahid; and that, by consequence, the latter was overmatched in the struggle. By these admissions a shade of doubt is thrown over his narrative of transactions under Mahomed Shah, as pos-

Scott's Ferishta, vol. 1, p. 37.

† A. D. 1374 according to his translator.

‡ Scott's Ferishta, vol. 1, p. 40.

§ Ib. p. 42.

|| Ib. p. 44.

¶ Ib. p. 46.

sibly much colored and exaggerated. At all events we hear no more of Kishen-Roy from the Mahomedan historian; and we have been so minute in epitomising his details concerning the events herein noted, as they present quite a contrast to the accounts given by the aboriginal native historians of Krishna-Rayer. Dates being excepted, or hereafter reconciled, Dewul-Roy or Deo-Roy, Seva-Roy, and Ram-Ruaz, are evidently Achyuta-Deva-Rayer, Sadasiva, and Rama-Raja, in the order of the Hindu chronicles; but though we take the historian's evidence as to names, just as we find it, yet we shall have a word to add, in the sequel, as to its authenticity.

To return to Mujahid: he made an abortive attempt to besiege and take Oodnee (or Adoni); his army suffered from sickness; and an experienced commander, after coming to survey the forts, giving it as his opinion that they were not to be taken by the means which the Shah possessed, he raised the siege; and he was soon after assassinated, by the same Daoud Shah whom he had reprimanded at Bijnagur: who being descended from the first Sultan, Alla u' din, took possession of the throne; but was in turn assassinated, even in the mosque at Kulburga, after an usurpation of one month and five days. The events at Kulburga, though relieved by the gentle and literary reign of the virtuous Mhamood, who was surnamed Aristotle,* were, for the rest, of a color and character from which we avert our attention; and pass on, until, by events of no ordinary singularity, the sceptre came into the hands of Feroze Shah Bhamini; whom we find at odds with Dewul-Roy of Vijianagaram. In the year of the Hegira 801,† the latter invaded the country between the rivers, the old scene of contest, and encamped on the south bank of the Krishna.‡ Feroze was on the opposite side; and the river was too high to admit of being forded. A singular scene of native manners is again opened to us. A Mahomedan Cazi offered his services to Feroze to cross the river, at a distance; to proceed to the Rayer's camp; and, according to circumstances, to assassinate either the Rayer or his son, during the night; at which time, by combination, Feroze was to effect the passage of a body of troops on hurdles covered with leather. The Cazi came to the Rayer's camp disguised; being accompanied by a band of fanatics, like himself, who also obtained access on various pretences. The Cazi, by means superfluous to detail, actually made good an entrance, with a fellow conspirator, into the prince's private apartments, and poniarded him. The camp became alarmed during the uncertainty of the night: each chief was under arms, but not knowing what rumour to believe, or what to do; while Dewul-Roy, inconsolable for the loss of his son, was plunged into perplexity and distraction. While things were in this situation the onset was made, before day-light, by Feroze's detachment. Intimidated by the events of the night, and supposing Feroze's whole army to be crossed, no steady resistance was offered; and after considerable loss Dewul-Roy retreated.§ A treaty was soon afterwards negotiated by the belligerent parties; and peace was restored. We have it further noted, that Feroze was confirmed by Timur (or Tamerlane); and that, incited by the kings of Malwa and Khandeish, the Roy of Bijanuggur (or Vijianagaram) did not pay tribute for four years.

* After the preceptor of Secund-r, or Alexander; both of whom the Mussulmanis reverence.

† Marked as A. D. 1398 by the translator.

‡ Scott's Ferishta, vol 1, p. 75.

§ Ib. p. 77, 78.

A senseless irruption into the territories of Feroze would scarcely deserve even passing notice, had it not brought on an invasion* by Feroze, and an assault of the Rayer's capital. The latter was deceived by the false promise of support from Malwa and Khandeish; a promise not redeemed. In consequence a hollow peace was patched up, cemented by the very disgusting condition, to the Rayer, of giving his daughter in marriage to Feroze; and the latter having jeopardied his life in entering Vijianagaram† at the marriage ceremony, seems to have expected Dewul-Roy to return the compliment; which the latter, perhaps very prudently, declined. Feroze did not conceal his chagrin from his people; and both princes, notwithstanding the forced marriage relation, seem to have hated each other as cordially as before.‡

In Hegira 820 (A. D. 1417) Feroze failed in an attack on Bilkonda; and in the middle of the same year Dewul-Roy marched against him. Feroze now sustained a very severe and total defeat. The Hindus singularly appear to have changed their more ordinary character. They imitated, and even if possible exceeded, the Mahomedans in barbarity. They seem to have poured forth the bitter vials of vengeance with excited eagerness. They even collected together the heads of their enemies, and piled them up into an immense platform; and, as Ferishta himself remarks, they gave vent at once to the accumulated hatred of ages. Feroze became low spirited, then ill, and finally sunk under the disaster; connected as it was with domestic troubles, which set aside his son, and caused Khunkhanan to ascend the vacated throne, by the name of Ahmed Shah.

Soon after we find Dewul-Roy and the king of Warankal in alliance, and in arms against Ahmed. The two former were encamped on the banks of the Toomboodra, and on the approach of the latter, the king of Warankal retired from the field. A very singular circumstance now occurred. Just before the main army of Ahmed Shah crossed the river, a small party had done so higher up; and entering a sugar-cane plantation, for the purpose of plundering it, they surprised a native out of sleep, who being very partially clothed, as natives usually are in their undress, he was taken for a common laborer; and a bundle of sugar-canes being put on his back, he was ordered to carry it before the troopers; which, discreetly enough, he quietly did, though he was none other than the Rayer§ himself, fairly caught napping; and now certainly carrying a sweet burden, though not possibly a very pleasant one. Very auspiciously for the Rayer's personal safety, though not for his kingly honor, Ahmed had by this time crossed with his army, and the Rayer being no where to be found, his chiefs and soldiers were embarrassed, and retreated in tolerably good order. The troopers, perceiving now the prospect of more important plunder, abandoned the sugar-cane, and its porter together; the Rayer, finding himself at liberty, took to his heels; and following in the track of his army, at last came up with some chiefs, by whom he was recognized; and the retreating army became in some degree reassured. But Dewul-Roy considered what had occurred to be of bad omen; and, with the superstition inseparable from genuine Hindus, he resolved not to fight, but continued his retreat to Vijianagaram. The consequence was, that the country was left open to Ahmed and his army: they abused

* Hegira 809, A. D. 1406.

† Scott's Ferishta, vol. 1, p. 87.

‡ Ib. p. 88.

§ Ib. p. 98.

the liberty cruelly; committing great devastations, and especially overthrowing the Hindu temples, rendering all indignities to the gods there worshipped. Whether it ever came into the minds of the Hindus that these were very doubtful gods, we have no means of knowing.* But however this point may be solved, it appears that they were excessively incensed against Ahmed Shah, in particular; taking particular care to have all his steps watched. As he indulged himself occasionally in the diversion of hunting, the spies one day found him separated from his retinue; and giving the signal, the Shah soon became hard pressed for his life. He was obliged, in the first instance, to his horse, and, in the second place, to a small body of expert Mogul archers, who kept his pursuers in check until he managed to reach an earthen mound, most probably the walls of a deserted habitation. This, in the extreme emergency of the case, was converted into a temporary mud-fort; which the assailants began to demolish with the usual native implements. Meantime, according to Ferishta, a presentiment of evil came into the mind of Abd al'Kadir, the Shah's first armour-bearer, and setting out with a troop in search of Ahmed, he came up just in time to rescue† him from his extremely perilous position. The Mahomedan author remarks on the singularity of Divine Providence allowing two great princes thus to fall, so nearly together, into such imminent straits: for ourselves, always admitting that superior agency, by command or permission, we yet conjecture that the Rayer had some secondary hand in this last surprise; possibly from the wish to wipe out the ridicule of his own disaster. The Shah handsomely rewarded his deliverer;‡ and as the archers had been of signal service, he increased the corps, adding some honorary distinctions. Ahmed continued to waste the country, and at length blockaded the capital. The Rayer sued for peace; and submitted to send the elephants and treasure borne by them, as the price of its purchase, under the charge of his son: to whom the Shah rendered many honors, investing him with some complimentary presents, and then retired to Kulburga.§

We may note, in passing, that in Hegira 828 (A.D. 1421) the Sultan marched against Warankal; but sent Khan-Azim in advance, who, as it would seem, beyond the expectations of Ahmed, finished the business, by routing the opposing army, killing the king, and taking Warankal, with immense treasure: the whole country was conquered within four months.¶ Thus the imbecile policy, and multiplied tergiversations of this state, seem at length to have met with a chastisement, which cannot be regretted without an admission of being, in some respects, merited. Ahmed was engaged in other warlike affairs, beyond our province to notice: and, in his relaxation, he built Ahmedabad-Bieder, on the site of a very ancient town, which Ferishta tells us was the capital of the father of Damiyanti, and that Nulen was the king of Malwa: adding, by the way, that the story of Nulland Dummun (or very popular episode in the Mahabharata of Nala and Damiyanti) was translated into

* It may be remembered, by the way, that one of the attendant consequences of Mahomedan castigation was, that "the rest of the men which were not killed by these plagues yet repented not of the works of their hands, that they should not worship devils, and idols of gold, and silver, and brass, and stone, and of wood: which neither can see, nor hear, nor walk." Rev. ix. 20.

† Scott's Ferishta, vol. 1, p. 100.

‡ Ib. p. 101.

§ Ib. p. 102.

¶ Ib. p. 102—3.

Persian by the order of Akbar. Ahmed's character changed for the worse after the building of Ahmedabad. Sunk in the indulgences of a second Capua, we take leave of him with feelings of pity, amounting to contempt.

In the mean time Deo-Roy was anxious to discover whence proceeded the Mahomedan superiority in arms. A little study of princely character might have taught him, that kings ought not to sleep, in the day time, in the face of an enemy, unattended; and that they should manifest courage and prudence, even after a surprise, as Ahmed had done. But kings do not blame themselves or their fathers for misadventures. In his council the prominent opinions were: the one, that fate had ordained the Mussulman superiority during thirty thousand years, as declared by a prophecy then current among them; the other, that the superiority of the enemy consisted in their archers. Determined by the latter opinion, the Rayer took two thousand Mussulman-archers into his service, built a mosque for them in his capital, had the Koran placed on an embroidered desk before his throne, in order that his mercenaries might do him obeisance, without violating their own law; and, by their means, he trained sixty thousand Hindus of his own army to become expert bowmen. Exclusive of these he is said to have had eighty thousand horse, and two hundred thousand infantry; * but perhaps the numbers are exaggerated. All this might have been very well, if the Rayer had not trusted to his archers. In Hegira 847 (A. D. 1443) he crossed the Timmedra (or Toomboodra) river; and digested the old bone of contention, the fort of Mudkul, by taking it: he then sent to besiege Roijore and Beechapore. Sultan Alla-w-di-n II., who had ascended the throne Hegira 833 (or A. D. 1434), summoned forces from Telingana, Dowlatabad, and Berar; which composed an army of fifty thousand horse, sixty-thousand foot, and artillery.† Three actions were fought within two months, in the first of which the Hindus had the advantage, and in the others they were worsted. A treaty was concluded: Deo-Roy continued tributary, and had the mortification to find that notwithstanding his leaning on an arm of flesh, and trusting in his bowmen, yet that the law of fate, as announced by the prophecy, was inexorable.

As to the Sultan, he was a compound of contradictions; but withal would be accounted a devout Mussulman. He held no intercourse with the Nazarenes or Bramins; he enforced the law of Mahomet against the use of wine, with unsparing rigour, on all but himself; allowed a body of Syyeds, or descendants of the prophet, to be unjustly massacred; and yet would ascend the desk of the mosque on Fridays, trespass on the Muluvi's office, read the Kutbah, or prayers for himself, wherein he was styled the just, the merciful, and so forth: until one day some Arabs, whom he had plundered, gave him publicly the lie in his teeth; denied that he was either just or merciful; and asserted that, on the contrary, he was a murderer of the Syyeds, and a plunderer of the poor. So much for the glory of Islam.

In the reign of Mahummud Shah Bhamini we find operations carried on against Orissa,‡ where the Shah killed a Bramin with his own hand, which was considered, even by his own people, as a sinister augury. He remained three years in Rajahmundry, and then carried on operations against Nersinga,§ who it is intimated was in rebellion against Vijianagaram;

Scott's Ferishta, vol. 1, p. 118.

† Ib. p. 119.

‡ Ib. p. 103.

§ Ib. p. 165.

whose territories seem to have been cut off from the Rayer's dominions to the southward of Masulipatam, coinciding with the more recent kingdom of Narsinga, once confounded by Europeans with Vijianagaram, and being substantially the same with the kingdom of which the capital was Chandragiri after the overthrow of Vijianagaram. In this incursion the Shah penetrated to Kinjee, induced by report of a Hindu temple there covered with plates of gold. No doubt Kanji (or Kanchipuram) is intended; as Persian orthography is not very definite, or is easily capable of mistake in the vowel points. A gigantic and adventurous horseman here tilted with the Sultan, at the first onset, but was slain; and though considerable resistance was made, yet the temple was plundered.*

Some time afterwards Mahomed Shah allowed his exemplary, faithful, and virtuous minister, Kajeh Jehaun,† to fall a prey to the machinations of envious and malicious courtiers, who, as usual, (when the meritorious and exemplary are near the evil and narrow-minded,) could not endure so much merit, and contrived to get him slain, on a charge of treachery; the last fault of which he would have been capable. He suffered without due examination being had, in the very presence of the too hasty and credulous Sultan, and with a prophetic sentence on his lips, fulfilled by the event. Symptoms of disaffection forthwith appeared. The Shah discovered the truth too late; he became a victim of extreme remorse; and died declaring that Khajeh Jehaun was preying on his vitals; but not before the standards of revolt had been reared, and his kingdom was in effect 'dismembered. This was Hegira 887 (A. D. 1482); and about the same time Siva-Roy, prince of Vijianagaram, is said to have sent an expedition against Goa.

Some intrigues are recorded by Ferishta,‡ in which Casim Bereed induced Raam-Raje (minister of the Roy, who was a child) to proceed against Eusuff Adil Khan; who, having propitiated Raam-Raje, proceeded to avenge himself on Casim Bereed. These are insignificant, except as in some degree explaining the ascendancy acquired by Rama-Raja. The Bhamini dynasty ended with Sultan Kulleem oolla Bhamini, having been previously reduced to a shadow; and about the same time Baber set aside the old dynasty at Delhi, and mounted the throne there. At this date, Hegira 933, (or A. D. 1526,) the Dekhan (or Mahomedan) power between the Tapti and Krishna rivers§ was divided into five kingdoms, or the Adil Shawei of Beejeapore, the Kuttub Shawei of Golconda, the Ummand Shawei of Berar, the Nizam Shawei of Ahmednuggur, and the Bereed Shawei of Ahmedabad Bieder. ||

These principalities, taken singly, were each incompetent to cope with the greater power of Vijianagaram. The only bond that could unite them was zeal for their common religion; and it is somewhat singular that Rama-Raja, by a needless affront, should have touched this common chord of unison a little too roughly. "This (insult) is not specified by Ferishta; "but the Hindu records state, that on going to an audience of the Raja, the envoy (of "Ibrahim Adil Shah) passed on his way some swine, intended to be given to menials of the "court. As he expressed his abhorrence of these unclean animals to the Raja, the latter

* Scott's Ferishta, vol. 1, p. 166. † Ib. p. 172. ‡ Page 190. § Colonel Wilks, South of India, chap. 1.

|| Ferishta, end of part I.

"treated his aversion with ridicule; and asked him how he could hold them as unclean when he fed upon fowls, which picked up grains from the ordure of swine? and took an opportunity of shewing him the fact. The insult roused Ibrahim Adil Shah to arms; and he was readily joined by the other Mahomedan princes, who were eager to avenge indignities offered to mosques and the faithful, by the Hindus when acting as allies with one or other of them, in their wars among themselves."*

The Mackenzie MSS., and Professor Wilson's notice concerning them, serve as a valuable check on Ferishta; and yield the means of correcting his use of the names of the rulers of Vijianagaram. It may be observed, that the first rout of the Rayer's camp by Mahomed Shah Bhamini, is placed by him Hegira 767; and the close of the Bhamini dynasty, Hegira 933 (A. D. 1526); and if thirty-eight years be added, to bring us down to the era of the battle of Tellicotta, the total is two hundred and four years; during which whole period Ferishta mentions no other names of Vijianagaram rulers than Kishen-Roy, Dewul-Roy, Deo-Roy, Seva-Roy, and Ram-Raze: being an average of something more than forty years to each; contrary to probability, and contrary to fact. Still, without other information than that given by Ferishta, the error could only be conjectured, not proved. The difference between the solar computation of the Christian era, and the lunar reckoning of the Mahomedan Hegira, being presumed to be correctly given by the translator in his margin, we arrive at the necessity of carrying up the first contests, between the principalities of Vijianagaram and Kulburga, to an earlier period of the former's existence than we had at first anticipated. By comparison with the list given in p. 97—8, we shall find, that Hegira 767, or A. D. 1365, carries us up to the fifteenth year of the reign of Booka-Rayaloo (or Bukha-Rayer). The first mention of Dewul-Roy occurs Hegira 801 (A. D. 1399), corresponding with the twentieth year of Harihara-Rayer, who reigned in all twenty-two years; yet Dewul-Roy continues for a considerable time after to be mentioned by Ferishta. Deo-Roy is said to have formed the corps of archers; and to have opened a campaign Hegira 847 (A. D. 1443): this date corresponds with the ninth year of the reign of Gunda-Deva-Rayer. Narsinga is mentioned (as prince of a different state) at about Hegira 885 (A. D. 1480), which corresponds with the reign of Mullicar-Rayer; after which, a brief interval of eight years, with two intervening short-lived rulers, brings us to Nurasinga-Rayer; and the change of dynasty in him and his posterity. Seva-Roy is mentioned as cotemporary with Mahummud Shah, who died Hegira 887 (A. D. 1482), still in the reign of Mullicar-Rayer. The close of the Bhamini dynasty Hegira 933 (A. D. 1526) synchronizes with the nineteenth year of the reign of Krishna-Rayer. The year 1564 agrees with the reign of Salasiva, and the usurped power of Ram-Raja.

By this process we arrive at one of two conclusions. Either Ferishta, well knowing the events of Krishna-Rayer's reign, deliberately removed it to near the top of the series, from the wish to obliterate the memory of Mahomedan disasters, and to paint Krishna Rayer to posterity in the very opposite point of view to the real events of his reign: or else, being ignorant of the names of the earlier Rayers, he took the list of those which he did know; and, only keeping the order of succession undisturbed, was reckless as to the chronological propriety of his narrative, so far as they were concerned. Either of these motives (and something of both may have been blended) would detract seriously from his veracity; and he must be considered an unfaithful guide: so that whether the battles and events which he narrates as favorable to the Mahomedan side are, or are not, to be taken cum grano salis, the reader will be pleased to determine.

* Wilson's Des. Cata. vol. 1, p. 297—8.

The probability is, that he has given an approximating sketch of early events in the Vijayanagaram state; of which the native chronicles, so far as we are aware, say nothing. The indication afforded respecting Nersinga seems adapted to fill up a chasm of some importance. The change of dynasty at Vijayanagaram is but obscurely alluded to by the Mackenzie MSS.* It however appears, that Narasinha was a Telinga Raja, the son of Iswara-Raja, the petty sovereign of Karnul and Arviri, a tract of country on the Tunga-bhadra (Toomboodra), to the east of it, near its junction with the Krishna: his grants extend from A. D. 1487 to 1508. Some accounts say that the last prince, Virupaksha, was conquered by a Telinga Raja: others, that he raised one of his slaves to the throne. The former of the two seems the most probable; and the indication given by Ferishta coincides therewith. His description of Nersinga's dominion shews that in 1480 much territory must already have been acquired from the former possessions of Vijayanagaram,† and every thing seems to intimate that he subverted the Karuba dynasty, ending with Virapaksha: although there still remains some obscurity to be accounted for between Narasinga and Narasa; and it appears by one statement‡ that Krishna-Rayer, the second son of Narasa, came to the throne by the deposition of his elder brother Viranarasinha.

So far therefore as dates are concerned, Mr. Wilson is grounded in saying that the name of Krishna-Rayer is not mentioned by Ferishta:§ the fact is, that the historian greatly displaces the name; whether intentionally, in order to disgrace it, from a motive of pique, cannot be decided. That he puts Siva-Roy erroneously|| for Krishna-Roy may be doubted; since the date given to Siva-Roy is so much higher up, and in the reign of Mallicar-Rayer. We may here quote a few periods from Mr. Wilson, they being comprehensive and sufficient, so far as Krishna-Rayer is concerned.

“ In the latter part of the fifteenth century the line was changed, and Narasa, Narasinha, “ or Vira-Narasinha, whom the Hindu records regard as of Telinga extraction, is described “ by Ferishta as a powerful chief of Telingana, who had possessed himself of the greater part “ of the territory of Vijayanagar. His illegitimate son, Krishna-Raya, appears to have been “ the most distinguished of the whole series of Vijayanagar princes; and although his name “ is not mentioned by Ferishta, it is admitted that in 1520, or in his reign, the Musselmans “ sustained a severe defeat from the armies of Vijayanagar, and that subsequently a good “ understanding prevailed between that court and the Biapur monarchy, for a considerable

* Des. Cata. Intro. p. cxlii. cxliv.

† Mr. Wilson also infers that the territory of former princes must have been “ considerably reduced before the Kuruba dynasty was exterminated.” Intro. p. cxlx.

‡ Des. Cata. Intro. p. cxlv.

§ Ib. vol. 1, p. 295.

|| Ib. Intro. p. cxlviii.

“period.—According to the authority which has given rise to these observations, Krishna-Rayer was the son of Narasa or Narasinha, by Nigamba, a friend or attendant of the queen, and was actually an incarnation of Krishna, the (so called) deity. His step-mother, Tippamba, jealous of his superiority as a boy over her son Viranarasinha, prevailed on her husband to order Krishna-Deva to be put to death. The officer to whom this duty was intrusted, being reluctant to fulfil it, applied to the prime minister, who undertook to secrete the prince till he could be produced with safety; and the king was told that his commands had been obeyed. In his last illness the king was much afflicted for the death of his son, on which the minister produced the prince, and Krishna-Deva was declared heir and successor. The minister delayed proclaiming him till he had secured the concurrence of the Palligars, which was obtained, it is said, through supernatural aid, an absurd tale being introduced for this purpose. Viranarasinha, it is added, died of vexation, on his brother being acknowledged raja. The contests of Krishna-Raya with the Mahomedan prince of Bijapur have been already adverted to, and he is here said to have waged successful war against the Mahomedan sovereign of Golconda.

“According to this work,* Krishna-Raya reduced Maisur (Mysore), and the country along the Kaveri, to his authority—defeated the Mahomedan armies of Bijapur and Golconda—captured the forts of Udayagiri, Kondavir, and Kondapilli; and invaded Orissa, the Gajapati prince of which country was compelled to do him homage. He married the daughter of the raja of Orissa, and returned to Vijayanagar, with which the narrative concludes.”†

Krishna-Rayer was succeeded by Achyuta-Deva, after some previous ministerial intrigues; and he by Sadasiva, already frequently alluded to as a mere pageant prince in the hand of Rama-Raja. There were however some struggles in the interval between the death of Achyuta-Deva and the accession of Sadasiva, marked in the list given, p. 98, by the introduction of the name of Saleca-Timma-Raaze. We pass by this circumstance, as unimportant as it is obscure, and which even Mr. Wilson's conjectures ‡ do not appear to us satisfactorily to reconcile or explain; and think it sufficient to consider the power of Rama-Raja ultimately established. Thenceforward the brief observations of Mr. Wilson appear to us to be the surest guide; which are accordingly extracted.

“That Rama-Raja was a man of spirit and conduct, is evident from the course of Mahomedan history. The princes of the Dekhin were glad to court his alliance. Ali Adil Shah and Kutub Shah were compelled to purchase his forbearance by territorial concessions. The arrogance with which he seems to have been in consequence inflated, led him to treat their ambassadors with indignity; and insulted pride, religious bigotry, and political dread, combined them in arms against him. The Padshahs of Bijapoor, Golconda, Dowletabad, and Berar, united their forces in the year 1564, and marched to Talikota, on the Krishna, to overthrow the power of the Vijayanagar principality. The Hindu prince, on hearing of their designs, collected a powerful force, and occupied the right bank of the Krishna, which the allies were unable to cross in the face of the hostile “ army. By a judicious feint, the sultans drew the Hindu prince away from the ford, and effected a passage: a general action ensued, in which the Hindus had the advantage, until the Raja was taken prisoner. The Hindu account says that the divisions of Kutteh Shah and Nizam Shah had been defeated; but the forces of Ali Adil and Ammad ul Mulk covered their retreat. The Hindus, conceiving the enemy annihilated, gave themselves up to rejoicing and festivity, and were surprised in their encampment. Ferishta, who may be considered as a cotemporary, admits that the wings of the Mohammedan army were thrown into disorder, and that some of the leaders despaired of the day, when it was relieved by the success of the centre, under Nizam Shah, and the capture of Rama-Raja. The Hindu prince was taken before Nizam Shah, who ordered his head to be struck off and mounted on a lance, to intimidate the victorious division of the Hindu army. The Hindu accounts concur in the capture and death of Rama-Raja; but ascribe them to Ali Adil Shah. The Sultan is described as beheading the Raja with his own hand, at the request of the latter, to save him from the personal degradation of confinement. The Hindu memoirs assert that Ali Adil Shah was forced into the war by the other Mohammedan princes; but Ferishta makes him the author of the confederacy. That writer mentions also the visit made formerly by Ali Adil Shah to Vijayanagar to secure the alliance of Ramraj, and his adoption as a son by the Raja's mother. In the Rama-Raja Cheritra, the Hindu prince terms the Sultan his son, and reminds him how often in infancy he had sat upon his knees. In complying with his request, and striking off his head, Ali Adil Shah is represented as performing no more than filial duty.

“ After the defeat of the Hindu prince the confederates marched to Vijayanagar, which they took, plundered, and destroyed. Ferishta, writing about twenty or thirty years afterwards, observes, that the city was still uninhabited and in ruins, whilst the country was occupied by the Zeminclars, each of whom had assumed an independent power in his own district. Several of these were members, either of the royal family of Vijayanagar, or of that of Rama-Raja. Grants in the reign of Sadasiva are continued to S.S. 1492 (A.D. 1570), six years after the battle of Talikota; and his descendants are traced sovereigns of the principality of Bednur to the middle of the eighteenth century. Venkatadri, one brother of Rama, maintained himself at Belkonda and Chandragiri, whilst another brother, Trimul, retained possession of Penakonla. A son of Rama-Raja, with the aid of one of his uncles, recovered possession of Anaguntli and Vijayanagar: on the direct line becoming extinct, Venkatapati, a kinsman of the Chandragiri branch, succeeded; the seventh from him, Timmappa, was dispossessed by Tipu Sultan, and became a pensioner of the British Government.” *

Thus at the battle of Tellicotta the sun of Vijayanagaram set in blood, to rise no more with its former splendor. Ferishta's account of the battle implies that Rama-Raja despised his enemy; vauntingly and injudiciously exposed himself; and had to blame himself for his own capture. What share in the events, from the reign of Krishna-Rayer downwards to this fatal close, may have been taken by the two persons who figure in the outset of the Carnataka Dynasty, in the sections under annotation, we cannot positively determine. It seems probable, however, that when Visvanatha-Naicker is said to have overcome some rebellious tributary princes in the north, these may have been the kings of Kondavir, Warankal, Cuttack, and perhaps the Adil Shahi sultans. It is also most probable, that the occasion which drew away Ariya-natha-Muthahar from Madura to the north, was the combination of Mahomedan princes, who very probably had feudatories, or vassals, from the ancient Maharashtras, or Mahrattas, in their train. "On the downfall of Vijayanagarum," Mr. Wilson remarks, "the governors of Gingee, Trichinapali, Mysore, and other places to the south, became at the same time independent;"* and hence, as we have already seen, arose the autocratical power and splendor of Visvanatha-Naicker, with the official dignity of his compeer, friend, and generalissimo, Ariya-natha-Muthahar.

CARNATAKA DYNASTY, SEC. 6.

It appears from this section, that the evils inherent in the feudal system of tenure very speedily began to manifest themselves. Some notice of the Palliya-carer, will be best introduced in another place. In one of the two MS. lists which we have of them, we find the name of Dummarhi-Naicker simply mentioned but without the name of his district being added. The conduct of Periya-Kistnama-Naicker seems to have been temperate and dignified. There are with us no materials for the further illustration of his reign. We should imagine that inscriptions must exist at Palamcottah, commemorating his buildings and grants. Kistnapuram, the name of the town which he built, is derived from another copy of the leading Manuscript. Most of our readers will be aware, that Palliyangkotai and Tinnevely (or Palamcottah and Tinnevely) differ only as a fort differs from its pottah, or town, and are, we believe, on different banks of the Temburan river.

CARNATAKA DYNASTY, SEC. 7.

We have here a circumstance stated of considerable interest, but without any further clue to guide our researches. The allusion to the king of Mavalivanam is made in a passing and familiar way, as to a matter very well known and understood at the time when the MS. was written. The word Mavalivanam will not bear an application to the Marawa country. The Mahiyalam country is also radically different in its orthography. There is no independent Palliyam of this name in our lists. And the only name (within our knowledge) to which the names agree is Mavaliveram, or the Seven Pagodas, near Madras, sometimes learnedly termed Mahabalipuram. Besides, on inquiry, it is found, that the people of the country commonly use the words Mavalivanam and Mavaliveram quite indifferently and interchangeably; and, that there can be no reason whatsoever to question the application of the name in our MS. to the place called on the spot, more usually, Mavaliveram. Hence we presume that the certainty of the reference may be taken for granted. We further remember speaking with an intelligent native, who, alluding to the ancient division of the Sora-desam, said, that after the partition of it by a Soren king in favor of his son, this part of the country came to be called Tura-mandalam (that is, we suppose, Tonda-mandalam); and that the capital of this latter kingdom was at Mavaliveram. If such were the origin of the Mavalivanam kingdom, then an attack by its king on the ancient Pandiya-mandalam is perfectly explicable. The invasion we see was repelled; but having at present no materials for illustrating the military movements in this campaign, we might possibly crave the reader's permission to arrest his attention for a short time, and fix it on the spot named originally after Mubali, which subsequently became the site of a town, most probably the capital of a kingdom, of which the submerging waves have now left only a few vestiges. But perhaps the doing so might too much interrupt the course of our present illustration, especially as the reference is but slight, and may be as yet accounted uncertain. Should any remarks, as the result of personal observation, be thought suitable, we may put them into a paper in the Appendix.

* Des. Cata. vol. 1, p. 298.

The fort built by Periya-Virupa-Naicker to the south of Trichinopoly, is susceptible of the various reading given from two Manuscripts. We conjecture, however, that அந்நகர் கோட்டை (Arpa-kottai), a small fort, or one of no great consequence, may be the true reading. In Mr. Orme's history, frequent mention is made of Elimiseram, as a fortified rock to the south of Trichinopoly, much inwoven with the military transactions in that neighbourhood. Whether this be the fort in question, can at present be only matter of conjecture.

It is to be presumed, from the first mention here occurring, that the subsequent custom of committing a secondary authority to a younger brother of the reigning prince, carrying with it a right to the throne in case of the elder one leaving no legitimate posterity, was now first begun. It is known from history that the like custom was ruinous to the later Roman empire, from the divisions and civil wars to which it gave occasion; and it also proved, in the event, the proximate cause of the subversion of the small state of Madura by the Mahomedans, as will be seen from the later portion of the narrative.

CARNATAKA DYNASTY, SEC. 8.

In the manuscript of the Mackenzie collection entitled Pandya-mandala Rajakal, some mention of the Marawa country occurs; of which Mr. Wilson gives the following abstract.*—"The work contains also some account of the people of Marawa, who it is said "were originally a colony of fishermen from Ceylon, settled at Rimeswara, and on the "opposite coast, by Ruma, to guard the temple. They were made slaves by the new

* Des. Cata. vol. 1, p. 195.

“ colonists, and long continued to be subject to the Pandya princes: at length becoming numerous, they rose against their masters; and established themselves under their own princes, the Setupatis, or lords of the straits: the Chandra, or Sender Bandi,* apparently, of Marco Polo. For eleven generations the Setupatis were lords paramount, even over Madura; and the Pandya princes were reduced to the condition of feudatories; until the whole of the kingdom fell under the Marawa power for three reigns, when they were driven to the south of the Kaveri again by the Kurumba prince of Alakupuri; and finally Madura and Tanjore were taken from them by the officers of the Vijayanagar kings.”

• In another place † we have referred to this statement, and we cannot but intimate some doubts of the correctness of this alleged ascendancy, though it is not distinctly denied. The present section of our leading Manuscript would rather imply a very partially inhabited and ill-regulated country, at a period comparatively early after the accession of the Vijayanagaram dynasty. At the same time, it would seem that there was some head man of prominence and influence, to whom the title of Sethopathi belonged, before it was confirmed by the king of Madura. Udiyan is rather a title than a proper name, signifying “ a possessor,” somewhat synonymous to “ lord of the manor,” or, in ancient times, a feudal baron. The same title, with the dialectic variation of Wadeyar, was common in Mysore. Now this chief, it is evident, was not lord paramount of the whole Marawa province: the interest of the king’s guru, and the authority delegated to Udiyan Sethopathi, were the means of enabling him to subdue and regulate the province; and whatever may have been the state of the case in more ancient times, here at least we find the origin of the Marawa prince, whose descendants are connected with the history of subsequent times. In some manuscript notices of Poligars, the Marawa kingdom is mentioned as a filial offset from that of Madura; and is compared, by metaphor, to an adopted child. With such a term the account we find in the leading MS. very well agrees. And though, like some other wayward children, it gave trouble to the parent state, in the following reign; yet, on return to a better mind, the disloyalty was amply atoned for by being perhaps the immediate means whereby the Madura kingdom was prevented from being conquered by the Mysoreans. It was of equal importance at a later period; and, indeed, down to the very close, seems to have well maintained its affiliated character.

For the sake only of readers at a distance it is noted, that the temple of Ramiseram was built to commemorate the invasion of Lanka, or Ceylon, by Rama-Chandra; which is the principal subject of the Ramayana. The great popularity of the poem has rendered Ramiseram one of the most celebrated places of pilgrimage in the southern Peninsula of India.

* Banthu is a Tamil word to denote relationship; hence Sender Bandi would seem to mean the same as Chandra Vamanu, which the Pandions considered themselves to be.

† Vol. 2, p. 74.

CARNATAKA DYNASTY, SEC. 9.

In a college list of Mackenzie MSS., now in the charge of the Madras Auxiliary of the Royal Asiatic Society, mention is made of one professing to give an account of the reign of Mutthu-Virapa-Naicker. This MS. we hope to see, so as to ascertain whether it refer to the elder brother, or to the son of Trimala-Naicker; both of whom are passed by, with the simple mention of their names, by our present authority.

The reign of Trimala-Naicker forms the most distinguished epoch, after the formation of the dynasty, in the history of the modern kingdom; and this owing to the great munificence of the monarch in public buildings and endowments: conferring a before unknown splendor on the place; and being the cause of nearly all the curiosity and inquiries directed by Europeans to this town, the ancient remains (though the antiquity is not great) being much better known than any thing else concerning it, down at least to a very recent period. With the comparatively slight exception of Professor Wilson's digest, in his Descriptive Catalogue, we presume that our own researches will be the first to give a general and connected view both of the antiquities and history. Before introducing any annotations of our own on the reign of Trimala-Naicker, we would refer to the Mirtanjeya MSS.; and, after introducing such of them as bear on this reign, we would offer a few further remarks on those points in this section which they leave unnoticed.

These manuscripts will now follow: and we have much pleasure in adding, that the above-mentioned Mackenzie MSS. yield further matter for illustrating the reigns of this prince and some of his successors.

THE ACCOUNTS OF TIRUMALI-NAICKER, AND OF HIS BUILDINGS.

As extracted, for information, from written authorities.

In the year S.S. 1544, in Dundimi year, the 7th of Masi month, Mutthu-Tirumali-Naicker came to Madura in order to be anointed, (or installed,) to receive the sceptre and other ensigns of royal authority. While he was reigning in Tirusirapali, he suffered, in a bad time, from a catarrh, by which he was greatly troubled, so as to be unable to eat; and though he worshipped in the temples of Ranga and Jembu, (on the island in the Cauvery,) the disease was not alleviated. He removed to sway the sceptre at Madura, not without greatly suffering (on the road). He came by way of Dindigul; and while resting during the journey, the goddess Minatchi, and the god Suntaresvarer, by an act of favor, appeared to him in a dream, in a divine form, and said, that if he (finally) removed, and fixed the seat of his government at Madura, and there duly built and ornamented the temple, with other similar things, they would cure him of his disease; and they seemed to him in vision to give him the sacred ashes to swallow, and to rub him with them externally. This vision he saw during the Indian hour just preceding day-break. On arising, he narrated this dream to the Bramins, to his ministers, and others; and vowed, that, if he should be cured of the disease, he would give five lacs of gold puns to make sacred works, repairs, and ornaments. Immediately after, while cleaning his teeth, (as usual in the early morning with all natives,) his stomach was relieved of the entire disease, by favor of the Siddha-murti (or deity). As soon as he was freed from the catarrh, he became more devoted to the god; and entered into the profession symbolized by the sacred ashes and five letters; and then came to the palace of his elder brother. After receiving the sceptre, his bodily health became daily better; and he was at length entirely well. From the centre of the temple as far as to the Cabali wall, he had the whole repaired or re-constructed. Besides, from the public revenues he gave one thousand puns out of every lac (or hundred thousand) for the customary and extraordinary services and festivals of the god; and for the regular

திருமலையுயர்க்காய்ப்பாவர்கள் நானையிலநடந்தசெய்திக்கி தெரியும்படியாய்எனது
விச்சுவகோசததமிளசுவத்திய-(ஸ்)-சாலியவாகன்கொபுததம்-தஞ்சையச-க்ருமே
லசெல்லா நின்றதுததமி-(ஸ்)மாசிஸ்யெவ-முததுதிருமலையுயர்க்காய்ப்பாவர்களுக்கு
பட்டாபிஷேகமாய்மதுளையிலவததுசெவகோலும்மூலபொய்ததினிடமாயவாங்குவத
தார்களிப்படிக்கிதிருச்சுராப்பள்ளியிலிருந்துராசரிக்கம்பண்ணுகையிலதம்மவசத்தி
னாலேகொளரோகம்பவததுஅதினாலேரொம்பவும் உபத்திரியததைஅடைநதுஅன்னமா
காநங்குடயிலலாமலசெவகருயகர் செம்புததமுதலான தேவர்ஆளுநினையிலும்நீரா
மலவெரு தும்பததுடனேஅச்சய-(ஸ்)சித்தினாமன்-செவகோல வாங்குதததுக்குஆக
மதுளாக்குயெருநதருளியருகையிலதிணுக்கலமார்த்தமாய்வரும்போ துமினாட்சிசுந
தரோசுவராளுக்கு கிறைப்பததுசித்தருபமாய்போய் சொற்ப்பனம்சாதிச்சார் பெப்ப
டியெனருலமதுளாதலம் பெரியலதலமாயிருக்கஅதற்குபூசை புனரக்காரம்உச்ச
வாதிபளதிருப்பணிதிருவாபரணங்கசகலமும்உபரியாய்நடப்பிவிச்சுக்கொணநீயும்
மதுளையில தானையிருநதுராசரிக்கம்பண்ணிகொணநி யிருநதாலஇநத ரோகத்தை
தீததுப்போடுகுரோம்யெனது மேலெல்லாங்கயினாலேதனாலி வீபுதியும்நரிததுஉ
ளாக்கும்வீபுதிருதித்ததைவாங்கிபொசித்ததாய்விடிய ஒருனானியருக்குசொற்ப்பன
ங்கண்டார்களவிடிருச உடனேசாமாசிகளபிரதானியளமுதலான பெரிடத்திலஇநத
சொப்பனவிர்த்ததாந்ததைசொல்லிசந்தேஷமாய்இந்த உபத்திரியம்மட்டும்தீர்ந்தா
லசுவாமிக்கிஅருகெலட்சம் பொனதிருப்பணிதிருவாபரணம் செய்விக்குரோம்யென
றுபிராத்தினபண்ணிக்கொண்டார்களஉடனேதெநத தாவனம்பண்ணுரூபோ துவா
நதிபண்ணவததுவாநதிஆரூபே துசித்தமுதததிக்கிறபையினாலேக்கூட டோடெகன
ணிலிருநதுதுகொளரோகம்நிவாரணமானஉடனே சுவாமியினிடத்திலஅங்கிபகித்திட
ண்டாய்விபுதிபஞ்சாட்சாத துக்குளபடரிசைவமததைஅனுசரிததுக்கொணநிதமை
யருருடையஅரமனை வததுசேர்ந்தார்களசெவகோலும் வாங்கிஆனஉடனே னாளுக்கு
னாளதேகம்புரிதது ஆரோக்கியத்தை அடைநதுதுகொறப்பக்கெதகம்முதல கபாலிஉ
டையவரமதிளவகாக்கும்முன்னுதாகசகலமானதிருப்பணியாரும்போக்குவததுப்பா fulfilment of this gift, he endowed the temple with lands to the annual value of forty-four thousand puns.* He also gave a village for the constant support of the Stanega, or head Bramins, and the other persons belonging to the temple: of all which there is a regular account.

THE SPECIFICATION OF HIS VOW.

For a tiru-vatchi, or golden semi-circlet, to be put over the image in processions,

One lac of puns.

For a golden throne with jewels for the god, One lac of puns.

For digging and constructing the Terpa-kullam, One lac of puns.

For the building of the Vasanta-Mandabam,† One lac of puns.

For miscellaneous temple ornaments, One lac of puns.

Having thus arranged the plan, the whole was begun to be carried into execution at once, in the tenth day of Vyasi month of Acheya year, during the increase of the moon. From that time forwards, as the master came daily to inspect the work, it was carried on with great care. As they were proceeding first in excavating the Terpa-kulam, they dug up from the middle a Ganapathi, (or image of Ganesa,)‡ and caused the same to condescend to dwell in a temple built for the purpose. As they were placing the sculptured pillars of the Vasanta-Mandabam, and were about to fix the one which bore the representation of Yega-patha-murti, (or the one-legged deity,) they were opposed by the Vaishnavas. Hence a dispute arose between them and the Saivas, which lasted during six months, and was carried on in the presence of the sovereign. Two arbitrators were appointed, Appa-tidshadar on the part of the Saivas, and Ayya-tidshadar-ayyen on the part of the Vaishnavas: these consulted Sanscrit authorities, and made the Sastras agree; after which the pillar of Yega-patha-murti was fixed in its place. When the pillar representing the wonders performed by the Sittar (vide the 20th Tiruvilliadel) was being sculptured, the king came to see the work carried on. The chief sculptor was named Sumantira-

* Whence it is to be presumed that his whole revenue amounted to forty-four lacs of gold puns.

† This is a summer palace, intended to relieve the god from the oppression of extreme heat, and furnished with fans, flowers, &c.

‡ Considered to be a propitious omen.

த்துபுதுப்பிவிச்சு அப்பாலலெட்சத துக்கு ஆயிரம்பொன்வீதம்சுவாமிக்குபூசைக்கும்உ
 ச்சுவாதிபருக்காகவும் நார்ப்பததிநாலாயிரம் பென்சீமையுமீவிட்டுக்குடுத துல தானீ
 காள்பரிசனங்களுக்கும்அனனபா குதியருக்கு சுததசருவமானனியமாய்க்கிராமவிட்டுக்
 குடுததார்களாதறக்கெலலாம் கணக்குணடுபிராததினைசெய்த துக்கு விபர்ம்சுவாமிக்கு
 ர்ததினததிருவாசிலெட்சம்பொன னுமீர்ததின சிவகாசனம்லெட்சம்பொன னும்வெதப்
 பக்குளம்லெட்சம்பொன னும் வசநதமண்டபம்லெட்சம்பொன னும் சிலலாதிருபீ
 பணிகள்லெட்சம்பொன னும்இறதப்பிரகாரம் நேமுகம்பண்ணின உடனே அடசெய்
 ஸ்வயயாசிமீயெ - பூர்வபட்சம்முகூறததம்பண்ணினார்கள் அதுமுதலவேலையள
 அதிசாக்கிரதையாய்ப்பிறபுதிததம்வந துகண்ப்பார்ப்பதினாலே அதிசாக்கிரதையாய்ந
 டநதுது முனனுதாகதெப்பக்குளம்வெட்டுகுறபோது நடுவிலேஉததாறணமாபீஒரு
 கெணபதிஉதையமா ஓர்அவகாக்கோவிலில யெருநதருளப்பண்ணிவிச்சார்களவசநத
 மண்டபம்தூண்நாட்டுகுறபோதுயேகபாதமூறததிவர்ணிச்சியிருக்குற தூணைநடப்ப
 டாதெனறுசீமையிலஉளவயிஷணவாருக்கும்சையவாருக்கும் வாக்குவாதமாய்ஆரு
 மாசம்வகாக்கும்விபகாரம்யேவினசுவாமிமுனனிலைக்கிறதநதுதுஅப்பாலசைவசிததா
 னததிஅப்பாதிட்சதாவயிஷணர் அய்யாதிட்சதாய்யனவர்கள் அனேகம்கிறதநங்களப்
 பாத்துசா லத்திர்சம்மதிபண்ணிவிச்சுஅப்பாலயேகபாதமூற்த்திதூணைநட்டார்கள்யெ
 லலாவலசிததர் தூணைஅடிக்கிறபோது யெலினசுவாமிகீளேவநதுபாத துக்கொண்டி
 ருக்கையிலவேலைசெய்யுஞ்சிப்பாசாரி சுமந்திரமூற்ததிஆசாரிக்குதுராகயயினாலேதா
 ம்பூலமடிதது சுருளைகுடுததார்கள வேலைமேலே ரூபகமாய் அததைவாங்கி தருச்சுக்
 கொண்டிபார்க்கும்வகையில அபசாரம்வநதுதுயெனறுஉடனேநடுநடுங்கி அநதொண
 டிவிர்லையும்நருக்கிப்போடடான அவனுக்குநாலுவகைவஸ்ததிரமும்வெகுமதியும்பண
 ணிதங்கததினாலேகயயும்பண்ணி விச்சார்க்குடையள யெலலாம்குமநதிர மூறததி
 கையவேலையென்றியவும்-ஸ்ரீமுக -வருஷம்வய்யாசிமீ - வசநதமண்டபம்முகிற துது
 சுவாமிஆண்டவகையெருநதருளப்பண்ணி விச்சுநிதம்ஒணனுக்குஆயிரம்பொன்வீதம்
 உபசாரங்களநடப்பிவிச்சுதானததார்பரிசனங்களைசகலததிராருக்கும்சாதிராசாலவைய

murti-acharya: the king, to do him honor, gave him betel, on which he had himself spread chunam; and, by reason of being much occupied in looking after the work, the sculptor took it and disrespectfully* put it into his mouth before the king; when, a moment after, recollecting that he had acted improperly, he became inwardly afraid, and with an instrument cut off the two fingers with which he had conveyed the betel-leaf, &c. to his mouth. But the king bestowed on him four kinds of dresses; and had a hand made of gold, which he also gave to him. The whole of the sculptures on these pillars are the work of this Sumantira-murti-acharya. *

The Vasanta-Mandabam was finished in the month called Vyasi, of Strimuga, year. The god being made to be pleased to ascend thither, a daily expense (during this feast of dedication) of one thousand puns was appointed; and presents were made to the officiating Bramins, and to all the temple servants.† These presents consisted of valuable woollen cloths, of shawls, and of four kinds of gold ornaments: and the king himself bound a fillet‡ of cloth around his temples; and he caused the Vasanta-Mandabam to be lined with cloth for the occasion, and the pillars also to be so covered. Besides, he designed to enclose the street in which the public procession is made in the month of August with a wall, that so it might be included within the limits of the temple. In the Nandana year, from Utatur (on the north) even to Canya Cumari (Cape Comorin), in all the Saiva and Vaishanava temples he commenced the building of sixty-four towers (over the temple porches) all at the same instant of time. In some places the outward finishing of the plaister figure-work was left undone. (As this deficiency arose from want of money,) the god, in the form of a Sittar, appeared to the king in a dream by night, and gave to him the guru-senturam (or red powder of projection), by means of which, on the following

* It is work of a wife or servant to spread chunam on a betel-leaf, and give it to the husband or master. If a superior spread the chunam and present it to an inferior, it is considered a distinguished mark of favor; but then the inferior, by the established rule, must retire a little on one side and put the leaf into his mouth. To take it immediately, and abruptly, is an act of disrespect and incivility.

† Parisanangal (பரிசனங்கள்), exactly corresponding with the Nethinims of the ancient Jewish temple.

‡ Sathirapari-vattam (சாதிராபரிவட்டம்), an emblem of royal dignity: as customary among more ancient nations.

ளநா லுவகை ஆபறனாதிபனும் வெகுமதிபண்ணி விச்சுதாமும் சாதிராபரி வட்டமும் கட
 டிகொண்டார்கள் வசநதமண்டபத்துக்கு சுததிகவுசனைபோடடுது ணுக்கு யெல்லாம்
 துள அடையாமலவுசனைபோடடுயிருக்கும் ஆவணிமூலவீதியைச்சுததிருமதிருந்க
 ட்டிலிச்சுமண்டபத்தை ஆலயத்துக்குள்ளே ஆக்கவேணுமென்று முகீர்த்தம்பண்ணினா
 ர்கள நதனவ ருஷிம்சிவாலயம் விஷ்ணு ஆலயம் இதுகளிலே யெல்லாம் உளட்டத தூர்
 முதலகனனிபாகுமரிவரைக்கும் தம்முடையபேராலே அறுபத்திநாலுகோபுரத்துக்கு
 வேலைநடப்பிலிக்கச் சொல்லியேக முகீர்த்தத்திற் றதம் பண்ணிவிச்சுசிறுதுயிடத
 'திலக்கலக்காராவேணு அரிதியிலநிண ணு துமகத்தாயிதம் மவாணெனபதாயித்ததரூப
 மாயியெரு நதருளி சொற்ப்பன ததிலாசவாத ததுக்கு குருசெந தூர்மும் குடித்தது அது
 னுலேவா ததித்தியாயிவசநதமண்டபத்துக்கு தங்கமலாமும் பண்ணிவிச்ச துண்டு ஸ்ரீம
 க-வருஷிம்சையம் - மய்யமண்டபத்துக்கு சரியாய்தெப்பம் உண்டு பண்ணிவிச்ச அந்த
 உச்சவத்துக்காக திடியனபுத்தூர் சீமைபதினாயிரம்பொனசீமையும் விட்டுக்குடித்தார்கள்
 ளபுராணசித்தமாயிருக்கபட்டலீலாவிணைதம் அப்பாதிசதர் சொலபடி யெல்லாம் ஷ
 தானிகாளிடமாய்செய்விக்கச் சொல்லியும் ஆவணிமூல உச்சவமுச்சயித்திர் உச்சவமும்
 தையம் - உச்சவமும் வய்யாசிம் - வசநத உச்சவமும் உண்டு பண்ணி விச்சார்கள் அப்பா
 லகோவிலபூசை உச்சவாதிபனாகவரும் பிறபலமாகி வெருவிமரிசையான படியினுலே
 செங்கோல் உச்சவமுந் ததியிடமாய்வாங்கிவந்தார்கள் தம்மிடபேராலெஅர்மனைகட்ட
 சொல்லி அதற்கும் மண்டபத்துடனே கூட முகீர்த்தம் பண்ணிவிச்சபவ - வருஷிம்சி
 ததினாம் - புதுசாயகடடின அர்மனையிலகிறகப்பிர்வேசம்பண்ணினார்கள் தெப்பஉச்ச
 வம்பார்ப்பதற்கும் அளகர்திருனா வேடிக்கைபார்ப்பதற்கும் அந்தப்புரத்து ஸ்ரீய
 னுடனேவ ததிருநது வேடிக்கைபார்க்குர்த்துக்கு ஆகசெச்சையுங்கடடி அருவாச்சுது
 மாசிவீதியிலகவாமிவந்தாலதெரிசனம்பண்ணுஞ்ர துக்காகசெச்சையுங்கடடினார்கள் தி
 ருப்புரவருணரம் முதலஷித்தலாததிர்வகளுக்கெல்லாம் உச்சவங்களுக்கு தெரிசனம்பண
 ணசெச்சையுங்கடடினார்கள் உளட்டத தூர்முதலகனனிபாகுமரிவரைக்கும் இளப்பாற
 அஞ்சுனானிகைவளிக்கி ஒரு அர்மனைவீதங்கடடின துண்டு அந்தமுனனுக்கு மதுரையில day, common metals were transmuted into gold; and with this the Vasanta-Mandabam was gilded. In Tui month^{*} of Strimugam year a Mandabam in the Terpa-kulam, exactly on the model of that in the Vasanta-Mandabam, was completed. For the expense of the Terpa-kulam festival he endowed it with the revenue of the Tediyen-Puttur village, amounting annually to ten thousand puns. Besides, agreeably to the declaration of Ayya-Tidchitar, (a Bramin versed in ancient learning,) the king commanded that the celebration of all the sacred amusements of the god should be conducted by the temple attendants according to the ordinances of the ancient books. He established the August procession, the April procession, the January procession, and the Vasanta festival of the month of May. Besides, he caused the various processions, which at frequent returns of certain seasons are made within the enclosure of the temple, to be conducted with becoming decency. In consequence of these acts, he received the sceptre as coming from the hand of the image (or god). He next gave instructions to erect a palace bearing his name, which, together with the great hall of audience, was begun; and in the Sittari month of Bava year the ceremony of entering to reside in the new palace was performed: and that the females belonging to the palace might view the two processions, of the Terpa-kulam and that of Alagar, he built an elevated terrace within the boundary of the palace, also another terrace, that they might see the procession carried on in the street named Masi, with a third terrace, that they might see the processions from Tirupurang-kundram, and other places. He also built public choultries, as resting places for travellers, from Utatur to Canya Cumari, at the distance from each other of five Indian (or about seven English) miles. At nearly the same time he established in the town of Madura combats between gladiators and elephants, tigers, and bears; and for the purpose of looking on during this spectacle, he had a two-storied building constructed, in an excellent manner, in a place named Tamakam-pottal. From that time forwards the Carnataca governors always came hither to see the spectacle. Their * charities, or public benefactions, the repairs and ornaments of

* It is somewhat difficult to determine whether Tirumala-Naicker is referred to in the customary plural mode of rendering honor, or the Carnataca rulers collectively: the translation which seems to be required by the foregoing sentence is given.

ஆணையாளர் புலியளகறடியருடனே மலலகசெடடியனைவிட்டுசண்டை பண்ணச்சொல்லி
அநதவேடிக்கைபார்ப்பதற்குஆகதமுக்கம்பொட்டலிலுட்ப்பரிக்கை உன்னிதமாய்க்
ட்டடிஅதிலயிருநதுவேடிக்கைப்பார்த்ததுஉண்டுஅதுமுதலகறருடகதுணையாளர் யெல்லா
ம்அப்படியேவேடிக்கைப்பார்த்ததுவந்தார்களாவர்கள் ராசரிக்கம்பண்ணுகையிலநட
ப்பிவிச்சதர்ம்மங்களும்திருப்பணிதிருவாபறணங்களை கோவிலப்பூசைக்கும்விட்டுகுடி
த்தகிராமங்களுக்கும் ஸ்தாலிகாள்முதலான பேருக்கும்சீவனததுக்கு விட்டுகுடித்ததி
ராமங்களுக்கும் கணக்குண்டுொண்டு கோவிலுக்கும் பர்தேசிமுதலானாவிலேஷ்டபண
'டரர்மிடமாய் விசாரணை நடநதுவருங்காலததில அம்மன மீனாட்சி அருகவயசு பெண்
போலேபோய்சொறப்பன்மீண்டாப் தம்மைவிசரிக்கவிலையென்று கேளக்குமிட
ததிலுடனே மருளுளபண்டார்த்ததை வர்வனைதது அனுகூலப்பித்ததி விசசுக்கொண்டு
அம்மன கோவிலமுசுருநிம்அவிஷேகநெவெதனத்திருமாலைநருவிளக்குதித்ததிய உபசா
ர்மெல்லாம்பகித்தியாய் நாமேநடப்பி விக்கிரோம் யெனறுயேததுக் கொண்டு தம்மு
டையபேராலேஅர்க்கட்டளை தர்மம்யீசசர் - வருஷம்தைய்மீக்ஷ - மகாசங்காரத்தியில
நெய்விளக்காயி மகனபூவணனாத பண்டார்த்ததைவிசாரணைக்கிறேமுதம் பண்ணிபன்னி
ராயர்ம்பொன்சீமையுமீவிட்டுக்குடித்ததார்களஅதுமுதலகட்டளை தர்மம்நடநதுவருகு
துவசததமண்டபத்திலமுதல வருஷம்பரிவட்டம் முதலானமரியாதியள யெல்லாந்தா
மேநடப்பி விசசுக்கொண்டார்கள மருவருஷம்ஸ்தானிகாளை ப்பாதது இனிமேலசகல
மானமரியாதியளும் சிலாசுருபியாயிருக்கும் தமக்குநடப்பிவிசசு வர்சொல்லிலததர்
வாசசுதுஅதுமுதல அப்படியேநடநதுவருகுதுஇப்படி நீதியாயவிளம்பி-வருஷம்மா
கீம் எவ்வளவுக்கும்ராசரிக்கம்பண்ணினார்கள் கோவிலப்பிறபலமான் துயெல்லா ம்திரு
மலைசவுரிநாளை யிலேயெனறுஅரிஞ்சுகொள்ளவும்சேகாபுததம் - தருளாய்-க்கு மேல
செல்லாநின்ற...

temples, the villages given in endowment for conducting the temple worship, and those given in endowment for the support of the attendant and officiating Bramins, while they ruled the kingdom, are matters of record still preserved. While the secular concerns of the two temples were under the management of Paradesi-muttirai-abeshega-Pandaram, the goddess Minatchi, in appearance like a child of five years old, appeared to the king in a dream, and said, "There is no care of me;"* to which remonstrance the king attended by summoning the Pandaram on the following day; and, speaking peaceably and mildly to him, said, "For the future, we ourselves will piously undertake the anointing, the purveying of offerings of food to the god, the robing the image with garlands of flowers, the lighting of the sacred lamps, and the whole of the daily duties, throughout the temple:" and thus he assumed the whole† (giving the Pandaram thereby a dismissal). Having assumed the management, he provided especially for the apartment appropriated to the temple-goddess, by endowing it with land, yielding revenue to the annual amount of twelve thousand puns; and from first day of Tai month of Isvara year, on the Magara-Sangranthi, (or Pongal feast,) he gave up the charge of purveyor to Puvennatha-Pandaram, the son of the hereditary female lamp-lighter‡ in the temple. From that time the appointed charities were regularly conducted. On the first year, when the festival of the Vusanta Mandabam was finished, the king permitted the ceremony of investing him with a royal fillet, and putting over him a garland of flowers taken from the image; but in following years, he declined the honor, and directed that the ceremony should be transferred to the sculptured image of himself on one of the pillars of the Mandabam. From that time forwards it was so conducted. In this manner he ruled with justice down to the 7th of Masi of Vilambi year. Let it be known that the whole of the splendor of the temple is to be attributed to the illustrious Tirumali. In the year of Salivahana Sagartam 1580. . . .

* This amounted to a complaint, either against the king or his manager the Pandaram. The temple allowances being stinted, one of them must be to blame.

† To punish such a manager is esteemed a great sin; and an arrest would suspend the whole temple order and daily expenditure. He must also of necessity be master of many temple secrets. Hence the Bramins have taken care to surround his person with a rampart of prejudices which even a king dare not assault.

‡ Neyvelakayi (நெய்விளக்காயி) an office going by descent.

பெரிய அர்மனைக்கர் த்தாக்கள் திருமலை யக்கர்வர்கள் அர்மனைவிருக்குறதிதானம்.

ஆசாறமுகப்புஇசானனியபாகததிலஇப்போதுயிருக்குறசெசசையுடனேகூட்டப
ததுததுண்டடுயிருக்குறதுக்கும்கிளக்குபெரியஆசாறமுகப்புஆகயிருந்தயிடம்அத
தயிடத்திலபதினெட்டுவிதமானவாததியகொஷிம்பண்ணுகுறதுபின்னும் அதற்கும்கி
ளக்காதணடியிலபலலாக்குமுதலானதுகளும்வயிததுயிருக்குறதுமேறபடிபததுதது
ணுக்கும்கொக்குொங்கவிலாசம்தொட்டிகட்டி-க-அதற்குவாயுவுமுலையிலசந்திரிகை
மேடை-க-அதைசசுத்திவரதொட்டிக்கட்டிக்கும் முடமுமாகயிருக்கும்அதினவடக்கு
வாசலக்காலவராசாக்களயிருக்குறயிடம் பின்னும்அனேகம்பிருதுகளஆயுதங்களும்
வக்கிறயிடம்ொங்கவிலாசத்துக்குமேறக்குஅததப்புரம்தொட்டிகட்டி-க-மேறபடிொ
ங்கவிலாசத்துதெற்குநிநுதிமுலையிலராசராசெசசுவரிமுதலானதேபூசைஸ்தானமாகி
யதொட்டிகட்டில ஒண்ணிலபூர்வமுகமாககருங்கலக்கோவில-க-முனபாகமேறபடிசவு
க்கை-க-பிதலலாமலகருங்கலவேலைப்பணிகளும்உண்டுொங்கவிலாசத்துக்குக்கிளக்கு
முகம்கருங்கலவேலைப்பணிகளும்சவுக்கைகளும்முததவெளியும்சிவகாரமமுதலானஅ
லங்காரங்களுடனேகூட்டமுன்னுதாகசெயதுதுறையவர்களயிருநதுதேபூசைகோலு
க்குமுன்னுதாகநீராவிபுமகுமமுடமுமஉத்தியாவனமமுதலானசிவகாரங்களுடனேயி
ருநதுதுதினதெனமேறக்குக்கிளக்குமேறக்குநீளமார்கயிருக்குறநாடகசாலை-க-அதி
லசாயநதிர்வேனயிலதீவட்டிகோலுவினாலேநாடகசாலைபெண்களுடனேநாட்டியங்க
ளதமக்குயிட்டமாயிருக்குறபேர்களுடனேயிருநதுதினமதோருமசாயொடசையில
கொலுவிருக்குறயிடமஅதிலமேறக்காகயிருக்கிறபெரியகுமமிடத்தினமத்தியிலகருங்க
ல்சவுக்கை-க-அதினதெற்குசொறக்கவிலாசம-க-இந்தஅர்மனையிலயிருக்குறசிவகா
ரங்களும் உன்னதத்திலுமலிஸ்தாரத்திலும்நீளத்திலுமவேலைப்பாடுகளிலுமவெருவி
னோதமாகயிருக்குறதிலுமதேசதேசாந்திரங்களிலுமயிறதவேலைகளுக்குசமானமஒரு
பிடத்திலுமயிலையெனதுசொலலுமபடியாகயிருக்குறசொறக்கவிலாசமதொட்டிகட்டி
டு-க-அதிலமேறக்காகநடுயிலபெரியகுமமிடத்திலநடுவேகருங்கலக்கச்சவிக்கையின
பேரிலதெறத்தினுலசெயதசாலையிலுத்தினசினமாசனத்தினபேரிலநவராததினாக்கு

THE ARRANGEMENT OF THE PALACE OF TIRUMALI-NAICKER, ONE OF THE GREAT PALACE LORDS.

At the entrance of the palace on the north-east side there are ten pillars; to the east of which is the great entrance. In that porch there are players on eighteen different kinds of musical instruments. Further to the east, the palanquin of ceremony, common palanquins, and other conveyances, are kept. To the west of the aforesaid ten pillars is a circular hall, called Ranga-vilasam (the Vishnu-pavilion); to the north-west of which is an elevated seat, or cool terrace. Around that is a circular building, rising in the shape of a pointed dome. To the north of that is the place for captive kings: in it there are many guns and arms. To the west of the Ranga-vilasam is a circular building, being the female apartments. To the south of the Ranga-vilasam, on the south-west quarter, is a circular building set apart for religious worship; in which there is a small shrine built of black stone: in front of which is a small square entrance-hall; it is built of black stone. To the east of the Ranga-vilasam, there are works in black stone, square halls, enclosures open at the top, with various ornamental appendages standing forth in front; and facing the before-mentioned shrine, are a bathing-place, dome-shaped, and an artificially arranged garden. To the south-west of this place is the avenue for dancers, extending in an easterly and westerly direction. In that place the king is accustomed to sit down and converse with the ministers or others, his favorites, in the evening; when flambeaus are lighted up* in the avenue at the time of homage, and when female dancers exhibit their skill before the courtiers. To the west of that avenue is a very large dome-shaped building, in the centre of which is a square hall of black stone. To the south of this is the Swerga-vilasam (Indra-pavilion). This pavilion is so constructed, as to cause it to be said that in no other country is there a saloon equal to it, on account of its splendid ornaments, their excellence, number, extent, curious workmanship, and great beauty. To the

* In purely native Hindu courts, the ceremony of homage at the lighting of the lamps is said to have been never omitted, unless the king were sick; and then not to have made the Divatti-salam was the same thing as to announce the king's illness. The ceremony is otherwise called Divatti-koluttu and Divatti-vandanam: two or three persons perform various evolutions of double torches in approaching towards the king; they then make their obeisance, in which all others present join.

ரட்சாபநதனமசெயதுகொண்டுச்சுலவிருதுகளுடனேபுமசகலராசாக்களுமததுப்ப
 ணியதக்கதாககொலுவுயிருக்குறயிடம் அதினவடக்குமதெறக்கும மேறக்குமமுணுரு
 ம்மிடத்திலுமமுணு கருங்கலசவுக்கைநடுமுதத வெளிக்கொண்டுபக்கத்திலும்ொண்டு
 குதிபாபட்டிபுடனேகூடொண்டுசாலைப்பொக்கானசவுக்கை-உ-இதற்குவளிபீசான
 னியபாகத்திலுசாறததுக்குபெதிராகயிருக்கும்இதற்குமேலதளததுக்குபோறவளிக
 னனிமூலையிலுதினமேலே உசறவததுஅறதப்புறததுபூயருடனேகூடகவாயிபெருந
 தருளியருகுறபோதுதெரிசனம்பண்ணுருதது அதற்குமுன்னுதாகநடுவேசாலைபும்
 றொண்டுபாரசத்திலும்ொண்டுசிகறமும்அலங்காறமாகசொறனனகலசங்களுடனேசெ
 யதுயிருததுது றொங்கலிசாமதேபூசைகோவிலநாடகசாலை விலாசத்தக்கும்சொறன
 னகலசம்வயததுயிருததுது சொறக்கலிவாததுக்குமேறக்குறொணிகருங்கலதொட்டிக
 டடுவெருவிசித்திரமாகயிருக்கிறதிலபட்டபூயம்மததஅறதப்புறததுபூயரும்சவகீத
 சாபுத்தியவகளகேட்டுகொண்டியிருக்கிறயிடம்அதிலகருங்கலச்சவுக்கைகளும்நாளுவர்
 னனவேலைகளும்உண்டியிதினமேறக்குபூயதசாலைஅதினவடக்குவசந்தவாபிஅதைசுத்தி
 வர்கும்மிடம்வெருகிங்காறமாகயிருக்கும்மலகசெட்டிபனஉயிததம்பாறக்குறயிடம்
 ஆட்டுக்கிடாப்பூதலானதும்பிவளவும்வேடிக்கைவினோதமாயிருக்கிறதுவடக்குஅதின
 மேறக்குஅவர்களுக்குயிட்டமாயிருக்குறபெறதுக்களும்அவர்களுடையவமுசத்தாரு
 ம்யிருக்கிறதறக்காகும்மிடங்கும்மிடமாகதொட்டிகட்டாகவெருவாகஅர்மணியிருத
 ததுஅதுவெல்லாததையும்சுத்திவார்அக்கினிமூலையிலிருததுதுபீசானனியமுசெச்சை
 வரையிலபாரிமதிள-க-அறதபாரிசியருக்குவெளியிலநிறுதிமூலையிலவெருகிங்காறமாக
 அனேகபுஷ்பசாதிளவயததுயிருக்குறகிங்காறதோப்பு-க-அதிலும்அறதப்புறதது
 பூயருடனேகூடசம்பிராமாகஇருக்குறதற்குஅதிநடுவேயிருக்குறமும்மிடமும்தொ
 டடிக்கட்டும்முததவெளியும்வாவிபும்கருங்கலசவுக்கையுமாகயிருததுது றொங்கலிசா
 ததிலதிருமலைபக்கவர்களுடையதம்பியாபசினனதுரைபாயிருக்குறமுததுவகுபக்
 கவர்களஅறதப்புறததுபூயருடனேகூடொங்கலிவசந்திலயிருததார்கள.

west, in the midst of a great dome-shaped hall, is a square building of black stone, which includes a hall made of ivory: in the middle of this is a jewelled throne, on which the king is accustomed to take his seat at the great Navu-rattiri festival, surrounded by all his banners, or ensigns of royalty; and where also all kings are accustomed to do homage. At that festival the Retshu-bandam,† (or amulet,) is put on by the king. To the north, the west, and the south, of this throne-pavilion, are three square halls. In the front of the palace are two roads, adapted for a chariot with two horses, which lead out of the entrance on the north-west side. From this quarter is the ascent to the upper apartment, where there is a terrace, with two ornamental and gilded minarets, on either hand; to which terrace the females of the palace proceed in order to look on, at the times of the public processions of the god. There are also gilded minarets to the Ranga-vilasam, to the shrine and hall set apart for religious service, to the avenue of dancers, and to the Swerga-vilasam. To the west of the last-mentioned pavilion are two halls of black stone, of very curious workmanship, in which the royal queens, and other females of the palace, listen to the chanting of poetical performances. In these two halls are various recesses, of sculptured black stone, curiously carved. To the west of this is the arsenal. To the north of that is the reservoir of water for bathing. The dome-shaped building around it is very splendid. On the north is the arena for the combat of gladiators with different kinds of animals. Various pavilions and buildings, to a great extent, are on the westward of the arena, for the purpose of allowing the favorites or relatives of the king, and their dependents, to look on at the spectacle. From the south-east quarter round to the north-west is a large outward wall. Outside of that high wall, on the south-east, a flower garden. In the midst of this garden various buildings were made for the convenience of the king, and the inmates of his palace. In the Ranga-vilasam the younger brother of Tirumali-Naicker, named Muttula-Naicker, the second in the government, also resided.

* The Bramins during the festival have to watch and fast; and, with attendant ceremonies, a thin chakram, either wheel or square of gold, has written on it, in its various compartments, certain mystical or astrological words or figures: the plate is then rolled up, inclosed in a small case, and tied to the arm or wrist, or suspended on the breast. It was supposed to convey to the king protection from enemies; dread and honor from subjects.

கறனாடகததிலதிருமலைநாயக்கரவர்களுநர்நீயில்பாணடிய சமஷிததானததுக்கு
ம்கோடடைக்கும்காவலாக கொததளம்பெனா பததிரொண்டுக்கும் காவலாகநேமுகம்
செயதடப்பை-ஏயெ-பாணியப்படடும்கை.

மலைபாளம்நாஞ்சிதாட்டுராசா. குமாரவர்கததிலராமனாதபுரம்சேதுபதி. சி
வகெங்கைஉடையாததேவர். புதுக்கோட்டைத தொண்டமனார். சூகசமஷிததா
னம்-ச. பாணியப்படடும்கைக்கு. ஆயனார்நயினார். துணைபுர்டொடியார். இ
லுப்பபுர்டாமயனாயக்கன். குளத்தூர்ராமசாமி தொண்டமான். கததலுர் பெரும்
புர்த்திததருடமுததேவன். மணப்பாராததாலுநாவில்ச்சேர்ந்தது. மருவகாபுரிபு
ச்சினாயக்கன். தத்தமலிவகமனாயக்கன். லக்கயனாயக்கன். வீரனர்கம்மினாயக்கன்.
தோகைமலைவசுப்பனாயக்கன். பிள்ளைமுருகிமுறத்திநாயக்கன். ராமகிரிசாமினா
யக்கன். வீரமலைப்பாணியம் காமயனாயக்கன். திணிக்கல்தாலுநாவில் சேர்ந்தது.
பள்ளிசென்னமனாயக்கன். விருப்பாச்சிகனனிவாடிஆயக்குடிதொண்டமம்பாரா
னாயக்கன். இடையகோட்டைஆயனார்வல்லக்கொண்டமனாயக்கன். மடுவூர்னாயக்க
ன். கொங்கராயன்கோட்டைவாலமூர்தினாயக்கன். மருளுதது பெருக்களாபுரம்
தபசிமடை ஆம்மயனாயக்கன். கூளப்பனாயக்கன். கொப்பயனாயக்கன். தொட
டயன்கோட்டை திருமலைகண்டனாயக்கன். திருமலைபோடினாயக்கன். பூசாரினாயக்
கன். பெரியகுளம்ராமபத்திரினாயக்கன். அப்பாச்சிக்கவண்டன். தேவராத்தான்.
கம்பவகூடலுர்ராசாக்கள். இரச்சக்கனாயக்கன். மதுரைப்பாணியப்படடுவாக்காம
னாயக்கன். உத்தப்பனாயக்கன். தொட்டப்பனாயக்கன். கவண்டன்கோட்டைவெ
ள்ளியக்குண்டம்சிறுபாலைக்கச்சைக்கடிகாமயனாயக்கன். மதவானாயக்கன். திருநெ
லவேலிபாணியப்பட்டுபெளபிரம்பண்ணைஆண்டுதொண்டவனனியனார். பெட்டய
புரம்எட்டப்பனாயக்கன். பாஞ்சாலவருதிச்சிகட்டபொம்மனாயக்கன். சிவகிரிவாரு
ணராமவனனியனார். செத்தூர்திரு வண்ணுத்தேவர். கொல்லராபடி கலங்கானாயக்
கன். நாகலாபுரம்இவப்பனாயக்கன். உளத்தாமலைமருதப்பதேவர். குருக்குவெ
ட்டிஅளகத்தேவன். மணியாச்சிசொக்கன்பட்டி. கரணடைநடுவுக்குறிச்சி. தலை

A LIST OF THE SEVENTY-TWO PALLIYAMS APPOINTED TO GUARD THE BASTIONS OF THE PANDION CAPITAL.

As they were in the time of the Carnataca (prince) Tirumali-Naicker.

Maliyalam, Nanchi-nattu-raja. The Ramnad Sethupathi. Udiyat-dever of Sivaganga. The Tondaman of New Fort, (Puthu-kottai). These three last are like adopted children of the Madura government. In all four capital towns. *

THE LIST OF THE PALLIYAMS.

Ayalur, Nainar; ———. Tūraiur, Rettayar; ———. Ilupur; Camaya-naicken. Kulattur; Rama-sami-tondaman. Kattalur Pedambur; Titta-kutti-deven.

ATTACHED TO THE MANAPAR TALUK.

Maṅgapuri; Puchi-naicken. Nattam; Lingama-naicken. ———; Leckiya-naicken. ———; Viranar-kami-naicken. Togeimali; Vasuvapa-naicken. ———; Pillay-mulungi-murti-naicken. Rama-giri; Sami-naicken. Viramali palleyam; Kamiya-naicken.

ATTACHED TO THE DINDIGAL TALUK.

———; Palli-chennama-naicken. Virupachi, Rannivadi, Ayakudi; Mainpari-naicken. Ideiya-kottai, Ayalur; Vala kondama-naicken. Madavur; ———naicken. Kongarayan-kottai; Vala-murti-naicken. Maruluttu; Amiya-naicken. Yema-calapuram; Kulapa-naicken. Tavasi-madei; Kopaiya-naicken. Tottiyen-kottai; Tirumali-kanda-naicken. ———; Tirumali-bodei-naicken. ———; Pujari-naicken. Periya-kullam; Ramabudra-naicken. ———; Appachi-cavanden. ———; Deverattan.

CAMBAN GUDALUR RAJAS.

———; Iracheka-naicken. Mathurai-palliya-pattu. Vacama-naicken. ———; Uttapa-naicken. ———; Dottapa-naicken. Cavandan-kottai, Velleiya-kundam; Kacha-katti Camaya-naicken. Siru-vari; Mathava-naicken. ———; Vanniyanar, who ruled a palliyam of seven thousand cawnies of land in the Tinnevely country, Yettaya-buram; Yettapa naicken. Panjalam-curuchi; Cata-bomanaicken. Sivagiri; Varaguna-rama-vanniyar. Seyattur;

வன்கோட்டை கொல்லபட்டி, கொல்லகொண்டன், கிங்கம்பட்டி, தொக்கட்
டான்செவவல், உளாக்காடு, கடம்பூர், காடலகுடி, விரசிலப்பட்டி, களத்து
ர், மேமா ததை, மாலிலோடை, ஆலயஞ்ஞம், சென்னிலக்குடி, பாவாவி,
மூவரையன், தும்பிச்சிஞ்ஞயக்கன், சாமிஞ்ஞயக்கன், கூளப்பஞ்ஞயக்கன், பெற்றம
டை, மனஞ்ஞர்கோட்டை, ஆதநானகரைபெத்தனிஞ்ஞயக்கன், அளகாபுரிக்கோட்டை
க்குடை வன்னியன், கோயம் புத்தூருடனே சேர்ந்தது, தனி பெத்தது ஞ்ஞயக்கன்,
சேலத்துடனே சேர்ந்தது, தலமலைராம சத்திரஞ்ஞயக்கன், தாராமங்கலம் கெட்டி,
முதலியார், ஆகியவளவுபாணியப்பட்டுகனும்மதுரைநிருசிர்பூர் சமஸ்ததானத்தில்
ச்சேர்ந்தது, மனனிமைப்பாணியப்பட்டு, குறுவிக்குளம்பெம்மசானி பெரியவீர்
ப்பஞ்ஞயக்கன், பெளம்பரமாவலலரவணப்பஞ்ஞயக்கன், ராசாப்பாணியம்ராசாக்க
ள், நெடுவயலாளிகிரி ஞ்ஞயக்கன், கரிப்பட்டுபொம்மிஞ்ஞயக்கன், கர்னாடக துரைக
ளமதுரைநிருசிர்பூர்த்நிலிற்றதுராச்சியம்ஆணியவறுகையிலகணவாயக்குள்ளே ஆளப்ப
ட்டகெடியஞ்ஞக்குவிபரம்.

திண்ணிக்கலக்கோட்டை, தாராபூர்ம்கோட்டை, கொயம் புத்தூர் கோட்டை,
தணியஞ்ஞயக்கன் கோட்டை, சத்தியமங்கலம் கோட்டை, அத்தியூர்கோட்டை,
ஓரோடு கோட்டை, காவகையன் கோட்டை, விசைய நகர்ம்கோட்டை, கருவூர்
கோட்டை, நாமக்கல கோட்டை, சேந்த மங்கலங் கோட்டை, பெரிய சேலம்
கோட்டை, மேலூர் கோட்டை, சாம பள்ளி க்கோட்டை, காவேரி பூங்கோட்
டை, ஆத்தூர்க்கோட்டை, ஆனந்தகிரிக்கோட்டை, மாமத்திக்கோட்டை, ஆ
ர்வக்குறிச்சி க்கோட்டை, முகலூர் கோட்டை, சக்ககிரி கோட்டை, செகமகிரி
கோட்டை, பீடுமலையுடனேசேர்ந்தது, நெடுவயன்அளகாதநிருஞ்ஞயக்கன், கெரி
சப்பட்டுபொம்மிஞ்ஞயக்கன், ஆகப்பாணியப்பட்டு-உ.

Tiruvanat-dever. Kolarayadi; Kalanga-naicken. Nagalapuram; Iravapa-naicken. Uttu-mali; Marathapa-dever. Kuruku-vatti; Alaga-deven. Maniyachi-sokanpatti; ———. Surandai-naduvu-curuchi; ———. Taliven-kottai; ———. Kola-patti; ———. Kolang-kondan; ———. Singampatti; ———. Nokattan-chevel; ———. Urkadu; ———. Kadambur; ———. Kadal-kudi; —. Virasila-patti; —. Kalattur; —. Memandai; Mavilodai; — Alang-kollam; — Senilei-kudi; Bavali; Muvariyen. —; Dumbichi-naicken. Sami-naicken. —; Kulapa-naicken. Yeramada; — Manarkottai; Attankarei; Pettali-naicken. Alagapuri; Retta-kudi-vaniyen.

ATTACHED TO KOYAMPUTUR.

———; Taliyetta-naicken.

ATTACHED TO THE SALEM DISTRICT.

Talamale; Ramachandra-naicken. Taramangalam; Getti-muthaliar.

The whole of these palliyams, or districts, belong to the Madura and Trichinopoly capital.

THE MANNIMAI PALLIYAM.

Kuruvi-kulam, Bemmasani, Periya-virapa-naicken, Yelambaram, Maravalavanapa-naicken.

THE RULERS OF THE RAJA PALLIYAM.

Nedu-vayal, Alagiri-Naicken, Kari-pattu, Bomi-naicken.

THE DETAIL OF THE CHIEF TOWNS, OR FORTIFIED PLACES, BUILT IN THE PASSES OF MOUNTAINS, WHILE THE CARNATAKA LORDS RULED

IN MADURA AND TRICHINOPOLY.

The forts of, Dindigal, Taraburam, Koyambutur (Coimbatore), Tanaya-naicken, Sattiya-mangalam, Andiyur, Irodu, Kangaiyan, Vijianagaram, Caruvur (Caroor), Namakal, Shentamangalam, Periya-Shelam (Salem), Melur (Mellore), Jamapalli, Caveripum, Attur, Ananta-giri, Mamatti, Arva-curuchi, Mugalur, Jaga-giri, Jega-ma-giri.

ATTACHED TO BEDU-MALI.

Nedu-vayen; Alagattiri-naicken. Gerisi-pattu; Boma-naicken. In all two palliyams.

மதுரைதிருசுரபுர்த்துடனே சேநதசமஷித்தான்மனஞர் வகை மலையாளம்நாஞ்
 சிறாடமொசா. குமார்வாகதில்ராமனாதபுரம் செதுபதிசிவகெவகை உடையாதேவர்
 புதுகோட்டை தொண்டமாரார். ஆக சமஷித்தான்-ச- பாணியப்படுவகையி
 ரா. அரியலூர்நயினார். துறையூரொட்டியார். இலுப்பூர்காமச்சினாயக்கன். குள
 ததூர்ராமசாமி தொண்டமாரார். கததலூர் பெரும்பூர். தீர்த்தக்குட்டி தேவன்.
 மனபாரை தாலுகாவில சேநதது. மருங்கா புரிபுச்சினாயக்கன். நததமலிங்கம்
 யக்கன். லக்கயநாயக்கன். மடுவூர்நாயக்கன். தொகைமலைநாயக்கன். பிள்ளைமு
 னிவநிமுத்திநாயக்கன். ராமக்கிரி சாமிநாயக்கன். திண்டுக்கல தாலுகாவில சேநதது,
 பளணி, விருப்பாச்சி. ஆயக்குடி. மாம்பாரை. இடையகோட்டை. ஆயிலூர்
 வல்லகொண்டம நாயக்கன். மடுவூர்நாயக்கன். பாலமுத்திநாயக்கன். மருனாதது
 யேழுக்குளாபுர்த்தவசிபடை. அமட்டாறு. அம்மைய நாயக்கன். கூளப்பநாயக்
 கன். கொப்பி நாயக்கன். தொடையன் கோட்டை. திருமலை கண்டம நாயக்கன்
 திருமலைபொட்டிநாயக்கன். பூசாரிநாயக்கன். பெரியக்குளமராமபத்திரநாயக்கன்.
 அப்பாச்சி கவணடன். தேவராததான். பூசாரி நாயக்கன். கம்பம் கூடலூர் மது
 ரைபாணியனப்படுவாக்காமியநாயக்கன். உத்தப்பநாயக்கன். தொடடப்பநாயக்க
 ன். கவணடன்கோட்டை. வெள்ளியகுண்டம். சிறுபாலை. கச்சைகட்டி. திரு
 நெலவேளிபாணியப்படு. எளாயிரம்பண்ணை. பெட்டியாபுரம். பாஞ்சாலன்கு
 ரிச்சி. சிவகிரி. சேநதது. கோலாறுபட்டி. நாகாலாபுரம். உளததுமலை
 குருக்கவெட்டி அளகதேவன். மணியாச்சி. சொக்கனபட்டி. சுண்ணடை. நடுவு
 குரிச்சி. தலைவன் கோட்டை. கொல்லபட்டி. சிங்கனபட்டி. நெய் கொட்டா
 னசெவல. உளாகாடு. கடம்புரு. காடலகுடி. குளதது. மெமநதை
 மாவிலலோடை. அறுங்கொளம். சென்னலகுடி. பாவாவி. தும்பிச்சினாயக்கன்
 காமியநாயக்கன். கூளப்பநாயக்கன். ஏறுமடை. மனகு கோட்டை. ஆததான்க
 லாபெத்தனினாயக்கன். அளகாபூரிடொட்டைகுடைவனனியன். கொயம்புத்தது
 னேசேநதது. தனியேத்தது நாயக்கன். சேலத்துடனேசேநதது. தலைமலை

The following MS. appears very much like a duplicate of the foregoing one; yet has some variations. Both being compared together may be acceptable, as a sort of Cadran, or as a synopsis, of these chiefs and their towns; seeing that they were of so much importance in the affairs of the Madura country, both at the time referred to, and at subsequent periods.

These MSS. are not in themselves perfectly perspicuous: but it is believed, not without very considerable reason, that materials exist among the Mackenzie collection of MSS. for full elucidations of the history of several of these Hindu feudal chieftains.

THE LIST OF THE COUNTRIES, OR DISTRICTS, CONNECTED WITH MADURA AND TRICHINOPOLY.

The Maliyalam country, under the king of the Nanja-nadu. Ramnad, under the Sethupathi; like an adopted child (of the Madura king). Sivagangai, under Udidever. Puthu-kottai, (or New Fort,) under the Tondaman. Making four principal places.

DESCRIPTION OF THE PALLIYA-CARER (OR FEUDAL CHIEFS).

Ariyalur and Turiyur, chiefs of the Pali caste (a low order of Sudras), who have the titles of Nayanar and Reddiyar. Ilupur; its chief, Camachi-naicker. Kulattur; its chief, Ramasami-Tondamanar. Cattalur-Perembur; its chief, Tirtacutti-deven.

ATTACHED TO THE MANAPAR-TALUK.

Marangapuri; its chief, Buchi-naicken. Nattam; its chiefs, Lingama-naicken, Leckina-naicken, Maduvur-naicken, Toga-mali-naicken, and Pullimurungi-mutti-naicken. Ramagiri; its chief, Sami-naicken.

ATTACHED TO THE DINDIGUL TALUK.

Pazhani, Virupachi, Ayakudi, Mamparai, Idei-kottei, Ayalur, Vali-kondama-naicker, Maduvur-naicken, Pala-mutthu-naicken, Marumuttu, Yemaculapuram, Tavasi-padei, Amartaru, Ammiya-naicken, Kulapa-naicken, Dotiyen fort, Tirumali-kandama-naicken, Tirumali-bodei-naicken, Pusari-naicken, Periya-kulam, Rama-budra-naicken, Appachi, Ravanden, Devartaren, Pusari-naicken, Cambam-kudalur.

ATTACHED TO THE MADURA COUNTRY.

Vakami-naicken, Uttapa-naicken, Dodapa-naicken, Kavanden-kottai, Velliya-kundam, Siru-pali, Kacha-kattai.

ராமசுந்திரியைக்கன். தாருமங்கலம்செட்டிமுதலியார். ஆக இவளவுபாணியப்பட்டு
கனம் மதுரைநகரத்தார்முதலியார். தானத்திலேசேர்த்து.

மணனிமை பாணியப்பட்டு. குருவகுளம்பொம்மசானி பெரியவீரப்பெயர்க்கன்
பெளம்பார்மாவலல ரவணப்பெயர்க்கன். ருசானபாணியம்மாசாக்கள்,

கர்னாட்டக துறையளமதுரை திரிசூர்ததிலிருந்த இராச்சிய பரிபாலனம்பண்ணிக்
கொண்டிருக்கையிலக்கணவாய்க்குளே இவர்கள் ஆளப்பட்ட சீமையிலவர்கள் கட்டிவிச்
செட்டித்தலங்களுக்குவிபர்ம்.

திண்டுக்கல கோட்டை. தாருபுரம் கோட்டை. கொழும்புத்தூர் கோட்டை
தண்டையர்க்கன் கோட்டை. சத்தியமங்கலம் கோட்டை. அத்தியூர் கோட்டை. இ
ரோடு கோட்டை. காயங்கம் கோட்டை. விசைய மங்கலம் கோட்டை. கருவூர்
கோட்டை. நாமக்கல கோட்டை. செதை மங்கலம் கோட்டை. பெரியசேலம்
கோட்டை. சேமலூர்கோட்டை. சங்கைகிரி கோட்டை. சாமபாளி கோட்டை
காவேரிபுரம் கோட்டை. ஆத்தூர்கோட்டை. அனந்தகிரி கோட்டை. பாமத்தி
கோட்டை. அறவகுறிச்சிகோட்டை. மோகனூர் கோட்டை. இவளவும் கர்னாட்
கதுறையள போட்டகோட்டைகள்.

ATTACHED TO THE TIRUNELVELI COUNTRY.

Yelayiram-panni, Yettiyar-puram, Panjalam-kuruchi, Siva-giri, Settur, Kolaru-patti, Nagalapuram, Utta-mali, Kuruke-vetti, Alaga-devi-maniyachi, Chokan-patti, Surandei, Nadavu-kuruchi, Taliven-kottai, Kola-patti, Singen-patti, Nekottan-sevel, Urkadu, Kadambur, Kadal-kudei, Kulattur, Memandei, Mavilodei, Aran-kolam, Senel-kudei, Pavali, Tumbichi-naicken, Kami-naicken, Kolapa-naicken, Yettuma-naicken, Mana-kottei, Attankarei-pettali-naicken, Alaga-kudei, Eratta-kudei-vanniyen.

ATTACHED TO KOYAMPUTUR.

Taliyitarul-naicken.

ATTACHED TO SALEM.

Talimali-rama-chandra-naicken, Taramangalam, Getti-muthaliyar.

Thus all these chieftainships are attached to the capitals of Madura with Tirusirapuram.

Manimai-pallia-pattu, Kuruvi-kulam, Bemmasani-periya-virapa-naicken, Yelamparam-ravala-ravanapa-naicken, Rajan-palliam-rajakal.

While the Carnataca lords were ruling in Madura and Trichinopoly, in their territories beneath the Ghauts, they built forts, of which the following is a detail.

Dindigul, Tarapuram, Koyambutur, Tanni-naicken, Satyamangalam, Andiyur, Irodu, Kangeiyam, Vijia-mangalam, Karuvur, Namakal, Sentamandalam, Periya-Salem, Semalur, Sangei-giri, Sambali, Caveri-puram, Attur, Ananta-giri, Bramatti, Arangurusi, Mogatur.

These were forts established by the Carnataca lords.

The distinct history of each of these Poligars, with their houses, or families, it is believed would contribute much information with regard to the affairs of the parent, or principal, state. As an exemplification of this remark, we may advert to the genealogical narrative of the house of Appiya-Naicker, usually called the Poligar of Cannivadi; and not enumerated, so far as we perceive, in the foregoing lists. This narrative is found amongst the Mackenzie papers in charge of the Madras Auxiliary to the Royal Asiatic Society; with the inspection of which the Editor has been most kindly favored. It conveys some further information on a few points that have been already the subjects of annotation. Thus, for instance, the five independent chiefs with whom Visvanatha-Naicker waged war are explained to be, not as we had supposed, five rulers of principalities in the Sern-Dsam proper; but collateral descendants of the ancient Pandion race, who resisted, and for a length of time successfully resisted, the usurpation, as they would consider it, of the northern lords: they had their chief station at the town called Kayattur, and gave themselves the popular title of the Pancha-Pandiyal, or Five Pandavas; acknowledging no subordination to any other prince. It is added, that Ariya-nayaga-Muthaliar, and the Poligars that were with him, were beaten: and that they actually retreated in disgrace to Madura; when Visvanatha, with severe reproof, forthwith ordered the troops out of the town, and placed himself momentarily at their head; leading to the result already detailed. But, in addition, it is stated that the second Poligar of Canninadi, son of Appiya-Naick, and named Chinna-Kuttir-Naick, fought against and brought the head of a Pandiya-Rajah, who was in Tinnevely, and is described merely by the title of Aluvar, or a ruler: This circumstance seems to cast a gleam of illustration on a passage in Marco-Polo, quoted by D'Anville,* to the effect that the chief of the five kings of Maabar, is that of Var; most likely a contraction of Alavar. We may notice also, in passing, that the title of Ielne-Var, which D'Anville says the northern lords of Madura assumed at their inauguration, is pure Telugu; that is, Yelina-varu, or Lords, precisely equivalent to the title of Kartakal, given to them in all the Tamil manuscripts wherein they are mentioned. But the chief interest of the narrative adverted to, bears on the reign of Tirumali-Naicker, and on the section under annotation. We shall introduce an extract from the narrative, slightly corrected in the orthography only, and accompany it with a faithful translation.

NOTICES OF NADAKUTALI-CHINNA-KATTIR-NAICKER AND RANGANA-NAICKER, FEUDAL CHIEFTAINS.

His rule (that of Chinna-Kattir-Naicker) was thirty-three years. His son was Nadukatali-Chinna-Kattir-Naicker; and while he was governing, one Mukilen, having assembled some forces, came from Mysore, and sat down before Dindigul. Then the reigning prince of Madura, having called Nadukatali-Chinna-Kattir-Naicker, said to him, "Our country from the mountain pass as far as to Dindigul is taken by the Mysoreans, who are now besieging that fortress; and since you are the chief of the eighteen Dindigul Poligars, you will assemble the whole of these, and drive away the Mysoreans, who are now in possession of that province; even until you see them chased back again up the pass: you may then return." Agreeably to these orders, the chief assembled the eighteen Poligars; and, warring against Mukilen, drove that army pellmell before him, to some distance beyond the pass: he then restored to good order the whole of the country on this side of the pass, and having done so, proceeded to the Madura lord to give in his report. The prince was much rejoiced; gave (to the Poligar) the charge of Dindigul fort, with a baton of authority; delegating also to him the protection of the country; and surnamed him Chinna-Mysuran: after which he gave him dismissal. The chief subsequently returned, and ruled in his own town. The period of his government was twenty-one years.

[His son, Narsinma-Naicker,* ruled ten years.] His son, Toppalu-Naicker, ruled forty days. While his son, named Rangana-Naicker, was ruling, he cleared the extensive forest lands; built Alathi-pettai, Silavar-pettai, Sindavakundu, Calikam-pettai; and caused these places to be inhabited, and regulated under his authority. In the course of these transactions, when Deva-Rayer-Udiyar was reigning in Mysore, one named Cara-Sura-Nandi-rajā, having descended the pass, with a very large army, took several forts, as far as unto Dindigul.

* The account of this chief, being local and irrelevant, is omitted.

— அவர்பட்டம்வருஷம் - ஈயக - அவர்மகன நடுக்குத தலைச்சினனக்கதிர்நாயக்கர் துரை ததனஞ்செய்துக் கொணடிருக்கிறநாளையில மைசூர்சீர்மையிலிருந்து முகிலனென்கிறவனும் சிறுது தளமுஞ் சேகரித்துக் கொண்டு திணடுக்கலவநதிறங்கினுன்போதுகார்ததாக்களநடுக்குத தலைச்சினனக்கதிர்நாயக்கவைவரவழைத்து நம்முடையசீர்மைக்கணவாய் முதலதிணடுக்கலவரைக்கும்மையிருரார் கடடிக்கொண்டு தூர்க்கத்தினபேரிவ்றங்கி இருக்கிறபடியினாலே திணடுக்கலபதினெட்டுப் பாளையக்காரருக்கும்நீமுகாமாயிருக்கிறபடியினாலே அவர்களை யெல்லாரையும் சேர்த்துக் கொண்டு தூர்க்கத்தினபேரிவ்றங்கி இருக்கப்பட்டமைசூரார்பாளையத்தை யெடுபடுததிக்கணவாய்வரைக்கும் முடுக்கிக்கொண்டு போய்விட்டுப் போட்டுவரவேணுமென்று உத்திரவு செய்ததில் அதுவேபிரகாரத்துக்கு ப்பதினெட்டுப் பாளையக்காரரையுஞ் சேர்த்துக் கொண்டு முகிலனபேரிவசனடைசெய்து கணவாய்க்கப்புறம்பாளையத்தை முடிக்கிவிட்டுப் போட்டுக்கணவாய்க்கிப்புறமிருக்கப்பட்டசீமையுஞ் சுவசப்படுத்திக்கொண்டு மதுரைக்குக்கர்ததாசுளிடத்துக்குப் போய்ச்சொல்லிக்கொண்டதில் சொம்பவுஞ்சந்தோஷப்பட்டுக் கொண்டு திணடுக்கலசெடியுங்காவல கொடுத்தத்தடிக்கொம்புஆழமானிலே சாவலபூமியுங்கொடுத்ததுச்சினனமைசூரானென்று பேருங்கொடுத்ததுப்பிவிச்சார்கள அப்பால அவர் ஊரிலவநது துரை ததனஞ்செய்து கொணடிருநதார் அவர்பட்டம் - (ஸ்ரீ) உயக - அவர்மகன நாரசிம்மநாயக்கர் * * * * * அவர்பட்டம் - (ஸ்ரீ) ய - அவர்மகன தொப்பள நாயக்கர் நாரபதுநாள துரை ததனஞ்செய்து கொணடிருநதார் (சய - நாள) அவர்மகன ஓங்கன நாயக்கர் துரை ததனம்செய்து கொணடிருக்கிறநாளையில வஞ்றதிர்மானகாடுகளை யெல்லாம் வெட்டி அளகுபட்டிசிலலார்பட்டிசிறதவக்குண்டு கவிக்கம்பட்டி இநதலைதலங்களை யெல்லாம் உண்புபண்ணிக்குடியேறறிருசுவுபண்ணிக்கொணடிருநதார் அப்படி இருக்கிறநாளையில மைசூரில்தேவராயுடையார் துரை ததனஞ்செய்து கொணடிருக்கிற போதுகாரருந்நதிராசாவென்கிறவன அநேகவதளத்துடனே கணவாய்க்குக்கீழ்ப்பட்டகெடிகள திணடுக்கலசீமைப்பரியநதிரவகட்டிக்கொண்டார்கள். அப்போதுகார்ததாக்களாகிய திருமலைநாயக்கர்வர்கள் தளக்கர்ததாராம ப்பயயர்பயணம் புறப்பட்டு அநேக தளத்துட

Then Tirumali-Naicker, the Madura lord's general (Dalakarten), named Ramapaiyen, having set out, with a great force, approached to Dindigul; and calling together the Poligars, he addressed himself to Rangana-Naicker, saying, "As we are going to fight against the capital of the Mysore country, and as for many years past you have acquired a great extent of territory, having had the full proceeds of all revenues from the privilege of being an adopted child of Madura, (heretofore accorded to your ancestors,) it is now fit that you contribute sixteen thousand (gold) chakra-pons towards the expense of the army." On the chief's replying that his ability did not extend so far, it was finally settled that his subsidy should amount to seven thousand pons. Ramapaiyen also gave him instructions to locate himself near the general's tent, and with his own force to form the rear-guard of the army. Having followed in the prescribed manner, they laid siege to the capital of the Mysore country, and fought against its fort; but, before taking it, some evil-minded ministers who were in the presence of the Maha-raja Tirumali-Naicker, suggested to him, owing to latent enmity, that Ramapaiyen had the design of appropriating to himself all the conquered country: they added, "He is now warring against the capital of Mysore; and having taken the fortress, immediately on his return hither he will cause you to be slain, and will take possession also of this capital as his own; for such are his intentions. If you wish to ascertain the truth or falsehood of what we say, cause silver-stick messengers to be sent to call him hither peaceably, or bring him by force; and if he willingly come, then what we say is unfounded; but if he refuse to come, then our statement is true." On hearing this counsel, Tirumali-Naicker observed, "Ramapaiyen is now besieging the capital of the Mysore country; send to call him this moment, that we may see and speak with him: if he come, well; and if not willing, then lay hold of him and bring him by force." Two messengers, bearing silver-sticks, were accordingly sent on this errand. They came to Rangana-Naicker, who was near the general's tent, and told him that they were sent by the Madura lord to re-call the general. Immediately he reported to the Dalavayi that two messengers were come to him from Madura; and the general ordered them to be brought before him. The silver-stick messengers, coming before him, delivered the royal னேதினாடிக்கலலுக்குவநதுஇறவகிக்கொண்பிபாணையக்கார்தாபெலலாபாயும்வரவழை

 ததுறொங்கனநாயக்கைப்பார்த்துமைஞர்சமததானததுக்குநாம்புத்தத்துக்குப்போ
 கிறதிருலேயும்அநேகநாளாய்தீவெஞ்சிமைகட்டிக்கொண்குமார்வர்க்கமெனபதாய
 ச்சருவமானியம் அனுப்பித்ததுக்கொண்குவருகிறதிருலேதண்கிச்சிலவுக்குசர்க்கார்ப்பதி
 னுயிரம்பொனகொடுக்கச்சொலலிக்கேட்டார்கள்அவ்வளவுக்குநீர்வாகமிலைபெனது
 சொன்னதில்ஜீராதெனதுவழாயிரம்பொனசர்க்காரம்வாங்கிக்கொண்டுக்கூடார்த்துக்கு
 ச்சமீபமாய்ததானேபாணையத்திலபின்னேகூடவரவேணுமெனதுஉதததிரவுசெய்தார்கள்
 ன். அதுவேபிரகார்த்துக்குக்கூட்டுப்போனதில்மைஞர்சமததானததினபேரிவிறவகிக்
 கோட்டையின்மேலேசண்டைசெய்துக்கவசமாகிறமுன்னுக்குமகாராசமானிய-ராச
 ஸ்ரீ-நிருமலைநாயக்கர்வர்க்களசமுத்ததில்நூர்மதநிரியாயிருக்கப்பட்டபேர்கள்ராமப்ப
 யர்பேரில்மிதநூர்மாய்க்கார்த்ததாக்களித்ததில்சகலசீர்மையும்கைவசப்பித்ததிக் கொண
 டான். இனிமேல்மைஞர்சமததானததின்பேரிசண்டைசெய்கிறான். அந்தக்கட்டியு
 ம்கைவசப்பித்ததிக் கொண்குவருகிறதும்உம்மைச்சரிக்கட்டிப்போட்டுச்சமததானத்
 தையுங்மைவசப்பித்ததிக் கொள்ளுநினைத்திருக்கிறான். நிசம்பொய்யுறியவேணுமென
 னுல்வெள்ளித்ததடிக்கார்தாஅனுப்பிச்சீசும்உயிலைகைபோட்டுக்கொண்குவாச்சொன
 னுல்வநதாலெங்கள்பேச்சுப்பொய்யல்லாவிட்டால்நிசமெனதுஎண்ணிக்கொள்ளுங்கோ
 ளெனதுமிதநூர்ஞ்சொனஞர்க்கள். அந்தவார்த்தையைக்கார்த்ததாக்கள்கேட்டுராமப்ப
 யர்மைஞர்சமததானததினபேரிவிறவச்சண்டைசெய்கிறாரிந்தச்சண்டைகண்டுபேசிக்
 கொண்கிபோகலாமெனதுஅழையுங்கள்வநதாலாச்சுதுஇல்லாதவரையிலமடியிலே
 கைபோட்டுஇழுத்துக்கொண்குவாருங்களைனுஇரண்டுபேர்வெள்ளித்ததடிக்கார்தாஅ
 னுப்பிவிச்சார்களையர்களவநதுராமப்பயர்கூடார்த்ததுக்கிட்டமதுகையிலிருநதுகர்
 ததாக்கள்அனுப்பிவிச்சார்களெனதுறொங்கனநாயக்கரித்ததில்சொனஞர்கள்அந்தட்
 சணம்கூடார்த்திலிருக்கப்பட்டதளவாயித்ததில்வெள்ளித்ததடிக்காரர்வநதருக்கிறார்க
 ளெனதுசொன்னதில்கூட்டிவாச்சொனஞர்கள்வெள்ளித்ததடிக்காரர்கள்எதிர்வோரப்ப
 நிரூபமுங்கொடுத்ததுஅழைத்துவாச்சொனஞர்களைனுசொன்னதில்திரூபத்தைபார்

letter of re-call; and said, "The king commanded us to summon you to attend him." As soon as he had looked at the mandate, he said, "I cannot come now." The messengers insisting, laid hold of the general by the waist to take him forcibly. He gave instant orders to cut off the man's hand. But Rangana-Naicker objected, saying, "It is not proper to inflict punishment on the body or member of one bringing a royal order from the palace." The general was very angry with Rangana-Naicker, saying, "You do not know;" and, addressing some peons standing by, he ordered them to cut off the man's arm. The messenger, thus mutilated, returned to Madura with the wound; and personally reported to Tirumali-Naicker that the general had taken away his arm. The king having heard this report, inquired, "What was Ramapaiyen at that time doing? and who stood near him?" The man replied, "He was just on the very point of taking the fort; and Rangana-Naicker, of Cannivadi, was standing by, who said it is not right to punish a royal messenger; but the general, being very angry with him, gave orders to others to take off my hand; when he sent me away." Then the evil-minded courtiers observed, "Is not the word which we before spoke fully justified?" The king thereupon despatched two royal messengers to summon Rangana-Naicker to his presence. But in the interval the capital of Mysore was taken; and the whole of the people concerned in the siege had returned. Rangana-Naicker, having been specially called, proceeded with the messengers; and was taken by them to the royal presence. Then Rangana-Naicker spoke to the following purport—"At a time when the fort was just on the verge of being taken, what could possibly be thought of two royal messengers coming with a re-call; and laying forcibly hold, by the waist, of the principal commander? Supposing he had come, the whole affair would have been abortive, and a disgrace: hence, though presumptuously, he took away the messenger's arm; at the same time saying, let us only take the fort, and if afterwards I am convicted of a fault, my head may be cut off; and saying so, he directed the doing of this bad business." In the interim the general having had a head and a hand made of gold, came with the whole army; and bringing the hand and head into the royal presence, putting them before the king, he said, "What I did was a fault. For the rest, whatever be your pleasure, let it be done." On this occurrence Tirumali-Naicker was much rejoiced; and gave to the general the suitable honorary garments, bidding him, as heretofore, to be always the commander of the forces. Then addressing Rangana-Naicker, he said, "As you are in an especial manner our adopted child; and as you have taken great pains and trouble in our affairs, according to the report given in by our general, therefore, as always heretofore, continue to hold your territories free of tribute or tax; only, whenever we may command your attendance, then you will come, and do such service as may be required." Assenting to these orders, he took leave, and returned to his own town.

ததுக்கொண்டு இப்போது வர்க்கூடா தெனரூர், தீராது மடியிலேகை போட்டுக்கூட்டி வர்ச்சொனனூர்க்கெனனு மடியிலேகை போட்டார்கள். அததட்சணம் கையைவாங்கிப் போடச்சொல்லித் ததிரீவு செயதார். அப்போது மொங்கனநாயக்கர் அர்மனைமுததிரரங் கததை ஆக்கினைசெய்கிறது விகிதமல்லவெனனு சொனனூர். மொங்கநாயக்கர் பெரி லே ரொம்பவுங் கோபம்வநது உனக்குத் தெரியாதெனறுபக்கதிவிருக்கிற சேவகரிடத்தில் சொல்லிக்கையை வாங்கிப்போடச்சொனனூர். அததக்காயமும் வாங்கிக்கொண்டுமது னாயில்திருமலை நாயக்கர்வாங்கொள்தொவநது நினறுகட்டினையிட்ட புதறிக்குஅவனகை யைவாங்கிப் போட்டானெனனு சொனனூன். அதற்கு க்கர்ததாக்கள்கேட்டது. அப் போதுராமபயனிருநதசமையமெனன அவர்பக்கத்தில்யாராரிருநதார்கள்எனனுக் ட்டார்கள். அதற்குஇவன்சொனனது நிறிபிஷமாத்திர்ததில் கோடடைகைவசமாகிறநா யிருநதுது. கனனிவாடிமொங்கன நாயக்கர்பக்கததிலேஇருநதுமுததினாமனுஷினை ஆக் கினைசெயயப்போகாதெனனு சொனனூர்அவர் பெரி லுங்கோபம்வநது என்னையுங்கை யைவாங்கிஅனுப்பிவிச்சுவிட்டாரொனனு சொன்னதில்பக்கததிலெதுடட சாமாசிகாளா யிருக்கப்பட்ட பேர்கள் முனனாலே நாங்கன்சொன்ன வார்ததைசரிவநததா வெனனு சொனனூர்கள்ப்போது இராண்டுபேர்முததினாமனுஷினை அனுப்பிவிச்சுமொங்கனநாயக் கரை அழைத்துவர்ச்சொன்னதில் அதற்குள் என்மைகுர்சமத்தா நமும்கை வசம்பண்ணி க்கொணரிசகலமானசனவகளுடனே யெதுவநதுவிட்டார்கள். மொங்கனநாயக்கரை முன்னையழைத்ததுக்கொணரிவநதுகர்ததாக்களிடததில்எதுகோகொணரிவநதுவிட்டதி ல்ப்போதுமொங்கனநாயக்கர் சொன்னதுநிறிபிஷமாத்திர்ததில் கோடடைகைவசமாகிற சருணத்தில்முத்தினாமனுஷிர்வந்துமடியிலேகைபோட்டுஇழுததால்என்னமாவருகிறது காரியக் கெடுதியும் அப்பிரதிடடையும் வருமெனபதாய் ததுணிநது கையை வாங்கிப் போட்டுக்கோடடைகைவசமாக்கிக்கொணரிசெயமாயெதுவநதுபோய்தினனூல்அப்பால் குறறங்கண்டு தமதுதணியை வெட்டிக்கொள்ளாட்டிமெனனு இரதவேலைசெயதுபோட டாரொனனு சொனனூன். இதற்குள்ளே தங்கததினாலே தலைசெயது கொணரி கையுரு செயது கொணரிசகல சேனாச மெதத்துடனே யெதுவநதுகொணரி வநதுவைத்ததநாய்

Some time after these occurrences, there arose a necessity of going to make war against the Sethupathi; and the seventy-two Palliya-carers being summoned to attend, and the Dalavayi Ramapaiyer having assembled a great force, went and commenced operations against the Sethupathi. In consequence a great deal of fighting took place; and the Sethupathi being weakened, so as to be without further ability to continue his resistance, went off to Ramiseram. Then the general proceeded to Ramiseram; and casting a bridge over the channel separating the island from the main land, he took the Sethupathi captive, and brought him to Madura. Afterwards, as Rangana-Naicker had taken great pains, and was very materially concerned in the discovery and taking of the Sethupathi, the king, addressing him, said to him, "You are our adopted child: we are much rejoiced;" and then, presenting him with honorary dresses, permitted him to retire to his own government.

Some time after receiving this dismissal, and returning to his own town, the Mysoreans came, and spreading themselves in the dominions of Tirumali-Naicker, took the country as far as Dindigul: the younger brother of Tirumali-Naicker, named Muttulu-Naicker, having assembled some forces, set out and came to Dindigul, whither he summoned the eighteen Palliya carers: he said to them, "We are now about to go and fight against the capital of Mysore;" and gave them orders to assemble their people and follow him. The whole army accordingly proceeded, and took all the forts beneath the Ghaut; and then going on to besiege the capital, before they could capture it, the king, Tirumali-Naicker, was deified (or died). While the younger brother, Muttulu-Naicker, was about returning to Madura, the authorities of the court, having all assembled, crowned Mutthu-Virapa-Naicker. Subsequently Muttulu-Naicker, having returned, encamped on the outside of the fort of Madura; and thence he sent a message to Mutthu-Virapa-Naicker, and to the other authorities, to the following purport—"After Mutthu-Virapa-Naicker had ruled, and was deceased, Tirumali-Naicker reigned; and now that he is deceased, the right to the government is with me. On the contrary, Mutthu-Virapa-Naicker is now crowned; but by what right?" And in connexion with this message he was the cause of great trouble. Thereupon Rangapa-Naicker, going out on a peaceable embassy, represented to Muttulu-Naicker that it was highly proper for both parties to restrain all disputes; and proposed to give over to Muttulu-Naicker the Siva-Casi country, as his own independent domain: recommending him first to proceed thither, when afterwards all needful matters might be arranged by negotiation. As Rangana-Naicker was a principal man with the sovereigns, and an adopted child (by metaphor), Muttulu-Naicker did not reject his proposals; and, according to them proceeded to Siva-Casi. Rangana-Naicker returned to Mutthu-Virapa-Naicker, and said, "We wish to return to our town:" As Mutthu-Virapa-Naicker was newly crowned, he gave many presents of honorary dresses, and the like, to all the Palliycars, and dismissed them. He then distinguished Rangana-Naicker by some special presents; and having given him leave, the latter returned to his own country. The period of his government was, in all, fifty years.

செய்தது குற்றம் இனிமேலென்ன செய்ய வேண்டுமோ செயது கொள்ளுங்கள் என்று சொன்னார்ப்போது திருமலைநாயக்கர் வர்கள் ரொம்பவுஞ்சு நேர விடப்பட்டு வேண்டிய உடுகையுஞ் செயது எப்போதும் போலே தளக்கர்த்த பிரதானிக்கஞ் செயது கொண்டு நீக்கச் சொல்லி உத்திரவு செயது ரொங்கு நாயக்கரைப்பார்த்து நீ நமக்கு முக்கிய குமார்வர்க்குமான திருமலை நாயக்கர் வரையில் ரொம்பவும் பிரயாசைப்பட்டதாய் நம்முடைய தளவாய் சொல்லிக்கொண்ட திருமலையெப்போதும் போலே உணர்ச்சி மையச் சர்வமான்னியமாக அனுபவித்துக் கொண்டு நாமெப்போதெக்குவாச் சொல்லி உத்திரவு கொடுப்போமோ அப்போதெக்குவாது செயது கொண்டு நீக்கச் சொல்லி உத்திரவு வாச்சுது அப்படியாக உடுமென்று உடுகையும்தான் கொண்டு ஊர்வது செயது தார்களா. அப்பாலிந்து நான்கு பிறகு செயது பதிபேரில சண்டைக்குப்போக வேண்டுமென்று எழுபதந்நாளைப்பாசையதாரையும் வரவழைச்சுக் கொண்டு தளவாய் ராமபயர்வர்களும்கு தளவாயைச் சேகரித்துக் கொண்டு செயது பதியின பேரில போய் நவகினதில் அவ்விடத்தில் அநேக சண்டை செயது செயது பதிக்கு நிர்வாக மிலலாடலா மேகர்த்துக்குப் போய்விட்டார்ப்போது ராமேகர்த்துக்குப் போய்ச்செயது வண்புருகட்டில் ச்ச செயது பதியையுந் கைப்பிடியாகப்பிடித்துக் கொண்டு வந்ததில் அப்போது ராஜநாயக்கர் ரொம்பவும் பிரயாசைப்பட்டிருக்கிற செயது பதியைக் கைப்பிடியாய்ச் சிறுமட்டிக்குச் செயது திருமலையெகர்த்தாக்கள் ரொங்கு நாயக்கரைப்பார்த்து நீ குமார்வர்க்குமான்ன திருமலையெகர்த்து ரொம்பவும் பிரயாசைப்பட்டிருக்கிறது என்று ரொம்பவுஞ்சு நேர விடப்பட்டு உடுகையுஞ் செயது உணருக்குப் போகச் சொல்லி உத்திரவு செயது தார்களப்படிக்கு உத்திரவு வாங்கிக்கொண்டு ஊருக்குவந்திருக்கிற நான்கு பிறகு நான்கு பிறகு தாக்கவாகிய திருமலை நாயக்கர் வர்கள் சீமையிலிணங்கி லப்பரிய நதிராய்மை குரார்வது துக்கட்டிக்கொண்ட திருமலையெகர்த்தாக்கள் தம்பிமுதலுநாயக்கர் வர்களே சேகர்த்துடனே தண்டிடுததுப்பயணம் புறப்பட்டு திண்ணிக்கலவிலவந்தி நவகிக்கொண்டு பதினெட்டுப் பாசையச்சாரையும் வரவழைத்து நாமம்மை குரார்சமத்தானத்தினபேரில சண்டைக்குப்போகிறோம் பாசையக்காரும் அவர் வர்களே ததுடனே கூடவாருங்கு என்று கூட்டிக்கொண்ட

பொய்யான சுகிதமாய்ப்புறப்படடுக்கணவாய்க்குத்தீழ்ப்பட்டகெடிகளை யெல்லாவகை வசப்படு ததிக்கொண்டுமைஞர் சமததானத்தினபேரில் போயிறங்கிச்சமததானத்தை யுய்கைவசப்படுததிக்கொண்புருகிறமுன்னுக்குதிருமலைநாயக்கர்வர்கள்தெயலீகமாய ப்போனார்கள். தம்பியானமுத துலநாயக்கர்வர்களமதுராபுரிக்குவருகிறதுக்குள்ளாக ச்சமததானத்திலிருக்கிற சாமாசிகனெல்லாவ கூடிமுத துவீர்ப்பநாயக்கருக்குப்பட்டது கடடிவிச்சப் போட்டார்கள்ப்போதுமுத துல நாயக்கர்வர்களமதுரைக்கோட்டைக் கு வெளியிலே வறதிறங்கி கொண்டுமுத து வீர்ப்பநாயக்கருக்கு ருசாமாசிகனுக்குஞ் சொல்லியனுப்பிவிச்சவிபர்ம். முத துவீர்ப்பநாயக்கர் துரைத்தனஞ்செயது கொண்டிருநது அவர்தெயலீகமாய்ப்போய்த்திருமலைநாயக்கருக்குப்பட்டமாசசுது அவர்தெய லீகமாய்ப்போனதினாலேஅந்தத துரைத்தனம்நாருசெயயவேணும் அப்படிக்கிலலாம லமுத துவீர்ப்பநாயக்கர் துரைத்தனஞ்செயது கொண்டிருகிறதெனன காரியமென்று அநேகசலவியததுக்கிடஞ்செயத்தில அப்போது றொங்கனநாயக்கர் போய்ச்சமுதாயி ததுமுத துல நாயக்கரிடத்தில வறதுஇருபேருக்குஞ்சுல்லியமில்லாமலிருக்கிறதுதலல தென்று சொல்லிஇப்போதைக்குததனதாய்ச்சிவகாசிசீமைவட்டிக்கொடுக்கும்படியா ய்த்திட்டப்படுததியிருக்குது. இப்போதைக்குஅவலிடத்தி விருந்தால பின்னாலேஆக வேண்டிய காரியங்கள் சீரிட்டுக்கொள்ளலாமென்று சொன்னார்கள். கர்த்தாக்களுக்கு றொங்கனநாயக்கர் முக்கியகுமாரவர்க்கமானதினாலேயும்பெரிய மனுஷனுனதிலேயும்அ வர்வார் ததையைத தட்டாமல முத துலநாயக்கர்சிவகாசியில் போயிருந்தார்கள்ப்பால முத துவீர்ப்ப நாயக்கரவர்களிடத துக்குவறதுஊருக்குப்போகிறோமென்றுசொல்லிக் கொண்டதிலபுதுசாயப்பட்டங்கடடிக் கொண்டதினாலேசகலமானபாணியக்காரருக்கு ம்அனேகம்உடுகைகளசெயது அனுப்பிவிசாரப்போது றொங்கனநாயக்கருக்குவேண டியஉடுகைகளசெயதுஅனுப்பிவிசசார்கள். அவரும்அனுப்பிவிசசக்கொண்டெனவற துசேர்ததார்களப்பாலஅவர்பட்டம்- (௭௭) டுய.

An examination of the Mackenzie MS. a little before adverted to,* shows that there is nothing particularly recorded of Muthu-Virapa-Naicker, the elder brother of Tirumali-Naicker; and the reign of the latter has now received some considerable illustration from the documents adduced. It appears, from the record concerning the Poligar Runguna-Naicker, that more than one incursion from Mysore must have taken place; though the last, and principal one, is alone noticed in the section under annotation of the Carnataca Dynasty. With the closing exception, the war against the rebellious Sethupathi was the chief martial event of this reign. The quelling of this insurrection is the subject of a sort of heroic poem in the Tamil language, noticed Appendix, p. 36, No. 26; corresponding with its location and number in Professor Wilson's catalogue. From a cursory inspection and perusal it appears to relate, in highly charged poetical imagery, the commission given to Rama-paiyen, and his setting forth with an army; gives notices of the country passed through, and others adjoining; narrates the combats with Sadaica-deven, ending in his seeking refuge at Ramiseram, and his being protected by Vanniyen, a chief there; even to the capture of the Sethupathi, and his subsequent release by Tirumali-Naicker, with which the poem concludes. One of the most remarkable incidents it contains, is its statement that the Feringhies from Ceylon and Cochin (most probably the Dutch or Portuguese) were called in to take part in the contest; and that they came in five ships, or vessels. The poem, considered simply as a poem, may merit some further attention; but as to the simple abstract incidents, these coincide with the very brief record of them contained in the Carnataca Dynasty.

The interposition of the Vairagis and Sunniyassis, yields occasion to allude to the manuscript, (Appendix, p. 35, No. 3.) Chola-desa Purvika Cheritra, which has had our careful and leisurely perusal. The production has its value, but not great historical value; consisting chiefly of hypothesis and critical disquisition on many irrelevant topics. The following extract will serve as some specimen of its style and manner; and it adds an item or two of illustration on matters connected with our present subject.

— காலகண்ட சோழனவலததிவிருக்கிற சிவாலையங்களைக் கட்டி டி. னுன இநதக் காலக்கண்ட சோழனைத் தொடடுவலதது இலத்தலபுராணத்திலே விதைதார்மாயச் சொல்லியிருக்குது ஆனாலவலததுக்கோடடையை வடுகநாயக்கமார்ச்சடினார்களளப் படியெனரூல் மறவர்பாணடியனவங்கிஷ்த்தது வெள்ளாளாக்குத்திப் போட்டுமறவர் மிச-பட்டம் அறுநூற்றெட்டுவருஷம் ஆண்டபிறகு வடுகநாயக்கமார்மறவரைத் தூர்த்திப் போட்டுமதுகாதிருச்சிராப்பள்ளி தஞ்சாவூரொலலாமொருமட்டாய் ஆண்டிருக்கிற போது தஞ்சாவூர்நாயக்கமர்களதானே தஞ்சாவூர்க்கோடடையும் வலததுக்கோட டையையுங்கட்டினார்கள் அக்காலத்திலேமறவருக்கு வலலமையிலலாத் ததினாலேமுன னாகப்பாணடியனுக்குக்கைக் கீழ்க்குடியாயிருந்ததாப் போலேவடுகநாயக்கமாருக்குவ கீழாக்ஷழியருசெய்துகொண்டுவலலமறறஇடங்கள்ளிலேகுடியிருந்தார்கள். பிறபாடு

வடக்கேயிருநது-மிஉது-வயிராவிகளகடவநதுதிருச்சிராப்பள்ளியிலடைபட்டிருநத சடக்கததேவனென்கிறசேதுபதியைவிடுதலையாக்கிச்சீர்மகததிலேபட்டங்கடடிஇராமனாதுபுரத்திலேகொண்டுபோய்வைத்தபிறகு தஞ்சாவூர்ராட்சியத்திலக்குடிபேறியிருநதமறவொல்லாததெற்கேபோய்இராமனாதுபுரச்சீர்மைமதுகாச்சீர்மையிலெங்குநதங்கனிந்ததோடேகூடப்போய்ச்சீர்நது குடியிருக்கிறார்கள. ஆனபடியினாலேயிக்காலத்திலேதஞ்சாவூர்ச்சீர்மைமெங்கும்களளர்பள்ளிகளபடையாச்சிகளடையார்கூட்டங்களேமிருந்திருக்குதேயலலாமலமறவர்களையத்தனைகளுமே.

TRANSLATION.

Kal-Kanda-Soren built the Saiva temples at Vallam. Concerning this Kalkanda-Soren the Vallam Stalla Puranam is very diffuse. But the Vallam fort was built by the northern lords. That is to say, after that the Maravas had destroyed the Vallalas of the Pandion race, they ruled during six hundred and eight years, and through a succession of fourteen chiefs. Afterwards the northern Nayakers drove away the Maravas; and ruled at the same time over Madura, Trichinopoly, and Tanjore. The Tanjore Nayakers built the fort of Tanjore and the fort of Vallam. At that time, as the Maravas were feeble, in the same manner as they had been under the hand of the Pandions in former days, so now they were inferior as servants to the northern Nayakers; and they dwelt at Vallam and other places.

Subsequently twelve thousand religious pilgrims, who had come from the north, released Saduka-deven, the Sethupathi, who was imprisoned at Trichinopoly; and crowning him at Seringham, they carried him to Ramnad, and established him there. Thenceforward all the Maravers, who had gone to reside in the Tanjore province, emigrating to the south, joined their own relations in the Ramnad and Madura countries, and still reside there. Hence it happens at this present time, that though every where in the Tanjore country there are communities of those tribes which are denominated Kallar, Pattis, and Padaiyachis, as possessors of the landed property, yet very few Maravers are seen there.

From this extract we derive a further statement of the ascendancy once acquired over Madura by the Marawas; but we hope to glean further information on the point by and bye. The number of twelve thousand pilgrims, at the first, excited some apprehension of exaggeration. However, the matter is explained and rendered probable by some reflection and inquiry. In the first place, pilgrimage to Ramiseram is very common: the water of the Ganges, or Godavery, is brought by pilgrims to be sprinkled or poured over the idol; and it is understood that there passes not a day without an aspersion of this kind from a new votary. In the second place, the war and capture of the Sethupathi had produced a very considerable interruption of the usual course of things, and, by consequence, an accumulation and detention of pilgrims. And, in the third place, it seems that the pilgrimage is not considered to be complete, as to the certainty of consequent beatification, unless in addition to seeing and doing homage to the idol, they afterwards see and render obeisance to the Sethupathi, the appointed and legitimate guardian of the temple at Ramiseram. Hence the number of pilgrims, and their importunate clamors, producing the release of Sadaicen, becomes sufficiently well explained.

As yet we have not the means of reconciling the discrepancy of statement between the account in the Carnataca Dynasty, and that in some of the Mackenzie MSS. as to the commander-in-chief in the expeditions against the Mysoreans. The extract just before given makes the repelling of one Mysore invasion to have been confided to Nadukatali-Chinna-Kattir-Naicker, and another to Ramapaiyen; and this last to have been before the rebellion of the Sethupathi. It also makes the last expedition to be under the command of Muttulu-Naicker; in which it is confirmed by another authority, to be forthwith adduced. Whether therefore the invasion of the Mysoreans, repelled by Regu-natha-deven, according to the Carnataca Dynasty, may have been some intermediate affair, can at present be only matter of conjecture. Further materials, yet to be examined, regarding the family of the Sethupathis, may perhaps clear up the difficulty; and if so, the subject will be again adverted to. It is sufficiently clear, that the Mysore and Madura rulers, though alike offsets from the more ancient Vijianagaram, were yet in a state of constant hostility; and more especially during this reign. A further reference anon must be made to Mysore affairs; but meantime it is our office to introduce a translated extract from another Mackenzie MS. relating to the conduct of the expedition under Muttulu-Naicker, and the amicable adjustment with him afterwards made: preventing a civil war in the Madura kingdom. The original is in the Telugu language, and of respectable composition: it commences with the account here first given, and continues the narrative through succeeding reigns; containing various details of more or less importance. By consequence, there may be occasion to refer to it oftener than once. Not having, at present, convenient means of setting up the original Telugu, the extract is confined to an accurate English translation.

RECORD OF THE AFFAIRS OF THE CARNATAKA GOVERNORS.

(Translated extract.)

After that the Maha-rajā Tirumali-Naicker had gone to Vaicontha, his son, Raja-Mutthu-Virapa-Naicker, was anointed and installed. Up to that time the second in power had been Cumara-Muttulu-Naicker, the younger brother of Tirumali-Naicker. During the illness of Raja-Tirumali-Naicker the people of the Maisur-Srirangapatnam, exceeding their own boundaries, descending the pass, and entering on the territory of Raja-Tirumali-Naicker, took entire possession of Coimbatore, and some others of the eighteen chief towns of that district. On this intelligence reaching Raja-Tirumali-Naicker, he was greatly incensed; and his eyes sparkled with rage: at the same instant calling his younger brother Cumara-Muttulu-Naicker, the second governor, he said to him, "The Mysoreans, knowing that we are sick, have availed themselves of the opportunity to invade our royal domains, and have taken many of our principal places; therefore do you forthwith assemble all our forces; and, proceeding with these, resist and overcome the enemy, retaking the country which they have wrested from us; and, besides, following them up into their own mountainous country, capture that also; and then return." In obedience to these orders, Cumara-Muttulu-Naicker took the requisite measures to assemble all the elephants, horses, foot-soldiers, and every other description of troops; and, without any loss of time, by forced marches night and day, he fell upon the Mysoreans, and encountered them many times, with distinguished bravery, until he had cut up and scattered their forces. Then such of the Mysoreans as had escaped destruction, perceiving his valour, and finding they could not successfully oppose him, relinquished the places which they held, and re-ascended the mountain-pass. Thereupon Cumara-Muttulu-Naicker, being greatly rejoiced, beat the drum of victory; and, placing garrisons in all the towns which had been captured, he restored the country to its accustomed order. Afterwards, putting no bounds to his anger, and being mindful of his elder brother's commands, he led the whole of his army up the Ghaut, with the greatest circumspection. Then the Mysoreans, observing his approach, attended with a strong army, remarked one to another "These have re-captured their own places; they have beaten us and driven us away; and not satisfied with regaining the country which we had conquered, they even have dared to ascend to our mountain country;" and thereupon they fell upon the troops of the Madura capital with a great multitude. In consequence a most bloody combat was waged. In the midst of it, Cumara-Muttula-Naicker re-assured his forces by beckoning them with his hand; and, restoring them to good order, he placed himself in front of his army, leading them on; and, after a long and arduous struggle with the Mysoreans, he defeated them. Afterwards, a few of their leaders turning their faces towards Spirangapatnam, ran away. Cumara-Muttula-Naicker, to his great joy, having thus discomfited their army, took possession of the mountaineers' country as far as Nanjana-kudi; and, putting his own people into that place, he encamped with his army in its vicinity.

Just at this time the most illustrious king, Tirumali-Naicker, was deified, (or died). Thereupon the people of the palace at Madura, the lords, and executive ministers, having all assembled, held a deliberative council, and crowned Sri-Mutthu-Virapa-Naicker, the son of Tirumali-Naicker. Cumara-Muttula-Naicker, on hearing of the decease of Tirumali-Naicker, and of the coronation of Sri-Mutthu-Virapa-Naicker, took the matter very angrily, and said to the chief persons around him, with a deeply wounded mind, "Although we are the proper person to be crowned after our elder brother, yet, without our knowledge, the people of our elder brother's son have proceeded to crown him." He forthwith had the generale beat, gave directions to the hircarrahs, and put his camp in motion. He took the Casi-lingam, which had been consecrated at Nanjana-kudi; and besides this, he took all the treasure of this chief town, with jewels, elephants, horses; and carrying them with him, proceeded with the army, quitting the mountainous country, and, descending the pass, halted with his encampment at a village named Durvamanam, near to Madura.

Such being the state of circumstances, Sri-Mutthu-Virapa-Naicker, as also his generalissimo, and executive ministers, entered upon a peaceable negociation with Cumara-Muttula-Naicker; and having pacified him, gave up to him Siva-Casi and some other territory in the Tinnevely country. Hereupon, as Cumara-Muttula-Naicker was a person of distinguished good sense, he resigned all other claims; and giving over his army to Sri-Mutthu-Virapa-Naicker, caused his son, Cumara-Rangapa-Naicker, to be installed and anointed, as the second in power: then dividing his troops, he proceeded to Siva-Casi. He caused this town to be properly built; and erected in it a very large temple, in which he caused the image that he had brought from Nanjana-kudi to be placed and consecrated. To this Isvaren he gave the name of Visvanatha-svami; and caused a temple-goddess to be made, as also every other customary kind of images. He ordered many embroidered vestments to be prepared; and also a car for the processions to be built. He caused the homage in that temple to be regularly conducted; and saw that the festival occasions were managed with great splendor. He besides had many reservoirs of water dug, and caused many Agraharas (or houses for Bramins) to be built. Thus, as one distinguished for charitable munificence, he ruled that country for some time; and afterwards was deified.

CARNATACA DYNASTY, SEC. 10.

In the heading of this section Cumara-Ranga-Naicker, the second sovereign, is printed by inadvertency for Mutthu-Virapa-Naicker. The reign of the latter, with that of his successor, receive some considerable illustration from the two Mackenzie MSS. already quoted. We first adduce an extract, and its translation, from the Tamil account of the descendants of Appiya-Naicker. The reign of Mutthu-Virapa-Naicker, it will be seen, was not much marked by incidents; owing to his being well established on the throne, and being very probably a wise and peaceable prince: only, according to the notions of his day, he indulged himself in building temples and houses for Bramins, with royal endowments. Such seems to have been the chief occupation of native Hindu sovereigns in times of prosperity and peace. It will be also seen, that his successor, Choka-natha-Naicker, was most probably of very inferior turn of mind, as the incidents of his reign were certainly of another character.

NOTICE OF CHINNA-KATTIRA-NAICKER;

His part in the Tanjore war, and in quelling the usurpation of Rustam-Khan.

While his son (the son of Rangana-Naicker), named Chinna-Kattira-Naicker, was ruling Choka-natha-Naicker, the lord of Trichinopoly, before raising an army to be sent to fight against the Tanjore capital, called Chinna-Kattira-Naicker; and said to him, "Since you are especially an adopted child of the sovereigns, give ten thousand pons towards the expenses of the war against Tanjore." As he replied that he could not contribute so much, it was settled that his subsidy should be five thousand pon-chakrams. Besides which the king directed Chinna-Kattira-Naicker to follow the army with his own quota of people. The fort of the Tanjore capital was in consequence besieged; and as Chinna-Kattira-Naicker had greatly exerted himself during the war, and was instrumental in bringing about a successful termination, the king honored him with presents on his return, bid him enjoy his revenue free of tribute as heretofore, and allowed him to retire to his own town.

While residing there he did not treat respectfully the people of the court who were near the king; so that these became angry with him. Govinda-paiyer was the principal minister near the sovereign, who sent for Chinna-Kattira-Naicker, and said to him, "It is because you enjoy your palliyam free of all tribute that you are so haughty: is it not? but now let us have an exact adjustment as to the proceeds of your district;" and to this end (the minister) detained him. Subsequently, while he waited in attendance, it was settled that he should pay a yearly tribute of five thousand gold chakrams: after which arrangement he returned to his own town. While he thus was paying tribute for two or three years, Choka-natha-Naicker greatly distinguished a Mahomedan, named Rusumu-Kan (Rustam-Khan); placing him in the royal presence, and gave to him authority. He availed himself of the opportunity to get the management of all things, and to bring all the people under his control: he then shut up Choka-natha-Naicker, and his children, in the house, and strictly confined them there; and, having done so, assumed the government as his own. But Govinda-paiyer, although having the management of all matters, did not — அவர்மகன சின்னக்கத்திராநாயக்கர் துறைதனஞ்செய்துகொண்டிருக்கிற

 நாளை யில் துரிசுர்புரங் கோட்டையில் கர்த்தாக்களாகிய சொக்கநாதநாயக்கர்வர்களதரு
 சாஹர்சமததானததினபேரில் தண்டெடுத்ததுசண்டைக்குப்போகிற முன்னுக்குச்சின்
 னக்கத்திராநாயக்கரைவரவழைத்துக்கர்த்தாக்களுக்குநீமுகியமானகுமார்வர்க்கமானதி
 னுலேதருசாஹர்சமததானததின பேரில்சண்டைக்குப்போகிற சிலவுக்குப்பதினாயிர்
 ம்பொனகொடுவென்றுகேட்டார்கள். அவ்வளவுக்குநிர்வாகமில்லை யென்றுசொன்ன
 தில்லீராதென்றுஅயயாயிம்பொனசக்கிரம்வாங்கினார்கள். அப்பால்பாணாயததுக்குக்
 கூடவேசின்னக்கத்திராநாயக்கரையும்அவர்சனததையுங்கூடவரச் சொல்லிஅழைத்துக்
 கொண்டு போனார்கள் அப்போதுசமததானததின பேரிலிறங்கிக் கோட்டையிற் சண்
 டையாகிற முன்னுக்குச்சின்னக்கத்திராநாயக்கர்ரொம்ப ப்பிரயாசைப்பட்டதினாலே
 போனகாரியம் அனுகூலப்படுத்திக்கொண்டு ஊர்வந்துசேர்ந்ததென உடுக்கையரு
 செயது எப்போதும்போலே சருவமானனியமாகஉன்பாணாயப்பட்டடை அனுப்பிவித
 துக்கொண்டுசுகமேஇருக்கச்சொல்லிச்சின்னக்கத்திராநாயக்கரைஊருக்கனுப்பிவிச்சுவி
 டடார்கள். ஊர்வந்துசேர்ந்திருக்கிறநாளை யில்கர்த்தாக்களிடத்திலிருக்கப்பட்டசாமா
 சிகாணலெட்சயப்படுத்தாமலிருந்ததினாலே அவர்களுக்குரோசம்பிறந்து கோவிந்தப்
 ப்பயர் அவர்கள் கர்த்தாக்கள்சமுகத்துக்குரொம்பவும்முகியசாமாசிகமானதினாலேஅ
 ப்போதுசின்னக்கத்திராநாயக்கரைவரவழைத்துச்சருவமானனியமாய் உன்பாணாயப்ப
 ட்டடைஅனுப்பிவிததுக்கொண்டுவருகிறதினாலேஅல்லலொரொம்பவும்கர்வம்வந்திருக்கு
 து. உன் பாணாயப்பட்டி கரூர் வகையறுப்புதீர்த்ததுக் கொண்டுபோவென்றுநிறுத்திக்
 கொண்டார்கள். அப்பால்வடத்தில்கார்த்ததுக்கொண்டிருந்த அய்யாயிரம்பொன்சர்க்
 கர்வருஷி வருஷிவகொடுக்கத்தக்கதாய்த்தீர்த்ததுக் கொண்டுஊர்வந்துசேர்ந்தார்கள்.
 அப்படிக்கு வகையறுப்புதிர்ணமிமுனறுவருஷங்கொடுத்ததுக் கொண்டுவந்ததில்சொக்
 கதாதநாயக்கர்வர்கள் சமுகத்தில்ஒருதுலுக்கன்ருசமுதான் எனறொருவன்பிர்பலமாகி
 அவனுக்குஅதிகாரங்கொடுத்திருந்தார்கள். அப்போதுஅவனசகலகாரியததுக்குமவர்
 ப்பட்டிக்கொண்டு சகலசனததையுருசுபப்பித்ததுக்கொண்டு கர்த்தாக்களாகியசொக் like Rustam-Khan, but sent a secret message to the Sethupathi and to Chinna-Kattira-Naicker, and told Rustam-Khan that he was about to summon all the Palliyacars, in order to adjust the revenue, from their several districts; and accordingly he gave a general summons for their attendance. But he secretly called the Sethupathi, and Chinna-Kattira-Naicker, and said to them, "This Rustam-Khan has shut up the king in his house, keeping him closely confined there; and has assumed every thing to himself: now we are the persons to settle this business, and to release the sovereign from confinement; and I will explain to you the means of doing so: see that you act accordingly. The plan is this: to-morrow he will have come to the cutcherry, (revenue-office,) attended by a crowd of his own people, all completely armed. At the same time do you come, attended by your people, well armed; and be ready for the interview just as you would be for a battle." To these instructions they replied, "Let it be so." And accordingly Chinna-Kattira-Naicker, and the Sethupathi, both came to the interview in the manner of marching to a battle. Seeing this array, Rustam-Khan said to Govinda-paiyer, "Why do they come in this kind of way?" Govinda-paiyer replied, "They are come just in their customary manner." On receiving this answer Rustam-Khan said to Govinda-paiyer, "Well, bid them come to-morrow, and the thing for which they are come being all accurately settled, they may be sent away." Govinda-paiyer said, "Very good." And looking at Chinna-Kattira-Naicker and the Sethupathi, he winked with his eye; and then passed over on this side of them. On the instant a volley from two thousand muskets was discharged on Rustam-Khan and the rest of the Mahomedans, which killed the whole of them at once. Chinna-Kattira-Naicker immediately went to the house wherein Choka-natha-Naicker was confined; and, opening it, desired Choka-natha-Naicker to come outside. But Choka-natha-Naicker replied, "If you bring the head of Rustam-Khan, and place it before me, I will come; but until then I will not come." Chinna-Kattira-Naicker said, "Amongst a thousand Mahomedans, how can one of them be distinguished from the other?" Choka-Natha-Naicker continued, "You may know him by this mark, his having an impostume on his ear: that is he." He was distinguished by this sign; and his head being cut off, it was brought and placed before Choka-natha-Naicker, who then came forth from his prison. Choka-natha-Naicker addressed Chinna-

கதாதநாயக்கையும் அவர்களுள் குழந்தைகளையும் வீட்டிலே போட்டு அடைத்துப் போட்டு ததானாகச்சிறுதுறாளகாறுபார்செய்து கொண்டிருந்தான் போதுகோலி ததப்பய்யர்களுமுதலானபடிததுமுக்கியமாய்ச்சகலகாரியமும் பார்த்துக்கொண்டிருந்தது அததரங்கத்திலே சேதுபதிக்குள்ளினனக்கத்திர்நாயக்கருக்குஞ்சொலி யனுப்பிவிச்சப்பாணியப்பட்டாளைச் சீமைவகையறுப்புதித்துக் கொள்ளவரச்சொலிஅனுப்பிவிக்கிறெனென்றுருகமுதானிடத்தில்சொலிச்சகலமானபாணியக்கார்பாயும்வரவழைத்துச்சேதுபதியையுள்ளினனக்கத்திர்நாயக்கையுங்கோலிததப்பய்யர்அததரங்கத்தில்வரவழைத்துக்கூர்ந்ததாக்கணவீட்டிலேபோட்டடைத்துப்போட்டுச்சகல காரியமுமிததருகமுதானேபார்க்கிறெனென்றுசொலி நாம்தானிவனைச்சரிப்பிததிப்போட்டுக்கூர்ந்ததாக்கணவெளிப்பிததுகிற தற்குடையாருஞ்சொல்லுகிறேன். அநதப்படிக்குநீங்கள்செய்யவேணும்அதெப்படிவெனறால்அவன்நாணயத்தினவகச்சேரிக்குஅவன்சொந்தசனமாய்ஆயிதமுத்தீதுடனே சனசேகரமாய்வநிறுப்பான். அப்போதுநீங்களுஞ்சனசேகரததுடனேஆயிதமுத்திப்புடனேதயாராய்உயிததசனகுகததுக்குப்போகிறசங்கதியாய்ப்பேட்டிக்குவாருங்கனென்று சொல்லியிருந்தார்கள்.அப்படியேயாகட்டுமென்றுசினனக்கத்திர்நாயக்கர் சேதுபதிஇரண்டு பேரும்உயிததமுததுக்குப்போகிறபாங்கமாய்வநது கண்டார்கள் அப்போதுருகமுதான்கோலிததப்பய்யரைப்பார்த்தது இவர்களிப்படிக்கு வரவேண்டிய தென்ன வென்று கேட்டான். அப்போது கோலிததப்பய்யர்சொன்னது அவர்களெப்போதும் போலேதானவருகிற சட்டமாய்வநதார்களென்று சொன்னார் அப்போதுருகமுதான்கோலிததப்பய்யரைப்பார்த்ததுச்சொன்னதுநல்லதுநாளைக்கு வரச்சொல்லுஅவர்களவநதகாரியமெல்லாதறிட்டப்பித்திஅனுப்பிவிச்சலாமென்றுசொன்னான்.அப்போதுகோலிததப்பய்யர்நல்லதென்றுசினனக்கத்திர்நாயக்கையுஞ் சேதுபதியையும் பார்த்துக் கண்ணக்காட்டிச் சாடைசெய்து போட்டுஇப்புறம்வநதுவிட்டார். அநதட்சணம்இரண்டாயிரம்வெடியும்ஒரோபலிததாவானிலிருகமுதான் முதல்துலுக்கரத்தியநதமும்பட்டுப்போனார்கள் அநதட்சணஞ் சினனக்கத்திர்நாயக்கர்சொக்கநாதநாயக்கரை அடைத்திருக்கிறவீட்டுக்குப்போயவீட்ட

டைத்திறந்து சொக்கநாதநாயக்கனாவெளியிலே வாச்சொன்னதில்ப்போதுவொக்க
 நாதநாயக்கர்கள் சொன்னது ருசுமுகான் தலையை வெட்டிக் கொண்டு என்னதிரோ
 கொண்டு வந்து வைத்தால் வருகிறேன் இல்லாதவரையில் வரமாட்டேனென்று சொன்ன
 தில்ப்போதுகின்னக்கத்திரநாயக்கர் சொன்னது ஆயிரம்பேர் துலக்கரில் ஆனதற்கிற
 தென்தொன்னதில் அப்போதுவொக்கநாதநாயக்கர் சொன்னது ருசுமுகானுக்கு அ
 டையாளயகாதிலே சீவடியும் அவனதானென்று சொன்னார்கள் அப்போதுவந்துபார்
 தது அவனை அந்த அடியாளத்தின்படிக்கு அவனதலையை வெட்டிக்கொண்டு வந்து சொ
 க்கநாதநாயக்கனோடு வைத்ததில் அப்போது அவரும் வெளியே புறப்பட்டு வந்தார் அ
 ப்போதுகின்னக்கத்திரநாயக்கர் சொக்கநாதநாயக்கர்பார்த்தது உன்னுடைய சாமா
 ர்த்தியந்தெரியாமல் வகையறுப்பு இரண்டு வருஷத்தீர்த்ததுவாகிப்போட்டோம். இனி
 மேல் அப்படிக்குக்கொடுக்கவேண்டியதில்லை. சருவமான்யமாய்வைத்துச்சாப்பிட்டுக்
 கொண்டு சுகமேயிருவென்று உடுகைகொடுத்தது உத்திரவுசெய்தது அனுப்பிவிச்சார்கள்.
 அவரும் உள்வந்துசேர்ந்தார்கள் அவர்பட்டம்-(ஸ்)சய.

Kattira-Naicker to the following purport—" Being ignorant of your great talents, two years amount of tribute was settled, and received from you. For the future you need render nothing of the kind. Receive the full revenue, live on it, and prosper." He added the customary presents; and with these dismissing him, gave him leave to depart. The latter accordingly returned to his own town. The period of his rule was forty years.

The preceding extract bears chiefly on the reign of Choka-natha-Naicker; and illustrates especially the singular manner in which he was liberated from the thraldom of his own favorite Rustam-Khan: but the Telugu manuscript, before quoted from, is somewhat fuller in its notice of Mutthu-virapa-Naicker; and, in the reign of his successor, develops fully the causes and consequences of the rupture with Tanjore; leading to a scene as amazing, and a consummation as tragical, as perhaps ever occurred. We find mention in it besides of the first germe of that application to the northern Mahomedans which grew into a coalition with the Mahrattas; and bore, as its fruit, a new dynasty; that of the present reigning power at Tanjore. It is further evident from the extract, that the ancient Soren dynasty must have given way, at an earlier period than we had supposed, before the power of the Vijianaguram Ray.rs; and though the point is not cleared up, yet it is probable, that the viceroy of Tanjore became independent after the battle of Tellicotta; thus in some measure explaining in what manner Ariya-natha-Muthaliar held a common influence at Madura and Tanjore. Patient researches may, it is possible, solve every difficulty in the history we have been passing over: for the present, it is sufficient to introduce the extract referred to, translated from the Telugu manuscript.

THE WAR WITH TANJORE.

The Maha-Rajah, Mutthu-Virapa-Naicker, having made Cumara-Rangapa-Naicker, the excellent son of Cumara-Muttula-Naicker, his second in power at Madura, he reigned over the whole of the Pandion country with great equity. He built many Agraharas (houses for Bramins) and many temples; and had many reservoirs for water excavated. He made many presents to the temples and to the Bramins; and fully patronised all that depended on him. Thus he ruled with the greatest splendor and prosperity; so that the neighbouring kings were in awe of him. He so governed the kingdom from Subakirathu year down to Virothikirathu year, being ten years. This was Salivahana Sagartam 1594 (A. D. 1672).

Afterwards Raja-Mutthu-Virapa-Naicker's son, Raja-Choka-natha-Naicker, was crowned; and, for a short time, as always before, Cumara-Rangapa-Naicker was the second in power; but soon after the latter died. The second sovereignty then descended to Cumara-Tirumali Naicker, the younger brother of Choka-natha-Naicker. And thus Raja-Choka-natha-Naicker governed the kingdom with great equity.

Matters being thus situated, Achyuta-Vijia-Ragava-Naicker, the ruler of the Tanjai-nagaram capital (Tanjore), had a daughter born to him, and carefully brought up; endowed with superior sense and great personal attractions. Information of this circumstance having been received by the Dala-Kartavayi (general), named Tirusirapuram-Vengata-Kistnapa-Naicker, and by the treasurer, named Chinna-Tumbi-Muthaliar, they agreed that it was desirable to obtain such a person in marriage for their king Choka-natha-Naicker. They made known the matter to him; and by his sanction sent suitable persons to negotiate the marriage. These accordingly proceeded towards Tanjore; and sent beforehand to announce to Achyuta-Vijia-Ragava-Naicker, that such and such persons were coming: at the consequent interview they addressed him, saying, "Our king, Raja-Choka-natha-Naicker, desires that you will present your daughter to him in marriage." So soon as Achyuta-Vijia-Ragava-Naicker heard these words, he became incensed, and said, "Our daughter cannot be given to your king." But not stopping there, he freely indulged himself in ribaldry; and, without rendering the proper courtesy to the messengers, he told them to return whence they came. When, in consequence, they had returned to Trichinopoly, they caused the unhandsome treatment they had experienced at Tanjore to be fully understood by the Dalavayi Vengata-Kistnapa-Naicker, and by the treasurer, Chinna-Tambi-Muthaliar, in the immediate presence of the king Choka-natha-Naicker. On the simple hearing of the expressions, that had been employed, Sri-Raja-Choka-natha-Naicker was incensed to the highest degree; and, on the instant, took measures for assembling together many elephants, horses, and infantry; as also many large cannons and small arms, with connected matters: then addressing the Dalavayi Vengata-Kistnapa-Naicker, he said, "Do you forthwith set out with this assembled force, and storm the fort of Tanjore: conquer the whole of the people connected with that capital; and, having subdued the entire country, return. By this means you must add to your martial renown. Besides, heretofore having combated in many places, and acquired great reputation for bravery, you have the titles of Sugriva's crown and Vaivasasi; and since you are valiant as Arjunen, you commonly have his ten names applied to you in this kingdom. As you are a very skilful man, take with you the treasurer, Chinna-Tambi-Muthaliar; and assembling all the forces, proceed against the Tanjoreans."

On receiving this command, the Dalavayi Vengata-Kistnapa-Naicker placed the royal order on his head, and replied, "We will do according to the king's command:" then taking his dismissal, and placing himself at the head of the whole army, he quitted Trichinopoly, and passed over the boundaries of the Tanjore country. An encounter took place between the Tanjore troops stationed there and the invading force; and blood ran like water in the channels for irrigation. There was then great destruction, and many slain in the Tanjore force, many also were wounded.* Those who remained went to Tanjore, and reported what had occurred to their king. The simple hearing of this intelligence was to him like the thrusting of a heated iron rod into his ear; and, in a transport of anger, he instantly assembled a great force, and sent it against the Trichinopolitans. In the interim these, with the greatest celerity, advanced against the Tanjoreans. A fierce encounter took place between them. Achyuta-Vijia-Ragava-Naicker sent information of these events to his royal guru, (or chief spiritual adviser,) named Soma-santira-Sami; and, calling him, held a consultation with him: as the result of which the latter employed many incantations and imprecations, with the view of doing mischief to the Trichinopoly king. Intelligence of this mode of proceeding having reached Raja-Choka-natha-Naicker, he took counsel as to what should be agreed on to do in return; and sending, with great speed, for his own spiritual adviser, named Baktapiriya-Sami, he told him what was transacted at Tanjore, and directed him speedily to employ means with a view to set aside the effect of their devices. Thereupon Bakta-piriya-Sami counteracted the incantations of the enemies; so as to deprive them of power to do harm to any one. Besides which he formed the design of making a yagum, (sacrifice, or ceremony,) the effect of which should be to cause all the Tanjore troops to come over and join the king's forces; and forthwith he had gathered from all parts of the kingdom lacs upon lacs of pumpkins: having made these a subject of magical incantation, he caused all of them in the night time to be broken and cast into the river Cauvery. The object of this proceeding was, that whosoever should drink of the water of the Cauvery, thus impregnated with these pumpkins, should come over to be on the side of the Trichinopoly king. While this device was being conducted the two armies had come to an engagement; and the Tanjore army being beaten, retreated, and entered into the fortress of Tanjore.

* The translation is here a little abbreviated, as the original indulges in needless poetical ornament and metaphor.

Hereupon the Dalavayi-Vengata-Kistnapa-Naicker, being greatly rejoiced, gave to the whole of his army presents of jewels, rejoicing them all; and then putting the camp in motion, he proceeded and encamped near to Tanjore. Immediately afterwards the Dalavayi-Vengata-Kistnapa-Naicker sent a message, by suitable persons, to Achyuta-Vijia-Ragava-Naicker, to this effect—"Notwithstanding all past occurrences, you are a great king, and an illustrious personage. Moreover, as you refused to bestow your daughter all this discussion between your's and our's has occurred. But wherefore should it be continued? Consent to the marriage of your daughter with our king; and let a reconciliation take place. If so, we will cause our army to retire." On their delivering this message, Vijia-Ragava-Naicker became very angry at learning its purport; and sent to them (intermediately) the following reply: "The former speech was different, now that you have seen the army does the tone vary? It must not be so. If you are such very brave persons, fight on." At that time there were, on the ramparts of the Tanjore fort, twenty thousand musketeers, and otherwise a great force. Although the besieging army saw all these, yet they did not in any wise give way; but posted the army, and mounted cannons upon raised breast-works, and having fixed the mark on the fort and the troops upon it, they discharged against it, with great rapidity, some tens of thousands of cannon shot. The defending troops were not able to sustain the infliction from the discharges of cannon; and coming over (in inclination) to the side of the besiegers, sent them terms of capitulation; declaring themselves to be their own people. At that time the mark being against the gates, these were struck and split in pieces; and, at the same time, the ditches were filled up, by bringing and casting into them great quantities of wood (fascines); when the place was entered, and taken by storm: some ascending the breaches made by the cannon shot, and some going in by the gates. Achyuta-Vijia-Ragava-Naicker, at this critical conjuncture, was at his devotions; praying with his eyes shut, and making the Vaishnava mark on his forehead. Some of his own people came and said, "O great king! the enemies have entered our fort by storm, and are now inside.” As he was a great devotee of Narayana, he did not abandon his homage; but merely made a sign to signify, “Let them come, we shall see.”

But the Dalavayi-Vengata-Kistnapa-Naicker, being very intelligent, and a person of an elevated mode of thinking, he at this same very critical time sent a message to Achyuta-Vijia-Ragava-Naicker, to this purport—“We have stormed your fort, and are now within it, accompanied by a very great army; and your own troops, together with the fort, are now altogether ours. What resource now remains to you? Therefore hereafter speak of peace, and we will still retire our troops.” But without interrupting his homage, and silently continuing his mental devotion, the king merely made a sign to this effect,—“Though even our kingdom, and every thing besides, go away, yet relinquish your endeavours to intimidate me, even but a little, or to compel me to give you my daughter, and to sue for peace.” This message he conveyed, with the greatest confidence, not uttering a single word. The Dalavayi Vengata-Kistnapa-Naicker, on receiving this intelligence, called together the troops, and advanced with them up to the very gates of Achyuta-Vijia-Ragava-Naicker's palace. In the interim, he having finished his homage, and hearing that the enemy's troops had advanced to the gates of the palace, became very angry, and arming himself alone with a weapon with great courage, he gave directions to assemble his crowned wives, little children, and all the rest of their attendants, in a place of refuge; and surrounding them with earthen vessels filled with gunpowder, he said, “At whatever time I may send word, at that time you will apply fire to those vessels charged with gunpowder, and attain the possession of Vaicontha.” Having given these orders, and while about to come forth out of the palace, he was accompanied by his people, those being excepted who had gone over to the side of the Trichinopolitans; and especially near to him, in order to guard his sacred person, were the Dalavayi Rangapa-Naicker, Timma, the conductor of the royal elephant, Choka-nathen, Vira-banu-Chinna-Raja, and Akki-Raja. These five persons, well armed, were around about him as he came out, also being armed, from the principal entry of the palace, and fronted the enemy's army, who had been eagerly enquiring “Where is the king? we do not see him come out.” The appearance of Achyuta-Vijia-Ragava-Naicker at this time was that of a .. youthful well looking person, though more than eighty years of age: his extremely over-hanging eye-brows had gold wires attached to them to keep them up; his shrivelled waist was wrapped round with valuable robes; and his dress studded with very many gems: he held in both his hands two very long highly furbished and glittering swords; and thus presenting himself before his enemies, assayed himself to commence war. Now it had happened, sometime before this, that in a transient fit of anger he had put irons on his son Mannarapa-Naicker, and confined him in prison; and the wish now occurred to the Dalavayi Rangapa-Naicker to release him, taking advantage of the present conjuncture. He in consequence spoke on this point to Achyuta-Vijia-Ragava-Naicker, who consented, saying, "It is well: let Mannaru-Sami be released and brought." Some persons immediately went, and having cast off his fetters, brought him with them. Then Mannarapa-Naicker, regarding his father, uttered the following verse.*

Let the sea cast up jewels, and hide them with straws;

But, conquering ruler! we own no such flaws.

To the sea be that shame, but we will assert,

That jewels are jewels, and dirt is still dirt.

He at the same time stood before his father in the most suppliant attitude, and with his hands closed together in the manner of prayer; while Achyuta-Vijia-Ragava-Naicker, beholding his son, and yielding to unrestrained parental affection, folded him in his arms. They then briefly inquired on the state of their mutual health, and spoke about the events of the war: their opinion was this—"The royal queens, with the children and others, are all in the Mahl; and it is certain, notwithstanding we

* The Telugu lines are:—

Manikinthu parichi jalanithi
Trunamun painunche athanithe kothava sumi,
Mani maniye, trunamu truname,
Rana vijaiya deliba, Vijaiya Ragava Buba!

The sea which casts jewels beneath, (and)
 Straws uppermost—See! That is its defect:
 (But) a jewel is a jewel, a straw is a straw,
 O Vijaiya Ragava! lord, and conqueror in combat.

may fight a little, and afterwards obtain Vaicontha, yet that if they remain there, when we are dead those of Trichinopoly will accomplish their own word, and taking our daughter thither, they will establish their own pretension; therefore we ourselves must cause the whole of them to obtain the divine form." Thus consulting and speaking, Achyuta-Vijia-Ragava-Naicker despatched his son and Akki-rajā on this errand into the Mahl. Meantime the whole of the royal females held in their hands drawn swords, and were constantly waiting, anxious to know if the king's mandate of death would come or not. When they saw the before-mentioned two persons approaching, they inquired "Is the king well? what command has he sent?" As soon as Mannarapa-Naicker had announced the fatal mandate, the royal females began immediately to cut each other in pieces with swords and axes; and some receiving deadly wounds, forthwith attained heavenly bliss. As a great number of domestics were within the palace, the whole of the remainder set fire to the gunpowder; previous to which act the two before-mentioned persons quitted the palace, and stood before the king, after having given in their report. No sooner had fire been applied to the gunpowder within the Mahl, than a loud double explosion took place; and the fire and smoke filled and surrounded the whole palace, setting it on fire. Achyuta-Vijia-Ragava-Naicker however did not give way to the least grief of mind on beholding that combustion, but said, "O Mannaru-deva! this is a requital for you;" and then, putting no restraint on himself, he rushed on to the battle. But before all this, the Trichinopoly commander, the Dalavayi Vengata-Kistnapa-Naicker, had very respectfully addressed them to this effect—"O divinities! while you are endued with such distinguished wisdom, why do you disturb so much water in so trifling a work? A relationship between yourselves and our king is not a novelty; for from the times of the Maharaja-Tirumali-Naicker, there has been between yourselves and them, a relationship as close as between milk and water; but now, from so much resistance, all this business has proceeded. However, for the future, be you and they in harmonious accord." This, and more to the same purpose, he said before people inside had set fire to the Mahl. To which the reply was, "We do not use double speech: having heretofore spoken in one way, is it because of what has occurred, supposing us afraid and consenting to you, that you now • speak in this manner? Is life the greatest, or is honor the greatest? However it may be as to right order, at all events we must preserve honor, and acquire fame. Hence cease consultations, and come and fight with us." While negotiations were thus rejected by them, and they were advancing onward, Timma, the driver of the royal elephant, a very skilful person, with Choka-nathen, Virabanu-Chinna-raja, Akki-raja, and the Dalavayi Rangana-Naicker, these five persons restrained the king and Mannarapa-Naicker, entered each one singly into the midst of the enemy's army sword in hand, and fought to the extent of their power; when ten persons cut up the five, and these five received the paradise of the brave. Thereupon Achyuta-Vijia-Ragava-Naicker, and his son Mannarapa-Naicker, taking sword in hand, entered into the enemy's army, and for a time bravely fought with much strength, each one killing many persons; after which they both of them obtained Vaicontha.

At the time of these occurrences a nurse, who had nourished the child of Mannarapa-Naicker, named Sengamaladasu, taking the said child, now two years old, in her arms, escaped without any one knowing it, and went to Nagapatnam (Negapatam); and there reared it with great care.

At a former period, while Achyuta-Vijia-Ragava-Naicker and Choka-natha-Naicker were on friendly terms, a communication, by palanquin and posted bearers, was established between Tanjore and Srirangam, within the boundaries of Trichinopoly: and it was the daily custom of the former, after his morning devotions and putting the Vaishnava mark on his forehead, to proceed post by palanquin to Srirangam, where on paying his homage and seeing the lord of Srirangam, (the idol,) he again entered his palanquin and returned to Tanjore: after which he took his morning meal. But when the former good understanding was broken up, and the two kings were at variance with each other, then as Achyuta-Vijia-Ragava-Naicker could no longer safely make his visits to Srirangam, he had a lofty and highly ornamented tower erected at Tanjore, whence he could see the shrine of Srirangam; and he was there accustomed every day to perform the ceremony of putting on the Vaishnava mark, and to regard the aforesaid shrine; from which circumstance the said building popularly acquired the name of the Namatirtam pillar; and it stood for a long time; but it is now broken, and fallen down. Since he was thus a devotee of Maha-Vishnu, it happened that, on the very time of his falling in the combat, he was seen at Srirangam, attended by his children, friends, and all his domestics; on which occurrence the Bramins being greatly rejoiced, said, "See! here is the Tanjore king come to pay his visit to the lord of Srirangam;" and taking all the keys and seals of the inner recess, they admitted him, and all the rest, to the shrine of the god; and after giving them the tulsi water, which they received, and putting on their heads the customary crown, he, with the whole band of his attendants, entered into that inner recess, and there disappeared. Thereupon the whole of the persons belonging to that place said, "What miracle is this?" not without great astonishment.

* The distance between the two places is about twenty miles.

The Dalavayi Vengata-Kistnapa-Naicker sent suitable persons to adjust the affairs of the whole Tanjore kingdom, and put a new garrison in the Tanjore fort; he also had the head of Achyuta-Vijja-Ragava-Naicker, and of his son, cut off, and taking these, together with many rich jewelled garments, to as full an extent as desired, he returned, together with the army, to Trichinopoly; and, on receiving the king's orders, he entered the town, and presented the two heads of the Tanjore persons, and jewelled robes, before the Maha-raja Sri-Raja-Choka-natha-Naicker's presence, which the king, regarded with much satisfaction, and addressed the Dalavayi Vengata-Kistnapa-Naicker, saying to him, "The ten names which were before given to you, belong to you only, and to no other;" and further honored him with the gift of many presents. Besides he had many donatives distributed to the treasurer, Chinna-Tambi-Muthaliar, and others, and said, with great joy, "Our determined resolve has now been accomplished according to our purpose."

Subsequently, he bestowed the viceroyalty of Tanjore on one Alagiri-Naicker, whom he regarded with the greatest affection, calling him elder brother, because he was the son of the nurse who had nourished the king when an infant, and they had both partaken of the same milk: the king having made a regulation, that, with the exception of the necessary public expenses, the whole of the remainder of the revenue should be transmitted by him to Trichinopoly, sent Alagiri-Naicker to Tanjore. Accordingly he, having received the king's orders, proceeded to Tanjore, and settled the whole country; and, as before in the time of Achyuta-Vijia-Ragava-Naicker, the latter had acted with equity, so he also conducted himself, and after deducting expenses, he transmitted the remainder of the revenue to Trichinopoly. He in this way managed the kingdom, as the chief of Tanjore under Choka-natha-Naicker, with spontaneous diligence.

While matters were proceeding in this course Sri-Choka-natha-Naicker, having heard favorable reports of Mangamal, daughter of Lingama-Naicker, of Chandragiri-Dupakul, sent suitable messengers to Dupakul-Lingama-Naicker; and, having married the said Mangamal, he experienced great happiness from the union. While so governing the kingdom, the aforesaid Alagiri-Naicker did not send the revenue and other things to the king, as he had been accustomed to do heretofore; nor did he transmit the needful letters; and whereas he before used to write reverential petitions, he now addressed a letter, composed in terms of equality, to the presence of the king Choka-natha-Naicker. Whereupon the rayasers (or secretaries) who were in the presence of the king, receiving this letter, brought it into the presence of the king, and said, "Alagiri-Naicker, of Tanjore, instead of writing a petition, as heretofore customary, has now written in this kind of style." The king, being much displeased, opened and looked at the letter, and became greatly incensed, so that he put his hand on his mustaches, and his eyes sparkled with rage. He instructed his secretaries to write a reply in these terms, "Thou understandest the nature of thy power: dost thou not? As thou and we were nourished with milk from the same breast, we placed our favor upon thee; and, so soon after sending thee to Tanjore, what means this beginning of treason, this withholding of revenue and other things, and this want of fear in sending a letter as if to an equal? If for the future we perceive this thy mistaken conduct, we shall not forbear; therefore see and conduct thyself with good sense." According to these instructions the secretaries wrote. As soon as the letter had reached Alagiri-Naicker he read it over; and, thinking lightly of it, returned an answer, conceived in ironical and equal terms, to this effect—"Did we not write according to the constant practice of the Tanjore rulers, when addressing those of Trichinopoly: where is the difference?" On this letter coming to the presence of the king, Choka-natha-Naicker, and his understanding the contents, he was in an illustrious rage; and, ordering all the troops to be assembled, he sent for the Dalavayi-Vengata-Kistnappa-Naicker, and after making him acquainted with all the circumstances connected with the letters, he gave him orders in these terms—"Set out forthwith for Tanjore with the army; and taking Alagiri-Naicker by the hand, conduct him hither."

Thereupon the whole of the court advisers formed a deliberative council; in which they came to these conclusions—"There is sufficient cause to urge the marching of an army against Alagiri-Naicker; but since it will be needful to proceed against him with a much greater force than was heretofore sent against Achyuta-Vijia-Ragava-Naicker, should the matter be thus hurried on, how can it be managed? therefore it will be expedient to proceed regularly, according to the rules of Sama-Dana-Betha-Dandam;* and, having done so, then we may conquer Alagiri-Naicker." Agreeable to which counsel they all, with faithful integrity, pacified the king.

Such being the state of affairs, we advert to the infant Sengamala-dasu, that was concealed by his nurse, who took refuge in the house of a petty merchant. He received her hospitably; and abundantly supplied both her and the child Sengamala-dasu with food and clothes; and thus continued to protect them. While they were there, it came to the knowledge of the Rayasam-Venganen, who had been employed as a secretary by Achyuta-Vijia-Rajava-Naicker, that the offspring of the king was concealed at Negapatam. He accordingly came to that place, and had an interview with the nurse and Sengamala-dasu, in the house of the merchant; and all three resided together in that house for some years. When Sengamala-dasu had attained to ten years of age, he took with him the nurse who had brought him up, and the secretary Venganen, and proceeding to Visiapur, had an interview with the Padshah of Secunderabad (or with Secandra-Padshah); and explained to him that their capital and its domain had been taken away by force: as the replies to questions proposed were acceptable, the Padshah distinguished them with much favor; and calling for the son of the late Vaji-Rao, named Ekoji-Raja, he gave him orders in these terms—"Thou wilt take with thee twelve thousand horse, as also Sengamala-dasu, and conquer Alagiri-Naicker, who has taken these people's kingdom; and, having captured the fort, thou wilt cause Sengamala-dasu to be crowned and reinstated in the kingdom; and then return."

Accordingly Sengamala-dasu, and Ekoji-Raja, with twelve thousand cavalry, proceeded to Tanjore, and fought with Alagiri-Naicker. While besieging the fort, preparatory to storming it, Alagiri-Naicker being unable to withstand their force, and humbled in mind, wrote a petition, as he had at first been accustomed to do, to the king at Trichinopoly, in these terms—"Since foreign kings are thus come, and are about to obtain forcible possession of the kingdom, I beseech you to pardon my fault, and to drive away these foreigners; when you will keep possession of the kingdom as heretofore." On the arrival of that letter, the whole of the executive ministers assembled, and represented to the king, that as foreign rajahs were about to subdue the kingdom, it was therefore needful at this time for the whole of them to go in order to conquer the enemies, and to protect the country: and this advice they urged upon his attention. But he, being displeased with Alagiri-Naicker, gave answer without any leaning to either side, saying, "What is either Ekoji or Alagiri to me?" In consequence the ministers, perceiving the king's state of will, remained quiet. Thereupon Ekoji-Raja captured the fort of Tanjore, and reinstated Sengamala-dasu in the possession of the kingdom. Sengamala-dasu afterwards gave to Ekoji-Raja, and the others with him, a great many splendid robes; and appropriated the revenue from Combaconum-district for the maintenance of their army; and they, upon being sent to that place, remained there with the whole army, on account of the money arising from the revenue.

Subsequently Sengamala-dasu, preparatory to bestowing the post of Dalakartapiratani (or general), got ready a great many presents, and calling for one Yenusanavai, he consulted with him on whom to bestow the office of Dalakarten; when it occurred to him to ask the opinion of the nurse who had reared him. Accordingly, going to her apartment and asking her opinion on this subject, she replied, "On whom can it be more suitably bestowed than on the merchant who protected us?"

Therefore, because she said, "You must give that office to no other than the Chetty," and as Sengamala-dasu was merely a child, he did not reject her counsel, but gave the post of Dalakarten to that merchant, delivered up to him his own seal, bestowed on him all kinds of presents, and mounting him on the royal elephant, gave him a public entry into the town. At all this the Royasam-Venganen was deeply grieved; and he thought, "Though I had conducted Sengamala-dasu to Vijianagaram, and with so much negotiation and unmeasurable pains procured him an interview with the Secandra-Padshah, bringing thence an army, conquering the enemies, and causing him to be crowned; yet notwithstanding all this, not to give me the post of Dalakarten, but to bestow it, by the advice of a nurse, on a street shopkeeper! And did he not also bid me obey and act according to that person's orders?" With these reflections he quitted Tahjore in great anger; and, going to Ekoji-Raja at Combacum, he said to him as follows—"You came from a great distance, and after great and varied efforts you took the fort; but wherefore give it over to Sengamala-dasu? Who besides would thus have given over so large a tract, perfectly in their own power, and yielding the annual revenue of a crore?" On hearing this speech Ekoji-rajā replied, "Harihari! why dost thou gabble on at this kind of rate?" and was angry. But the Rayasam-Venganen, not ceasing on that rebuke, continued to carry on the like insinuations every day, for a period of six months. Ekoji-rajā did not assent; and said, "Should the Secandra-Padshah hear this speech, severe punishment would visit us; and therefore we dare not act contrary to his written orders:" which was the usual reply. At this time some of the Palliya-carers to the south conquered some districts pertaining to the Tanjore dominion. About the same period the Secandra-Padshah died. Of this intelligence Ekoji-Raja received written information. Availing himself of this opportunity, the Rayasam-Venganen addressed Ekoji-Raja in the following terms—"You have no need of any precautions: come into the fort. They are by no means people of war. We will give you the kingdom, and ensure its subsequent peaceable regulation." Induced by these suggestions, and as the Secandra-Padshah was deceased, (Ekoji-rajā) consented; and, sending for the Rayasam-Venganen, he entered Tanjore, by the eastern gate, accompanied by his troops. As Sengamala-dasu had no persons capable of making resistance, he himself, with the whole of his personal attendants, went out by the western gate from the fort, and took refuge in the Trichinopoly country. Ekoji-Raja took possession of the rich country of Tanjore. Thenceforward, down to the present time, the Mahrattas have ruled over the Tanjore kingdom.

THE TREASON OF RUSTAM-KHAN.

During these occurrences, as the king Choka-natha-Naicker was a very wise prince, he directed his younger brother, Muttala-Kartiri-Naicker, to take the management of all the affairs of the kingdom; while Raja-Choka-natha-Naicker passed away all his time in reading the Baratham, the Bhagavatam, the Ramayanam, and other books. Thereupon Muttala-Kartiri-Naicker inquiring into all the devices of the art of government, and from motives of favor to one Rusumu-Kan (Rustam-Khan), a Mahomedan, who had come to him in a state of abject poverty, gave to this person the rank of Sirdar, and the command of four thousand cavalry. This Rustam-Khan, without the loss of a day, assembled several persons of his own Mahomedan tribe; and, reducing Muttala-Kartiri-Naicker and Choka-natha-Naicker to mere shadows, he, by every kind of means, brought over their people, and took possession of the fort, with its entire management. He thereupon sent this message to Muttala-Kartiri-Naicker—"If, without a moment's delay, you will politely leave the fort and withdraw, carrying with you all your family and your goods, it will be well. But if otherwise, as all the troops are on my side, whatever we can do may be done." Muttala-Kartiri-Naicker, on hearing the message thus sent, exclaimed, "So, so, indeed there is treachery." And, after much counsel, his conclusion was—"As by our want of vigilance all the troops are gone over to the Mahomedan, if at this time we were to dispute the matter with him, we should come off worsted; therefore, if at this time we give way, the matter must be put to rights on another occasion." Thinking thus, he withdrew from the fort with his family, carrying with him his ready money, and other valuables, and went to Negapatam.

After his departure Rustam-Khan confined Raja-Choka-natha-Naicker, with his crowned wives, within the palace (Mahl); and placed sentries all around it to keep it under close observation, these being all of them Mahomedans: he then took possession of the kingdom. But Raja-Choka-natha-Naicker, shut up as he was in the palace, taking counsel, wrote a letter to Kilaven, the Sethupathi, to the following purport—"A Mahomedan, who was a hired soldier, has acted in this way; and having put us under restraint, has usurped the kingdom. In consequence you must assemble a strong force, and come at this critical time to our relief." This letter he privately confided to a friend, and sent it by him to Ramnad. So soon as the Sethupathi had seen the letter he manifested great anger; and said to those around him, "Do ye see a Mahomedan boy has overturned the capital;" and, on the instant, summoning his own forces, amounting to twenty thousand men, Kilaven Sethupathi, by forced marches, night and day, arrived at Trichinopoly; and, shutting up the fort, fought against it: while Rustam-Khan, heading his troops on the ramparts, fought against the besiegers. Meantime some friends of Raja-Choka-natha-Naicker softly opened one of the fort-gates, and gave a private signal to the Sethupathi's people. Observing and understanding this, the Sethupathi with his people entered the fort, and slew the Mahomedans, until there was not one of them left in the fort; those not killed being driven outside. Next proceeding to the palace, he slew, or threw (over the walls), all the Mahomedan guards; and then sent to tell the king of all the trouble which he had taken.* Thereupon the king, being much rejoiced, came out; and proceeding to the hall of the throne, gave to Kilaven-Sethupathi many jewels and other presents; besides which he bestowed on all the troops which had followed that leader as many rich dresses as they could conveniently carry, together with money; and confirmed to them the possession of the Sethu country, even as heretofore. He then attended to the due regulation of the affairs of the kingdom; and re-called his younger brother, who had gone to Negapatam. He also performed many charities; built many agharas and many Saiva and Vaishnava temples; and had many water reservoirs excavated. While attending to these, and similar public acts of munificence, Sri-Raja-Choka natha-Naicker reigned twenty-six years, from Paritabi year down to Isvara year; and protected the kingdom; being illustrious for deeds of charity, and also for those of war. He then obtained Vaicontha. This was in S.S. 1620 (A.D. 1698).

* The reader will have perceived in several instances that the two MS. authorities adduced differ in circumstantialia, but agree in the general results.

REIGN OF RANGA-KISTNA-NAICKER.

Subsequently, in Vegudaniya year, the excellent son of Raja-Choka-natha-Naicker, who was named Sri-Raja-Ranga-Kistna-Naicker, was crowned. His second in power was Cumara-Muttula-Naicker, to whom he gave that authority; and he himself ruled the kingdom with charitable munificence and great warlike courage.

Affair with the Mogul's slipper and Sirdars.

In those days the Padshah (customarily) sent to all the countries, this Pandiya desam only forming an exception, one of his slippers, as a Farmana, (or imperial mandate,) which was placed in a howdah, (on an elephant,) and was sent in charge of two Nabobs; at the head of twelve thousand cavalry, and from forty to fifty thousand infantry: the slipper was moreover fanned by two chouries, (fans of Thibet cows' tails,) and attended by alavattankal, (kind of banners,*) by umbrellas, kettle-drums, and flutes, with other insignia. In this manner (the Nabobs) placing this Farmana on the howdah, conducted it to the respective boundaries of the various kingdoms; and, there halting, thence sent word to the king of each country. These kings came forth at the head of large bodies of troops; paid homage to the imperial mandate; and, calling for it to their public councils, had their own ensigns abased before it: they also carried it, together with the accompanying Sirdars and troops, to their capital towns, where the mandate-slipper was placed on their thrones; where also, with polite speeches, costly presents were made to the Sirdars, with promises to attend to the imperial orders delivered, and at the same time presenting tribute money, tied up in bags. But as this Pandiya desam was at a great distance from the Dekhan (proper), they were not always accustomed to come so far. Notwithstanding, while Raja-Ranga-Kistna-Mutthu-Virapa-Naicker was reigning, the imperial mandate, with all its insignia, twelve thousand cavalry, from thirty to forty thousand infantry, and the two Nabobs, set their faces hitherward; and came to the boundary of the kingdom, to the north of Trichinopoly, at Uttatur and Volcondah, where they halted. The Nabobs thence sent an Inayitthu-nameh, (or authoritative message,) by peons with silver sticks and silver breast-plates, to Trichinopoly, to inform Raja-Ranga-Kistna-Mutthu-Virappa-Naicker that the imperial mandate was arrived. Accordingly the silver breast-plated Chob-dars delivered the said message in the presence of the king, with the connected intelligence. As the king was young, he inquired of the Sirdars about him what this meant. They replied, "It is the Padshah's-Furmana; that is, a slipper placed in a howdah, attended with various banners and troops, which is sent to the rulers of kingdoms; and these kings go forth to meet it; treat it with respect; take it, with those that accompany it, to their capital; give presents to these, and paying to them tribute money, send them away. As this is the established rule, and the mandate is now sent to this capital, we also must treat it in the same respectful manner." On hearing this statement and advice the king was angry; but took the Inayitthu-nameh, and giving presents, and as much money as they desired, to the silver breast-plated Chob-dars that brought it, he directed them to go and tell the Nabobs that his bodily health was not good. But he also despatched the Dalakarten, and other suitable persons, giving them these instructions—"You will go to these Nabobs, and say, 'Our king is unwell, but if you will come to Samiyaveram, on the other bank of the river Coleroon, then the king will come out to meet you;' and for the rest, by every device or stratagem, you will manage to conduct that Furmana, and the Nabobs, to our city." With these orders he sent them away. Accordingly they placed the king's command on their heads, and proceeded to the place where the mandate was posted: on seeing the Nabobs, and other great men who brought it, these angrily demanded the reason why the king was not come? The Dalakarten and others, with self-command, replied, "As our king is very unwell, and since he has directed this information to be conveyed to you, and also invites the whole of your body, we request you to come to Samiyaveram, on this bank of the Coleroon river, whither our king will proceed." The Chob-dars to whom they had confided their message also, said the same. Thereupon they placed the Furmana in the howdah; and, setting out with all the troops, came to Samiyaveram, on the further bank of the Coleroon; when, addressing the people from Trichinopoly, they said with anger

* This assemblage bizarre was in part a mockery of Hindu idol processions; in part an imitation of royal state. As nothing could be more arrogant, so nothing could be more insulting.

“What! has not your king come hither also?” These, with great softness, replied, “Come near to Trichinopoly, he will meet you there.” Accordingly, accompanied by the mandate, they crossed the Coleroon and the Cauvery; and came close to Trichinopoly. As the king did not come thither, the Nabobs and Sirdars became excessively angry; when the Dalakarten, and the others, labored much to appease them, and said, “As our king is exceedingly ill, he will come in a palanquin just within the fort gate.” Previously to this time Raja-Kistna-Mutthu-Virapa-Naicker had given orders to the keepers of the gate to allow the elephant bearing the Farmana, with its attendant Sirdars and principal men, to come within the fort; but not to allow the passage of the rest of the troops. Afterwards they came inside the fort with the Farmana, when with anger they said, “Is your king not come? have you such obstinate pride?” But the others said, “Our king, from the effects of sickness, is not able to enter a palanquin; come with us to the gates of the palace.” They accordingly came with the mandate to the gates of Sri-Ranga-Kistnappa-Mutthu-Virapa-Naicker’s palace. As the king still did not appear, they came still closer to the palace entry; when, thinking that a want of respect was implied by waiting there, they took the mandate from the howdah, placed it in a palanquin, and, not without anger, carried it into the hall of the throne. Meanwhile Sri Raja-Ranga-Kistna-Mutthu-Virapa-Naicker had invested himself with all the paraphernalia of his dignity; and, in the midst of a great number of his friends, was seated on his throne. When the Padshah’s Nabobs, and principal men, having taken the Farmana in their hands, had brought it into the hall of the throne, seeing that the king did not pay the smallest token of respect, either to the Farmana, or to themselves, they were excessively angry; and, pushing aside such persons as stood in their way in the hall of audience, they came near and offered to give the Farmana into the hands of the king. The king, being very angry, bid them place it on the floor. But paying no attention to his command, and not putting (the slipper) down, they again offered to give it into his hands. Thereupon the king called for people with whips; and adding, “Will the Padshah’s people put the Farmana down or not? let us see,” further summoned people with ratan canes. As the king was calling aloud, they became terribly afraid, and put the Farmana down on the floor. The king, seeing this, placed one of his feet within the slipper; then addressing the people, said, "How comes it that your Padshah has lost even common sense? When sending foot-furniture for such kind of persons as ourselves, why does he not send two slippers instead of one? Therefore do you speedily go back, and bring hither another slipper." While he thus spoke they answered with all the vivacity of anger. On which the king became excessively incensed, and had them all beaten and driven away. In consequence, on going outside of the fort, they assembled all their troops and began to make war. The king, on hearing this intelligence, sent outside the fort five thousand cavalry, and a great force of infantry, which fell upon the Padshah's troops, and cut them up piecemeal. As they could not make a successful stand, they ran away; and reported these occurrences to the Padshah. He, thinking on the matter, considered that if he were, for the future, to send such a message, the disgrace done to it now, by the daring of one, would be imitated by others; he was therefore induced, by this high bearing of Raja-Ranga-Kistna-Mutthu-Virapa-Naicker, thenceforwards to cease the sending of the Farmana to the different rulers of countries.

Adventure of the king at Tanjore.

While Raja-Ranga-Kistna-Mutthu-Virapa-Naicker, who had flogged and driven them (the Nabobs) away, was ruling with singular boldness and warlike courage, he sent for the Sirdars who belonged to him; and, giving them a strict charge to follow him with their troops at some distance, he one day, towards evening when the heat of the day was abated, mounted a very fleet horse, and going out by the eastern gate, when he had proceeded to some little distance, he turned his horse's head towards Tanjore. Sri-Raja-Ranga-Kistna-Mutthu-Virapa-Naicker, thus alone, patting his horse, proceeded with extreme courage, unattended, and with only one horse, into a foreign country, without the smallest hesitation. In the evening, when it was dark, he mingled with those who came out of that city; and then, turning his horse's head, entered, with those who were again returning thither, into the fort of Tanjore. Proceeding with them to the bazar street, he went up to a chetty (bazar shopkeeper), and said to him, “My dwelling place is Kolva-kodi :* I am newly arrived at this town to-day, my attendants therefore are not with me, nor have I the requisite supplies: go, take the needful concern, and buying them, bring them to me; the money-box is coming, but meantime advance me one pagoda† on the deposit of this ring.” He received this advance; and then, by the assistance of this same chetty, he had his horse tethered, gram‡ and grass being put before it; while he took up his own quarters in an agrahara (Bramin-choultry), and partook of fruits and milk: when for a quarter pagoda expended, he gave the entire pagoda to the chetty, to his no small joy, rendering him alert in his attention; and inducing him of his own accord to bring and present betel and tobacco leaf, with like sundries.

Subsequently, in the first watch of the night, Raju-Ranga-Kistna-Mutthu-Virapa-Naicker disguised himself as a sepoy, with cap, jacket, trowsers, belt, and shield; and, with slippers on his feet, entered the king’s palace on foot, in the dark; and, proceeding to the hall of the throne, sat down for a short time near to the king. As soon as he had comprehended the nature of the affair immediately under discussion, he rose up, and proceeded to take a very exact survey of every part about the whole of the palace; and, having done so, he wrote on the door leading from the hall of the throne to the private apartments, “On such a day we, Ranga-Kistna-Mutthu-Virapa-Naicker, of Trichinopoly, came hither, and having learned all the news at this place, left it and went away.” Having thus written, he quitted the palace, and returned to his quarters for the night. Rising up on the following morning he called the chetty, and said, “As the money-box is not come, we will send you your pagoda; you will then return the ring.” Then calling for his horse, and mounting, he set off at full speed, and with the highest possible glee, until he returned to Trichinopoly, and entered his own palace. He forthwith sent for the Stanapathi, (ambassador) of Tanjore, and said to him, “We went to your king’s town; entered into the city, surveyed the whole of it; and in such a place wrote our name. And seeing that we left our ring with such a chetty, write to your king to take and send it. Your king does not maintain a proper circumspection. As there is no hatred between him and ourselves, and as your king is a just and charitable prince, we did nothing to your king, but left and came away. However had another one, like ourselves, penetrated so far, he might have slain the king, thrown him out of doors, and then returned. But write and ask, if it be proper for a king thus to be destitute of a proper guard?" The ambassador accordingly wrote to his king a full detail of all these circumstances. On this letter reaching the king, and his ascertaining the contents, he was beyond measure surprised; and, after reflecting on them awhile, he passed from the hall of the throne, and read what was written on the door of the private apartments. He also sent for the chetty; and, giving him ten pagodas for the one advanced, took from him the seal ring, and sent it forthwith to the Trichinopoly king. From that time forwards he had the palace and the fort very carefully watched, stationing a guard of soldiers at the western gate, ordering them to close the same in case at any time the Trichinopoly king should come out from the eastern gate of his own fortress: he thus kept up a constant vigilance.

* A fictitious name, but compounded of words signifying a sceptre and ten millions.

† Three and a half rupees, or about seven shillings. ‡ A kind of pulse, Glycine Tomentosa.

Adventure of the King at Ariyalur.

In the possession of the people of Ariyalur-Palliyam, there were four extremely valuable, and in the world unparalleled, things: the camel called Rama-Lacshmana, the sword called Chinna-rama-Banam, the elephant called Rana-Vira-Badra, and the white horse named Mutthu-kuchu. These four things having been very highly estimated by the kings who had preceded Raja-ranga-Kistna-Mutthu-Virapa-Naicker, they desired to obtain them; but finding they could not get them by voluntary permission, they treated the refusal with silent contempt, without any appeal to force. Raja-Ranga-Kistna-Mutthu-Virapa-Naicker having inquired into these circumstances, and comprehended them, and considering how he could manage so as to bring those four things into his own possession, ordered a white horse, of great fleetness, to be brought; and mounting it, he went out of Trichinopoly by the north gate, leading on his horse, at a swift rate, on the road toward Ariyalur; having previously inquired as to the road, of which he took notes and put them into his pocket. On reaching Ariyalur, the men who kept the gate disputed his entrance; which impediment he treated with contempt; and, forcing his way, entered within the enclosure of the palace of the Nayanar, who was the chief of that Palliyam. Dismounting there, he tied his horse to one of the pillars, and sat down on the Metta, or elevated seat, under the verandah of the palace. He there called to him the warders of the gate, and bid them go and tell their Nayanar, that Ranga-Kistna-Mutthu-Virapa-Naicker was come to the entry. They accordingly entered into the interior, and delivered the message to the Nayanar as they had been told to do. As soon as he heard that speech, though he was then bathing, he put aside the materials he was using, hastily got himself ready, and proceeded, with his children and people, taking in his hands a golden dish in which were various jewels wrought in gold and silver, which he brought to the king at the gate, and placed at his feet; falling down before him, and then waiting submissively to receive his commands. Meantime the Sirdars, learning that the king had left Trichinopoly, and was gone alone on horseback to Ariyalur, immediately assembled five thousand cavalry and thirty thousand infantry, and took the road leading towards Ariyalur. The people belonging to this place seeing a great multitude approaching, being afraid, ran as fast as they could and reported the circumstance to the Nayanar. The latter, addressing the king, said, "What is this my Lord? You have given orders for all your army to move, and you yourself have first come, and alone. What is the cause of coming hither? Let the work or service be what it might, should a letter of orders arrive even while I sleep, I should most certainly come. What fault have I committed? O divinity! whatever is the cause of your coming, I beseech you tell me. And now a great force is advancing from Trichinopoly. Will this town be able to support so numerous a host?" While he thus besought the king, the latter despatched orders to his Sirdars to halt, and not to come to Ariyalur. And when the Nayanar still besought the king to state the purpose of his coming, the king said to him, "There is with you the very valuable pearl-camel called Rama-Lacshmana, the sword called Chinna-Rama-Banam, the white horse called Mutthu-Kuchu, the elephant named Rana-Vira-Badra, these four things: is it not so? These you must give to us." He replied, "Was it needful for such trifles for the king to come hither? Had a letter been written requiring me to send them, they would have been despatched on the instant." He thus replied with a great deal of loyalty; and forthwith ordered the camel, the sword, and the white horse, to be brought, and placed before the king, saying, "My lord, these three things you may forthwith carry away; the elephant Rana-Vira-Badra is however just now in a furious state, and suffers no man to come near him, but rushes upon them; when the temporary fit is past I will send him." The king hereupon took the three things offered, and sent them in charge of suitable persons to Trichinopoly; then addressing the Nayanar, he said, "Thou must not think that we (memu, excluding the person spoken to) cannot conduct the elephant; we understand how: let it be brought." The Nayanar replied, "My Lord, that elephant is exceedingly furious; if he see a white horse he will rush at it, let it go wheresoever it may. Now you are mounted on a white horse." But the king heeded not this caution: he said, "Never mind, bring that elephant chained before us, and then cast off the chain." The Nayanar assented to the command; and, not without great trouble, brought the elephant near to the king; when the restraint was taken off, and the elephant set at liberty; while those present retired to a distance: then the king, being mounted on a white horse, drew near to the elephant; and on the latter perceiving both the horse and him, it began the pursuit with great rage. As the horse, on which the king was mounted, was a very courageous animal, the king kept it in constant management; sometimes bringing its head to front the elephant; loosing the bridle and flying when pursued; and, when the elephant stopped, halting and bringing the horse near until pursued again: so that the pursuit, on the whole, was a hot one. In this way Raja-Ranga-Kistna-Mutthu-Virapa-Naicker, by a skilful device, succeeded in bringing the elephant within the fort of Trichinopoly; when, summoning a great number of elephant drivers, the elephant was mastered by stratagem, and bound with strong chains; after which a deep ditch was dug around it, for the greater security. The king then alighted from his horse; which, owing to its great exertions made in running, no sooner was relieved of its harnessing than it fell down and died. But all the people were rejoiced at the success of the enterprise. The king entered into his palace; and exhibiting to the Sirdars and all his friends the four valuable things which he had brought from Ariyulur, he manifested the greatest joy. He continued to rule with great courage and distinguished equity; and was very popular with all classes of the people.

Adventure at Tinnevelly.

The charge of the Tinnevelly country had been given to Tiru-Vengala-Nathaiya, with the customary banners; and, while managing this employ, his son was accustomed to go out every night in public procession round the town, seated in a lofty howdah, on the back of an elephant; clothed in rich perfumed dresses; covered with ornaments; with numerous lights, musicians, dancers, and the other usual accompaniments of such spectacles. The daily expense on this account was five hundred pagodas. While these things were going forward, two or three persons belonging to the principal town went to the presence of the king, and said, "The son of Tiru-Vengala-Nathaiya, the chief of Tinnevelly, daily makes an expenditure of the Sarcar money (revenue) to the extent of five hundred pagodas, and carries himself with more than royal state and splendor in his processions, seated in a howdah. He thus wastes the whole of the revenue." On their thus truly reporting the matter in the presence of Sri-Raja-Ranga-Kistna-Mutthu-Virapa-Naicker; the king on hearing the account said, "Well, this must be ascertained;" and giving directions for a certain number of troops to follow, he himself set out alone, mounted on a fleet horse; and taking the road leading to Tinnevelly, urged forward his horse at a speedy pace. Not far from Tinnevelly he saw an old Sudra woman, belonging to a village, carrying a kind of millet* in a pan, and butter-milk in a pot, to her son who was working in the rice fields; and, as he was somewhat faint and exhausted, he called to her saying, "Old woman! what is that which thou art carrying?" She replied that she was taking butter-milk and Kuru to her son. The king desired her to give him some of it, as he was a good deal exhausted; but she, addressing him, replied, "O Maha-Raja! † you are to look at like the son of a god; is this fit for you?" Thereupon the king took from her only a little of the butter-milk; and inquiring her own name, and that of the town where she dwelt, he wrote it down on paper, which he put in his pocket; then, patting his horse, proceeded. It must be noted, that before the king had set out, a notice of his coming had been sent forward, with instructions to have suitable halting places,* at every ten miles distance, got ready, and properly decorated. Such being the case, the king, on reaching Sattur, went to the place which the Amildar, (head man) of that taluk (district), had prepared and adorned; and, descending from his horse, which he tied to one of the posts of the pandal (booth), he then entered within-side, where he sat down. Thereupon the persons watching the place, not knowing that he was the king, said to him, "This place is specially prepared for our king, attending his coming; and it is needful for us to know on what right or pretence thou art come hither, taking the liberty to tie thy horse, and entering thyself to sit down." The king replied to them with gentleness, "As we are much fatigued, after resting here a very little while, we will again proceed." But they, not assenting, bid him contemptuously depart: besides which other language and commands,† of a peculiarly degrading character, were added by them. The king very mildly told them he would do as they ordered; just at which time the Sirdars and their troops, who, because the king was gone forward alone, had greatly expedited their march, galloped up; and seeing that the king had halted there, they all rendered him homage by prostration. The warders of the place discovering that this was the king, became terribly frightened, and ran away. The Taluk-Amildar, and other authorities of the place, now came to see the king; who told the Amildar to call the warders: on his representing that they were greatly afraid, and had been guilty of a great fault, through ignorance, beseeching for their forgiveness, the king said, "They were actuated by zeal and devotedness to ourselves; though at the time they did not know us: they are not culprits." On their being brought at his command, he gave them lands, and (mirasikal) rights of inheritance. He afterwards proceeded, together with the whole of the troops, to Tinnevely; and there took up his abode in the splendidly adorned palace. The chief, Tiru-Vengadu-Nathaiya, and others, had previously advanced to a considerable distance to meet and escort him: when arrived, he directed all disputed accounts to be brought to him and certified; and calling for the son of Tiru-Vengadu-Nathaiya, he said, "We hear that thou every night makest a procession through the town; now thou wilt see and do this night just in the same way as thou hast been accustomed to do." But the young man was so greatly alarmed, that his flesh trembled, and his mouth refused utterance. The king perceiving this state of mind, said, "We ask thee gaily, and not in anger: do not fear, but carry on thy procession this night also." Feeling the encouragement that was intended, the young man made his procession that night with something more than the ordinary splendor. The king ascended to the top of the house in order to see the spectacle; and, being much pleased, said to the Sirdars who were around him, "This is none other than our own man: while thus enjoying his health and acquiring fame, the world will only say he is our man; and that this ceremony is ours." Then calling for the son of Tiru-Vengadu-Nathaiya, he said to him, "We are well pleased with thee: continue therefore to do as thou hast been accustomed." He at the same time gave him a sannad (grant) for the daily sum of five hundred pagodas. While he was staying at this place he ordered the building of several agrarahas, temples, and choultries; and also visited the different temples there existing. The whole of the Palliya-carers (of that district) came to pay their respects, bringing much treasure and many valuable ornaments; when the king bestowed presents in return on each of them. The news being written and sent to Maliyalam, that the king was come to Tinnevely, the king of that country sent twelve elephants, some horses, and a quantity of treasure, and ornaments of price. The king thus remained some time at Tinnevely, and then proceeded to the Dindigul country: where he had agrarahas built; and he also directed a few agrarahas to be constructed in the Darapuram district.

* Kuru, sesamum orientale.

† The common people apply this title indiscriminately to persons of rank superior to themselves.

* Majil, the original is full of the like Dekhini or Hindustani terms; showing how much influence the language of Mahomedans had acquired over aboriginal dialects. The same remark in a lesser degree applies to nearly all our MSS. in the later portions of them.

† The original not being quite fit for verbal translation, the substance only is given.

In this manner the king (during his life) had many agrarahas, temples, and mandabams, built, and many reservoirs for water excavated, in all the provinces. He was also munificent in presents of money, cows, and similar things, to Bramins and others: being equally charitable and brave. • The king besides never married more than one wife. He thus ruled nine years, from Vegudaniya year down to Vijia year. Subsequently Raja-Ranga-Kistna-Mutthu-Virapa-Naicker obtained Vaicentha: this was in the Sagartam era 1629 (A. D. 1707).

At the time of Rangu-Kistna-Mutthu-Virapa-Naicker's decease his queen, named Muttamal, was in an advanced stage of pregnancy; but was steadfastly purposed to burn herself with the dead body of her husband. Mangamal, (the late king's mother,) together with others, addressing her, who, without being sorry at the death of her husband, was animated by her purpose, said to her, "What evil thing is this that thou art meditating; was it ever yet known in the world that one thus advanced in a state of pregnancy burnt herself with the body of her husband? If this be now done, it will be a most dreadful crime of infanticide." While in this manner they reasoned and remonstrated with her at great length, she gave no heed to them; but they finding her silent, though not persuaded, proceeded thus—"Well, if after thy delivery, thou still desirest it, then leave the child to the city, and do 'according to thy mind." On making this proposal, Muttamal said to them all, "If there be a certainty of my being allowed to enter the fire after I shall have brought to the birth, then let it now be so fixed;" and she accordingly prescribed an oath to this effect, which was taken. She next appointed a village in order to furnish the expenses for a daily anointing the images of Minatchi and Suntareswarer, at Madura, with ghee;* and the village called Villapuram, in a district to the south of Madura, was appropriated by a fixed endowment for this purpose. The revenue of that village is so employed down to the present time.

Thus Muttamal was somewhat pacified for a short time, when she gave birth to a son: and at the instant of birth a village in the Tinnevelly district was given to the Bramins as the queen's alma-house. They gave to the child the name of Vijia-

* A preparation from milk, forming a kind of butter, which being melted by heat, runs into an oil. It is used in large quantities for the homa, or sacrifice by fire; and daily in most temples (so called by us in courtesy) for anointing the images. The reader will however observe that a small portion of the offering is thus used; while by far the largest goes to better use in the household economy of the Bramins.* In all households it is a staple article; supplying, with rigid Hindus, the place of animal food.

Ranga-Choka-natha-Naicker; and bestowed much money in charitable donations. Muttamal observing four days after the birth of the child to have elapsed, thought within herself, "the people within the chamber have no intention of facilitating my entering the fire:" thereupon, putting away the child to a distance, she drank rose-water, without any one knowing it; and thus, bringing on a severe cold, she obtained Vaicontha Mangamal, on learning this circumstance, was greatly afflicted; but took the child Vijia-Ranga-Choka-natha-Naicker, and causing it to be nourished by the milk of nurses, she reared it up, and watched over it with much solicitude. When Vijia-Ranga-Choka-natha-Naicker was three months old he was crowned, and Man-gamal took upon herself all the cares of government, as regent for her grandson.

We have thus gone through a section of our leading Manuscript, which, owing to the fullness of illustration brought to bear on it from the Mackenzie MSS. and the valuable character of some of the details, may be possibly considered to be one of peculiar interest. Any remarks on the whole or particular parts, or noting of discrepancies in minor portions of the evidence though mutually sustained by an agreement in important results, will, we presume, be as obvious to readers as to ourselves; and need not, by consequence, be offered: especially if infringing on more valuable documentary matter, yet in reserve. We must however note a few things: and first, that the writer of the Manuscript (Appendix, p. 25, No 4.) gives a different view of the Tanjore catastrophe, by representing the Mahrattas as called in by the king of Trichinopoly to act against his neighbour;* and makes Vijia-Ragava (whom he terms the fourth sovereign after Svapa-Naicker) to have been slain by the Mahrattas, just in front of a pagoda, in the god of which the said Vijia-Ragava placed peculiar confidence. Our own opinion is, that the narrative in the Telugu manuscript heretofore given, as it is more minutely circumstantial, so it is apparently better founded, and more trust-worthy, as an authority. From some internal evidence we conclude most strongly, that the Manuscript. No. 4, referred to, is written by the same author as No. 3; that is by Vedanaigen, a Christian in the employ of Colonel Mackenzie; and though there are portions of both which are very valuable, yet we see reasons to receive either, as an authority, only with great precaution and qualification. Both however may possibly merit to be brought out into open day; and till that can be done, criticism would be either obscure or superfluous. The manner of the death of the generous, but somewhat rash, young king Vijia-Ranga-Kistna-Mutthu-Virapa-Naicker, is not given in the preceding authority; but in one of the Lettres-édifiantes, &c. * by a jesuit missionary, it is stated to have been caused by smallpox. The general accordance in this letter with the state of circumstances at that period, induces us to infer that the statement may be depended upon.

* Colonel Wilkes, (vol. 1, chap. 2.) on the contrary, makes the Mahrattas to be called in by the king of Tanjore to aid him against the king of Trichinopoly; stating the case in a general way: the probability is, that our Telugu MS. gives the more exact minutiae of the business.

The Carnataca Dynasty places the death of this prince in S.S. 1617 (A.D. 1695), and the manuscript just preceding in S.S. 1629 (A.D. 1707). The above-mentioned letter is dated in December 1700, and expressly mentions Mangamal as regent for her grandson Ranga-Mutthu-Virapa-Krisnapa-Naiken, as he is therein named. As we consider this last authority perfectly valid, we presume the Telugu manuscript must err in the date, especially as the Carnataca Dynasty subsequently grafts in with the first date given by Mr. Orme tolerably well. The question of chronology, and especially in the higher dates, is, as observed p. 122, yet left open for general comparison; and, if possible, final adjustment.

As regards the embassy from Tanjore seeking for aid to recover that capital from Alagiri-Naicker, it seems that the manuscript is correct, in stating the application to have been made at Visiapur (or Bijapur), the capital of one of the five principalities into which the preceding Bhamini empire became divided; and of which city extensive and magnificent remains exist down to the present day. According to Colonel Wilkes,† the sultan was too much occupied in guarding against the designs of the Mogul emperor of Delhi, to be at leisure to spare any portion of his own strength for so distant an enterprise; in consequence of which he wrote to Ekoji at Bangalore, recommending him to undertake the affair; which the latter, though independent of the sultan, thought proper to do, calculating thereby on forwarding his own interests, in the sequel not forgotten.

The affair of the Mogul's slipper is so singular, that we know not whether it be simple truth or rodomontade. This padshah clearly could not be that of Bijapur, whose power had now fallen before the ambitious but false policy of Aurungzebe; who, for the safety of his own empire, ought to have supported the sultans of Bijapur and Golconda, instead of reducing them to nothing, and thereby paving the road to extensive empire for the Mahrattas. The incident of the Firman seems to us referable to the pride of Aurungzebe, who styled the native princes merely zemindars, and aimed, with no reserve, at the entire subjugation of all the south of India. It is stated by Ferishta,‡ that Zulfecker-Khan, his general, committing matters nearer home to subordinate chiefs, made a long journey to Trichinopoly and Tanjore, and received contributions from the zemindars of those capitals. If this be the reference in question, then the Hindu and Mahomedan accounts altogether differ. No circumstantials are stated by Ferishta, and Mahomedan haut.eur might not tolerate an admission so humiliating as the account by the native historian; whose narrative, being minute and very circumstantial, seems likely to be nearest the truth. But what the exact truth may be, or whether this be the precise circumstance in question by both writers, we undertake not to determine.

* Du P. Martin au P. le Gobien.

† Vol. I., chap. 3, p. 78, 79.

‡ Scott's Translation, Vol. 2, p. 80.

Assisted by Colonel Wilkes' history of Mysore, we would gladly make the accounts adduced by him from native authorities agree with those contained in the preceding extracts, were it possible; but, exclusive of some discrepancies in dates and names, it would seem as if the native writers on either side, endued with the amor patriæ, adduced respectively only what makes for the credit of their own countries; mutually leaving to each other the opposite items. What we can do in this matter we will attempt. According to Colonel Wilkes, the Mysore king, Canty-Reva-Narsa-raj, in 1653, descended the Gujelhutti pass, and took Denaikancotta, Sattimungul, with other places, from Vencatadry-Naicker, brother of the raja of Madura, and brought home an immense booty: he also captured many taluks from Virapa-Naicker of Madura.* This apparently is the invasion which Chinna-Kaftira-Naicker is represented as having repelled; † but the date does not very well agree with the reign of Mutthu-Virapa-Naicker, which, according to the Carnataca Dynasty, was, from 1590 to 1622; though we cannot be sure of the precise accuracy of these dates. The Mysore annals say nothing of the repelling of the invasion. Further, Colonel Wilkes states that in 1667 Chuckapa-Naick, of Madura, had meditated the entire conquest of Mysore, though the expectation was entirely reversed, and Erroor (Irolu) and Darapoor (Tarapuram) remained as fixed conquests of Mysore; while contributions were levied on Trichinopoly. These things occurred in the reign of Dud-Deo-raj, which extended from 1659 to 1672. Now here Chuckapa (or Choka-natha) must be a mistake, for he did not begin to reign till after 1667. The facts agree pretty well with the narrative in the account of the Poligar Rangana-Naicker; and if so, the period is fixed to the reign of Tirumala-Naicker, whom one account makes to have reigned till 1664. The Mysore king is therein named Deva-Rayer-Udiyar, the same thing as Deo-raj with the title of Udiyar. The invasion of Mysore under Ramapaiyen is spoken of as founded on a preceding aggression, and ending very differently; though certainly the recall of Ramapaiyen, and other circumstances, cast a shade of doubt over the stated result. But just at the close of Tirumala-Naicker's reign the Mysoreans repeated the aggression. This perhaps is intended by contributions raised on Trichinopoly (country). It was seriously met; and, in this affair, the Telugu account confirms that in the narrative of the Poligar. Warlike operations between the two countries did not again occur until a period subsequent to the one to which we as yet are come; consequently more suitably the subject of future notice. So far the general results, though not strictly accordant, are not very greatly short of a tolerable approximation.

There is however a very different subject, and one not alluded to in any of the manuscripts, which may nevertheless demand in this place, at least, a passing notice. This is the establishment of the famous Roman Catholic Mission, at Madura and adjacent districts. The College de propaganda fide was founded at Rome in 1622, by Pope Gregory XV. To this a preparatory seminary for education of the missionaries was attached, at the instance of John Baptist Villes a Spanish nobleman, by Pope Urban VIII. Two other similar institutions arose in France, founded in 1663 and 1664.‡ Among a great number of missionaries sent out by these institutions, it fell to the lot of Robert de Nobili to found the mission at Madura. Aware of existing prejudices against Feringhies, that is Franks, or Europeans, he adopted the habit and manners of the Sanniassis; and gave himself out for a descendant from Brama; sustained by the evidence of a document asserting the superior antiquity of the Bramins of Rome, when compared with those of India; and not scrupling, it is said, to add the solemnity of an oath to support the assertion: which, indeed, as an accomplished Jesuit, he might, with the aid of some casuistry and mental equivocation or reservation, reconcile with conscience, or regard as absolvable, or even praiseworthy, the end sanctioning the means; but which, in the sense in which it would be taken by the natives, was an unjustifiable falsehood. As a man of family and of education, it is pity that the vile principles of the Jesuits should have spoiled him; and that, by following these principles, he should have detracted from the high praise that he would have deserved as the founder of this afterwards flourishing mission; in which charity would hope that good was done, notwithstanding the extremely corrupt form of religion introduced. De Nobili brought over twelve Bramins,* who were instrumental in inducing multitudes to hear and receive the doctrines which he taught. The period must have been in the reigns of Chokanatha-Naicker and Ranga-Kistnapa-Naicker, when the court was held at Trichinopoly. The mission languished after his death; but was revived by Portuguese and French Jesuits, who adhered to the austere system of the founder. Another mission was established by the Portuguese fathers in the district of Marava, the country of the Sethupathi; which became the most distinguished next to that of Madura. The Lettres edifiantes et curieuses, being copies of those transmitted to Europe by the French Jesuits, contain many very interesting details on these matters, and one narrative of the martyrdom of John De Brito of surpassing pathos. The narrative is too long for translation and insertion in this place, but its substance is the following.

* Vol. 1, chap. 2, p. 54.

† See p. 169.

‡ Mosheim, Cent. xvii. sec. 1.

After John De Brito had labored some time in Marava, with considerable success, he was compelled to retire by persecution. His confreres, to prevent his hazarding his life by returning, sent him to Portugal, on important affairs. He there acquired the esteem of the king, who entreated him to remain, offering him ample provision; but he preferred returning to his former people. When again among them, a relative of the ruling Sethupathi, was cured, as alleged, of a dangerous disorder by the simple reading of the New Testament at his bed-side. This person, named Tiria-deven, who was not without right to the chieftainship itself, desired to become a Christian, and besought P. De Brito to give him baptism, which the missionary declined to do, so long as he lived in polygamy. Tiria-deven, to show his sincerity, informed his five wives of his resolution to provide amply for their maintenance; but to retain only one. The youngest received this announcement with the most lively remonstrances; which, not being effectual, she carried her complaints to her uncle Ranganathan, the Sethupathi. The lady also engaged the head Bramin, with others of his tribe, in the same cause. As no instances could move Tiria-deven, the Sethupathi arrested De Brito, and had him brought in chains to Ramnad; numerous indignities being heaped on him by the way. In accordance with the notions of the period, the Sethupathi told his refractory relative that he would have his teacher killed by the power of mantras. And it seems that one of a powerful kind was tried; but the failure being attributed to some unnoticed error in the process, it was tried again without success: whereupon a still more malignant incantation was had recourse to; and, this also failing, the Sethupathi told the father that he would see if he was mantra-proof to bullets, actually giving orders to a band of soldiers for the purpose; but here Tiria-deven interposed, and, from a strong attachment to him in the minds of the soldiers, the Sethupathi perceived the symptoms of insurrection, which he thought proper to avoid, by sending the father to Udiya-deven, the Sethupathi's brother, at Uriyur, on the confines of the Tanjore country. This brute, who was lame, at first received the prisoner kindly, and bidding him employ his supposed miraculous powers to heal the lameness, promised, on that condition, to spare his prisoner's life. But the missionary told the patient, that he possessed no power of the sort, and that such a cure could only come from the Supreme. Enraged at the reply, as not perceiving or understanding its propriety, but attributing it to want of will, the Udiyan ordered the death of the prisoner. He was carried out at noon to a scaffold, erected for the purpose, in a plain, which was filled with spectators. He was tied to a post, and, with some previous indignities, his head was severed with a common hatchet; after which his hands and feet were cut off: and thus this land was watered with Christian blood; for a Christian he was, of no common order; of another spirit and conduct compared with Robert De Nobili. And, when we remember what kind of men were Pascal and Fenelon, though within the pale of a corrupt communion, we trust there will be found no one who would withhold a tribute of sympathy and admiration to the excellent spirit, faith, patience, and fortitude, of John De Brito.*—While we pay this tribute to an individual, we trust we shall not be mistaken as intending to approve the system which he labored, along with others, to introduce. On the contrary, we regret that exertions, so meritorious in themselves, were not made in support of a system of uncorrupted Christianity; and we add our conviction, borne out as it is by incontestable facts, that the later missionaries, at the least of the Roman Catholic persuasion, so far from rescuing idolaters from an inferior to a superior state, of piety, morality, and mental cultivation, actually bent their efforts to make Christianity palatable to depraved tastes, and welcome to ignoble minds: thereby doing all they could to lower a corrupt form of Christianity as much as possible to the level of paganism.†

* See Lettres édifiantes, &c. II. Recueil. Lettre du P. F. Lainez.

† Exclusive of the many testimonies to this truth borne by Protestant observers, the reader may note the following. Le pere Dola, writing from Pondichery to P. le Gobien, both of them Jesuits, says, " Dans la dernière solennité du jour l' Assomption de la sainte Vierge, vous eussiez été charmé de voir les Gentils memes s'unir à nous pour contribuer à l'envi à honorer la Reine du ciel." (Lettres, &c. I. Recueil.) "At the last celebration of the festival of the Assumption of the holy Virgin, you would have been delighted to have seen even the Pagans themselves eagerly come forward to join with us in honoring the Queen of Heaven."

No one will doubt this who has seen the procession of the same festival at Madras. The reader may compare this passage with Jer. xlv. 17—19. It is singular that the goddess Isis and the Virgin Mary, in process of time, should have the same title. The passage in question must not be regarded as the mistake of one man; for the book containing it is recommended by an influential Jesuit to all his company; has the approbation of the Sorbonne; the permission of the Jesuit Provincial in France; and is published with the royal privilege.

We are sorry indeed to have a note of observation, and a black mark indeed it is, to make against that Kilaven-Sethupathi, who, in the character simply of a soldier and loyal subject, has already appeared with advantage in these pages. But he it was who so superstitiously sought to destroy John De Brito by magic, and then savagely directed him to be butchered. We derive this conclusion from various sources. In our MSS. already adduced, he is merely termed Kilaven, which though in the southern pronunciation it signifies an old man, we had supposed might be used as a proper name. The Jesuit P. Lainez says, the name of the Marava prince was Runganadadeven, which reduced from French orthography becomes Ragu-natha-deven. A manuscript of the Mackenzie collection here comes in to clear away all difficulty. According to this authority, a defect of proper succession occurring, the authorities, and all qualified persons among the Maravas, assembled and elected Ragu-natha-deven, usually called Kilaven-Sethupathi, an event which took place in S.S. 1607, Christian era 1686;* and he ruled, it is added, thirty-seven years, which would place his death in S.S. 1644 (A.D. 1722). Now the Jesuit's letter is dated Madura, 10th February, 1693: and he says—"Vous savez qu' il y a environ six ans que Ranga-nada-deven prince de Maravas apres avoir fait souffrir de tres-cruels tourmens au pere Jean de Brito, lui defendit sous peine de la vie de demeurer," &c.† This prohibition was the cause of the preacher's first retreat. He came to Lisbon in 1687. He returned by way of Goa, not long afterwards; and labored undisturbed for fifteen months: he wrote a short letter from prison, dated 3rd February, 1693, and his death must have taken place the same day, or day following, since the letter of P. Lainez, narrating the whole of the occurrences, as past, is dated on the tenth of the same month. Thus it is clear, that Ranganada-deven and Kilaven-Sethupathi are names of one and the same person; that he commenced his reign as a persecutor; and, under the influence of additional motives, awfully completed his first threatenings. It is also tolerably clear, that Tiria-deven must have been the person who was prevented from succeeding to the chieftainship, by some informality of birth; a point in which the Maravas, from the peculiarity of their local customs, are very particular. The rescue by Kilaven-Sethupathi of Raja-Choka-natha-Naicker from prison, is dated by our Telugu MS. some time antecedent to A.D. 1698, and by the Carnataca Dynasty previous to A.D. 1688, either of which dates would find Kilaven invested with power as Sethupathi.—We apologize to our readers for this digression; but if it have no other use, it will, at least, serve to evince the useful bearing of the Mackenzie MSS. towards the clearing up of difficulties. We may also observe, in passing, with reference to the difficulty indicated page 181, that the MS. now last alluded to makes Sadaica-deven to have been succeeded by his son Kutten, and the latter by his younger brother the Dalavayi-Sethupathi; whose younger brother, Bettana-Naicker, went to Tirumala-Naicker, of Madura, and complained against his elder brother the Dalavayi, bringing on that war before adverted to; that the Dalavayi was imprisoned three years, during which his younger brother ruled; was then released and crowned S.S. 1561 (A.D. 1640), after which he reigned nine years, and then died. The date of Tirumala-Naicker's death is not specified in the Telugu manuscript; but in the Carnataca Dynasty it is fixed at S.S. 1584 (A.D. 1662). This Dalavayi-Sethupathi, we learn from the Carnataca Dynasty, had for his proper name Sadaica-deven, being the second of that name. He died without children, and three children of his sister, who were named Danukodi-dever, Ragu-natha-dever, and Athinarayana-dever, divided the principality between them; until, the two others dying, Ragu-natha-dever succeeded to the whole, and ruled alone for twenty-six years. Thus it appears, that he began to rule conjointly with his brothers in 1649; suppose the joint rule to have been till 1655, then twenty-six years will bring us to 1681. Therefore Ragu-natha-dever (the first of the name) must have been Sethupathi both for some time previous and also at the time of Tirumala-Naicker's death; and his decease took place at the time of the Mysore war, when the Madura army was commanded by Cumara-Muttula-Naicker. We can therefore explain, the expulsion of the Mysoreans, said by the Carnataca Dynasty (sec. 9) to have been effected by Regu-natha-dever, in no other way than by supposing that at first he had the real command, the nominal one being with the king's younger brother, Cumara-Muttula-Naicker; that when the expulsion of the Mysoreans from the Madura territory was accomplished, Regu-natha-dever returned to Tirumala-Naicker, and was honored as there stated, while the real command now entirely devolved on Cumara-Muttula-Naicker; who, after encamping in the low country for some time, and having settled the newly rescued country, as stated in the Telugu manuscript (see p. 182), then ascended above the Ghauts, and fought the battle as recorded: prosecuting the war for some time, until the decease of Tirumala-Naicker induced him to return. In this way all points almost entirely harmonize: and when indicating the difficulty by itself, and apart from this chain of inference, to an intelligent native, he at once suggested the same explanation of a nominal and real command, as consonant with native ideas and practice. We presume therefore on the whole that this may be accepted as the true explanation.

* According to the MS. which marks both eras.

† "You know that it is now about six years since that Ragu-natha-deven, after having imposed the most cruel sufferings on the father John de Brito, forbid him, on the penalty of his life, to remain," &c.

Foreseeing that we may not find a more suitable place, we also take the liberty (adverting to p. 144) to state, that there are in the Mackenzie collection some legendary and other notices concerning Mavalivanam or Mavaliveram, not as yet maturely examined, and which, in perfect justice to more pressing matter, cannot yet be fully investigated. Perhaps therefore we ought not to attempt any account of that place from personal observations merely, when many before have seen and described the place, without at the same time making the above materials available as the only means of giving either much of novelty or interest to the proposed statement. The matter by consequence will not be lost sight of, but will be postponed; and will not appear in the Appendix, at the end of this volume. We merely note, that in the Tamil poem entitled Rumapaiyen (see p. 179), Mavalivanam is distinctly alluded to as a kingdom then existing, at no very great distance from the vicinity of Tanjore.

CARNATACA DYNASTY, SEC. II.

Upon the principle of affording corroborative manuscript testimony, we here introduce a further extract translated from the Telugu MS. already largely adduced. Not the least curious portion is the glimpse it professes to afford of the nether and unseen world.

REGENCY OF MANGAMAL.

As Mangamal was of a good and charitable disposition, she constructed many village choultries throughout the country; and causing many Bramin children to be taught to read in them, she supplied them with food, clothing, and the like necessities. It however happened one day, that on a nurse preparing and giving to her betel-leaf, she, inadvertently took one portion with her left-hand; when immediately recollecting herself, she said, " We have taken betel with our left-hand; by so doing a great sin is committed;" and, after reflecting for a moment, she caused several well-read Bramins to be called, and inquired of them what was the appropriate penance to be performed. They replied, that if she made roads throughout the country, built choultries, and had reservoirs for water excavated, this crime would be expiated. Accordingly Mangamal had all the roads throughout the kingdom formed into avenues; and at the distance of every kadam (10 English miles) she had a choultry built; at the distance of every five nazhikais ($6\frac{2}{3}$ English miles) she had a water-reservoir and water-booth formed; and at the distance of every nazhikai ($1\frac{1}{3}$ English miles) she had a well formed with steps leading down to the water. This work being completed, she had a handsome choultry built at Casi (Benares).

While she was thus conducting the affairs of the kingdom, the people of Malayala ceased to send the usual revenue, or tribute-money. Hereupon she caused a great force to be collected, and sent the Dalavayi, Narasa-paiyer, at the head of the army into the Malayala country. He accordingly conducted the army thither; and conquered the people of Malayala after much fighting: he received from them the tribute-money, and also many valuable jewels, and many cannon; with the whole of which he returned to Trichinopoly. On all the guns brought from Malayala, the queen's Dalavayi, Narasa-paiyer, marked numbers in order, 1, 2, and so-forth; and these pieces of ordnance were afterwards mounted on the bastions of the forts of Trichinopoly and Madura.

As already narrated, Mangamal had many choultries, water-reservoirs, and agruharas constructed while she managed the affairs of the kingdom. The Mysore king now died; and, as having been the opposite of liberal or bountiful, he fell into Yama-puram in Narakam. About the same time a Vanniyan (banian, or merchant) died, and was carried by Yama's angels to Yama-puram; but Yama-Dherma-rajā, looking at him, said, "Why have you brought him? go take the person that dwells in the house next door to his, and carrying this person back, release him." While Yama's messengers were about to carry him back to the earth, the Mysore king, who was lying where he had fallen into Narakam, seeing that Vanniyan, thought, "That is one of our townsmen: is it not?" and calling him near, said, "Appa! (father!) while I was ruling over Mysore, I acquired a great deal of money, which I buried; and without doing any acts of charity, I quitted and came away. Now Mangamal, who rules the Pandiya-desam, has done a great many acts of beneficence. And on the statement that she is coming hither, they have been preparing a great many triumphal-arches of flowers, to do honor to her passage. Therefore on your return to earth, as you go to our town, proceed to my son, who rules the kingdom, and tell him that my money is in such a place: charge on him the urgent necessity of taking the whole of that money, and by performing with it a great many acts of charity, bid him procure to me its fruit, in purchasing my release from this place." The Vanniyan replied, "Very well." And all along that road they said, "Mungamal is coming;" and he saw the whole road adorned for the purpose. On returning to his town, and again entering into his body, every one near was astonished, saying, "The deceased Vanniyan is come to life again!" He forthwith proceeded to the palace, and said to the watchers at the gates, "I have important occasion to speak my communication to the king." They in consequence went and reported the request; and the king, giving orders for him to be brought in, asked of him, "What is the communication?" He replied, "Having proceeded to Yama's town, and returned, your father, who is fallen into Narakam, and lying there, recognizing me, called me and said, 'As I was not charitable, I have received this doom. It is reported that Mangamal, who rules the Pandiya-desam, is coming, and all the people of Yama-puram are preparing to render her honor; and since that lady has done many charities, they have even adorned the road by which she is to come. Therefore, in order to release me from this torment of hell, bid my son take the money which he will find in such a room, and perform with it many acts of charity.' Such a communication your father sent me to make to you. Therefore see that it be done." He besides related the whole of the before-mentioned circumstances. But the king, considering the tale to be a fabrication, treated it lightly; and to confirm his doubts, remarked, "Mangamal is still alive:" at which time however Mangamal died, and went to Swergam. The Mysore ambassador transmitted this intelligence; writing to the king "On such a day, at such an hour, Mangamal departed this life." On receiving and reading this letter, he thought within himself "The communication brought by the Vanniyan must be true;" and digging in the place pointed out, he took thence the treasure which was hidden, and performed with it a great many acts of charity.

Thus the period of Mangamal's government was eighteen years, coming down to S. S. 1647 (A. D. 1725).

There exists an oral tradition in the town of Madura, that Mangamal was imprisoned and starved to death: the reference being limited to this person by her being stated to be the same that planted the avenues near at hand. The building within the fort, now, or recently at least, used as the convict's jail, is said to have been the prison wherein she was confined, by her relatives, for some fault derogatory to the family honor; but particulars we have never learnt. It is only added, that her imprisonment and death were rendered of more than an ordinarily painful character by persons being employed to bring rice, mingled with salt, close to the barred windows of her prison; and when she voraciously flew at the iron-bars, attempting to get at the food, then it was withdrawn. Whether such a fiend-like refinement in cruelty were ever practised, or the whole tale be true or otherwise, we have no means of knowing, beyond the mere tradition itself. The story is alluded to in no MS. yet seen by us; unless it may be supposed that the alleged fault is allegorized, in the native manner, by the taking of betel with the left-hand. Such a circumstance, (literally received) amidst the vast volume of native superstitions, is looked upon as demanding some trifling expiation; and if it be the real ground of Mangamal's benevolent works, then it may be presumed she thought her inadvertency should be expiated like a queen and regent of a kingdom. There must be either some exaggeration as to the number of choultries built and wells or water-reservoirs excavated, or else all-destroying time must since have altered the aspect of things. Her avenues however remain, more or less complete. A peculiarly fine one, still called Mangamal's avenue, formed by the loftiest banian trees, interlaced over-head so as to form a complete canopy, exists at a little distance to the N. E. of the fort. Other avenues branch off on the roads leading to Ramnad, Palamcottah, Dindigul, and Trichinopoly: the three first of which we have not had opportunity of following out to any considerable distance; but that one on the road toward Trichinopoly we have traced, with intermediate breaks, to some short distance beyond Coilpettah, forty-five miles from Madura, and nearly the same distance from Trichinopoly. The extract from the Telugu MS. just adduced, explains the exaggeration of the Carnataca Dynasty when speaking of avenues planted from Casi to Ramisaram and Cape Comorin; inasmuch as a choultry it appears was built at Casi, or Benares; and, therefore, that the chain of her meritorious works would stretch from Casi to Ganja-Cumari, no orthodox Hindu could by possibility doubt.

In a letter from Pere Martin to Pere le Gobien, already adverted to, besides much miscellaneous information as to the mission and persecution of Roman Catholic priests, or private Christians, a narrative is given of an embassy, voluntarily undertaken by father Bouchet, to Mangamal, who was then governing for her son. The Dularayi is spoken of as possessing great fame and influence; his personal name is not stated, though evidently the same person with the Dularayi Narasa-paiyer. A curious trait of his character is mentioned in his having turned some skilful bombardiers out of the service on discovering that they were Franquis, or Europeans. To this officer the priest had first to make his court, and experienced an unexpected, and singularly gracious, reception. The presents which he carried for Mangamal were a two-feet terrestrial globe, a nine-inch glass globe, magnifying and burning glasses, bracelets, looking-glasses, &c., which the Dularayi himself took in and made acceptable to her. The most favorable reply is stated to have been given; and the father was paraded round the streets of the town, by order, in a royal palanquin of state; to the no small joy of the poor semi-Christians, and the defeat of the malignant purposes of their opposers. It is an ex parte statement; yet probably does not depart much from the truth; though there are some other portions of the letter in question which apparently require to be received with some qualification.

Our readers may have paused for a moment over the singular statement of the return of the Mysore merchant from the inferior world. There is in it something that looks a little like priestcraft, to which however it will be presently seen the writer of the MS. could not have been entirely favorable: there is at the same time a valuable exposition of native ideas on this solemn subject. It differs from the Christian revelation only in the implied possibility of escape from that low and last remove; and in the means available for such escape: both points of difference being capital. It differs from the Roman Catholic doctrine of purgatory only as to place; Narakam being the lowest hell of the Hindus, agreeing substantially with Gehenna or Tartarus in the original of the New Testament; while Pathalam, the first of the seven descents, more strictly corresponds with the Hades of the Greek text. The doctrine of purgatory, generally considered, is substantially a Hindu dogma; and was known in these regions long before corrupt Christians thought of turning it to the secular advantages of a sordid, and progressively self-corrupting, hierarchy. It is implied in the funeral ceremonies after death, also imitated by Roman Catholics under the same reference. The universalist notion of purifying pains and ultimate deliverance is, and has been immemorially, a Hindu article of credence. The doctrine is expressly taught in the Mahabharat, a poem certainly of ancient date, towards the close of which the five Pandavas are represented as wearied of life under the insupportable loss of all their friends; and going on a melancholy pilgrimage, accompanied by Dropidi, and followed by a mysterious dog (into which the soul of an ancestor it seems had transmigrated); walking onward continually, with no other design than that of meeting death, until one after the other falls and dies, in the inverse ratio of their ages; and, when the whole have departed, the poet follows them to the unseen world, where they are represented as observing several of their departed friends in abodes of happiness, but were told that they must not themselves proceed thither at first; and are conducted to a remote and darker region, where they have to rub off, or wear away, the stains contracted in their unnatural warfare on earth with friends and relatives, and are assured that afterwards they shall rejoin all that were ever dear to them in the brighter abodes of a superior world.

One word more, we trust, may be tolerated. In the tale of the merchant we find, at all events, a practical commentary on two apothegms of the wisest of men: one of these is, "There is a sore evil which I have seen under the sun, namely, riches kept for the owners thereof to their hurt;"* and the other is, "He that by usury and unjust gain increaseth his substance, he shall gather it for him that will pity the poor."† The Mysore king, and his son, are the exemplification. The satire conveyed in the tale was not without a precise personal reference. Colonel Wilkes tells us of a Mysore king, who ruled about the same time as that indicated, whose money was evidently his god. He was indeed as devout as Vijja-Ragava, of Tanjore, in making it his first morning's duty to pay homage to Vishnu, carefully putting the Vanashnava mark on his forehead; but whose next daily task, possibly not entirely a heartless one, was to deposit forthwith two bags, each containing one thousand gold canteria-pons, or star-pagodas, in his treasury: after which he took his breakfast; and if, through any impediment or want of the Piratanis due attention, the bags were not ready, on coming from his morning prayers, then he took no breakfast till they were forthcoming. Such a superstitiously sordid soul might indeed be a fit companion in Narakam, or elsewhere, for the famous Anne de Montmorency, connetable, or generalissimo, of France, who was every morning uncommonly precise in reciting his aves and paters, but had a sad knack of interrupting them every now and then with—"Go hang me such a one—cut those rascals in pieces—set fire to such a village," and the like, "without much impeding his paters; and thinking," says his historian, "that he would have committed a great error if he had put them off to another hour, so exactly was he conscientious."‡ Our readers may, if they please, adjust the comparative merits or demerits of the superstitious man of money, and the superstitious man of blood. One advantage the king of Mysore possessed in being reputed by his people to be lord of nine crores, or ninety millions, of pagodas; and that, as the world goes, would be commonly thought no ordinary advantage. However we must grant, with the writer of the manuscript, that the scene often changes in the other world. Our Christian readers may possibly have remarked a certain degree of coincidence between the merchant's tale, and the affecting and impressive parable of the rich man and Lazarus in the gospel. The rich man in that case, however, thought not of escape, nor is the slightest indication favorable to the doctrine of purgatory, or purifying pains, therein afforded: he was anxious only to warn his relatives, that they might escape the like doom, and the request was not granted. Some divines, or biblical critics, have made extraordinary, and, as to us it appears, impertinent exertions to settle the question whether this should be regarded as a real narrative, or merely as a parable. Suffice it that he, who adduced the statement, knew the invisible world better than any living and merely human being: and could we draw aside the veil which no breathing-mortal has yet lifted, there would, in all probability, appear to be no lack of counterparts to the narrative, or parable; or instances even going to prove that the Mysore merchant's tale was not wholly a fable. The best thing which we can do, or any one of us whom it may immediately or remotely concern, is to see to it, if possible, that we do not add to the exemplifications an additional number.

* Eccle. v. 13.

† Pro. xxviii. 8.

‡ Brantome, tome. 7.

The writer of the Telugu manuscript, after having afforded a salutary warning against the abuse of riches, seems afterwards desirous of inculcating discretion in the application of benevolence, by seeing that it be bestowed on worthy and suitable subjects; while he at the same time affords a testimony, being himself a Hindu, which must be of unsuspicious character, as to the trickery of Bramins, and the arcana of idolatry. We give what is referred to by advancing to

THE REIGN OF VIJIA-RANGA-CHOKA-NATHA-NAICKER.

Subsequently to the aforesaid eighteen years of Mangamal's regency, the sovereign power devolved on the son of Ranga-Kistna-Mutthu-Virapa-Naicker, who was named Raja-Vijia-Ranga-Choka-natha-Naicker. He was a very munificent prince; he built many agharas and temples, had water-reservoirs formed, and continued, in this way, to rule the kingdom. Every two years he was accustomed to set out, accompanied by all his people, to visit and pay homage to the gods at Srirangam, Sambukesvaram, Madura, Tinnevely, Alavar, Tennavalli, and Sri-Vaicontham. He expended much money at these places, and had the offerings and anointings with ghee much increased. While paying homage to the (so-called) gods in these places, which were possessed of a great many valuable ornaments, and endowed with many villages, he observed that the images were not clothed in silk and ornamented with jewels, but simply wrapped round with a plain white cloth, and with only some ten or twenty small lamps burning.* He in consequence inquired of the Pujari

* These lamps are usually small earthen patty-pans, with a slender proportion of oil, and one small wick; so that ten or twenty, in the larger and more gloomy temples, would barely suffice to make darkness visible.

Bramins what was the reason that lamps were not properly lighted in the shrine of the god? and why the god was not robed with jewels and becoming vestments? They replied, "O sovereign ruler! the god possesses neither jewels nor village-lands." Thereupon, without taking the pains to investigate these things, he caused many vestments to be given to the god, and from twenty to thirty thousand Madais, amounting to ten or fifteen thousand star-pagodas; and, leaving instructions to have the usual ceremonies and anointing with ghee properly attended to, he would then pass on to all the other places, and there make the like donations; after which he would return again to Trichinopoly. Again at the end of two years he would proceed on his tour to pay homage to the aforesaid shrines, while the managers of the different places would act over again the like proceedings. On such occurrences the king, Vijia-Ranga-Choka-Natha-Naicker, gave jewels and vestments to a larger extent than before, without inquiring what had become of the former donations. And when his men of business who were near him represented—"Sovereign lord! presents were before made to these shrines, yet we see nothing of those jewels and other things; ought not some inquiry to be made into these matters?" the king would reply, "Harihari! are things once given to the divinity again to be inquired after? If a garment be given to a man, and it be afterwards said "We gave it," the merit of the act be thereby nullified; then, after making any present to the gods, if it be said, "We gave it," this can be none other than a sordid sin." And he continued in all his pilgrimages to bestow vestments, money, and lands, as before-mentioned.

During these proceedings his Dalavayi, named Vengata-Ragavacharya, had managed to accumulate ready-money to the extent of a lac of pagodas,* besides valuable jewels. As he was now become old, he thought it prudent to set apart, from his accumulated riches, as much as might be suitable for himself and his children; and, after making this reserve, then to present the remainder to the king. Accordingly Raja-Vijia-Ranga-Choka-Natha-Naicker's generalissimo, Vengata-Ragavacharya, sent a message (to the king), to this effect—"As I am now become very old, if I could be permitted to see the king only once, my mind would be eased and satisfied;" which message was daily and urgently repeated; and, in the expectation that the king would come, a throne was fixed in the house, ornamented with jewels. While they were indulging this expectation, it pleased the king so to condescend; and he came to the house of the Dalavayi, Vengata-Ragavacharya. He was made to be seated on the throne, and a great many complimentary honors were tendered to him. One thousand trays, made of ratan cane, tied together with leather thongs, had been prepared; on three hundred of which were placed pagodas, mohurs, rupees; and fanams, each kind of money distinct; on three hundred other trays were placed many golden ornaments, studded with gems; and on the remaining four hundred trays were many most costly sacred dresses: the whole of these were brought and placed before the king; when the Dalavayi said, that having set apart so much of his accumulations for himself and his family, the remainder of his riches belonged to the king; and, on a written document to this effect being about to be delivered, the king perceiving it exclaimed, "Harihari! is it to convey to me this sin? I came to thy house in consequence of thy earnest striving to effect it; whether it be only to look on these valuables pertaining to a Bramin, or to take them away, is in either case a great sin. And dost thou talk to me of such a thing?" He spoke thus with great grief; and then, looking hard at the Dalavayi, he added, "Under an apprehension of what might happen after thy time, and thinking me capable of the appropriation of sacred property, thou hast done this same business: thou hast no occasion to fear;" saying so, he returned to him the whole; and besides, sending to the palace for thirty thousand pagodas, he gave these to him as a royal present, saying, "Set aside as much of this as thou requirest, and with the rest of the money perform acts of munificence and charity." On leaving this command he forthwith returned to the palace, whence he distributed many gifts of cows, elephants, and boiled rice, in order to expiate the sin of having looked on a Bramin's property.

* Equal at that time to about £.40,000.

He thus ruled the kingdom with exemplary equity. Raja-Vijia-Ranga-Chokunatha-Naicker reigned twenty-two years; and then obtained Vaicontha. This was S.S. 1669 (A.D. 1747).

It will be tolerably evident to the reader, that this Bramin, who held the office of Dalavayi in this reign, must have had both a knowledge of his master's foible, and also a secret understanding with the Pujari Bramins of the different temples mentioned, so as to have shared at least with them and their gods in the presents so liberally bestowed by this generous but superstitious prince. A sort of conjecture involuntarily arises, that the king must have had something on his conscience which he sought to alleviate by such profuse offerings to shrines and temples; the same being, according to native ideas, a propitiation for any, even the most deadly, sin. As a veil hangs over the fate of Mangamal, which the native historians do not lift, we shall not presume to pry beyond it; but will give this swearing superstitious prince all the credit due to generosity, which has in it always that which is attractive: though we do not admire the precise mode of its display. In the Appendix G the reader will find an anecdote recorded of the behaviour of this prince to some ambassadors from Ceylon, further elucidating his aversion to any other caste or religion than his own. We must now pass on to more rapidly shifting, and more stormy, scenes. The era of dotage had possibly lasted long enough; and Divine Providence was now about to permit one of those revolutions, which however disastrous at the time, and committed not unfrequently to the vilest instruments, who in the end bring on their own destruction, do yet settle down by degrees into new and better times. We have seen that even a spurious form of Christianity could not set its foot on the soil under heathen princes without disguise, nor without suffering persecution. At length it is hoped, after a long and very gradual transition, the dawning light of uncorrupted Christianity has beamed on that once utterly benighted land. Crescat in sempiternum.

SUPPLEMENTARY MANUSCRIPT, SEC. 10.—CARNATAKA DYNASTY, SEC. 12, 13.

In illustrating the commencement of those events which gradually led to the entire subversion of the northern dynasty of kings at Madura, we shall recur in the first instance to the Telugu manuscript already largely quoted.

THE MAHOMEDAN INTERVENTION.

After the decease of Raja-Vijia-Ranga-Choka-natha-Naicker, as he left no child, Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker, who had been the second in power, was the suitable person to succeed to the crown. His son, named Vijia-Cumara-Mutthu-Tirumali-Naicker, was adopted and installed, by being anointed when four years old by Minatchi-Ammal, the crowned queen of Vijia-Ranga-Choka-natha-Naicker. She also discharged the customary funeral rites for the deceased king; and managed the affairs of government. While doing so, the Subah of Arcot, named Sabutalli-Kan (Subder-ali Khan), came to Trichinopoly; and, having left orders to bring thirty lacs of rupees, he returned to Arcot. Afterwards, Minatchi-Ammal being a woman and the prince only a child, Chunda Saheb managed so as to frighten them, and bidding them bring a crore of rupees. (one hundred lacs, or upwards of one million sterling,) he took this sum from them; and then swore on the Koran, "I will not for the future use any treachery towards you." After receiving the money, he came into the fort; and, on its being discovered that he was devising the means of acting treacherously, Minatchi, the queen, sent Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker, and the installed prince, to Madura; while Minatchi herself remained at Trichinopoly. As soon as Chunda Saheb received intelligence that Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker and the crowned prince had departed outside, he knew that his meditated design could not now succeed; and, as the prince was a child, and Minatchi-Ammal a woman, he said, "I will certainly cause the kingdom to be made over to you, without any competition; and that by the aid of some foreign king, or other available persons:" thereupon taking with him two thousand cavalry, and some other troops, he left and went to Arcot. Subsequently Minatchi-Ammal appointed Kalinithi-Govinda-paiyer her manager for collecting revenue; and she retained for her own expenses and charities the sums accruing from both banks of the Cauvery connected with Trichinopoly, and from Caruvur (Caroor) as far as Tarapuram (Dharoor); while, by the consent of Minatchi-Ammal, Madura Tinnevely, Dindigul, and other provinces, with the Palliyams attached to them, as also Ramnad, Sivagangui, and the other Zemindaries, were under the controul of Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker, and of Mutthu-Vengaiyer, appointed by him to the united offices of Dalakarten and Piratani. The Maha-raja, the crowned prince, Raja-Vijia-Cumara-Mutthu-Tirumali-Naicker, being but a youth, was retained at Madura; and Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker superintended all the government affairs. In this way both persons ruled the kingdom from Virothikirathu year down to Racshasa year (being five years).

BATTLE OF AMMAIYA PALLIYAM.

Such was the state of affairs, when Chunda Saheb again came to Trichinopoly, and conducting himself treacherously, he placed guards of his own people all around the palace of Minatchi-Ammal, and considered the fort to belong to him; while he appointed his own men to manage the affairs of the Trichinopoly country. He subsequently set out with the intention of going against Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker, at Madura; and, having assembled a great force, he beat the troops which were stationed in the Dindigul district, and took possession of that province; and then, proceeding to fight against Madura, he had approached near to Ammaiya palliam, when Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker ordered his Dalavayi, Mutthu-Vengaiyer, and Vengada-Kistnapa-Naicker, the son of Minatchi-Naicker, accompanied by two thousand cavalry, as also by Appa-Naicker, Bodi-Naicker, Yersenika-Naicker, Yerzumadei-Naicker, and other Palliya-carers, to go and fight with Chunda Saheb's army. Accordingly, when Mutthu-Vengaiyer and Vengada-Kistnapa-Naicker had assaulted, and fought for some time with, the enemy's army, the forces of both of them became much weakened, and Vengada-Kistnapa-Naicker fell, covered with eighteen wounds. The Dalavayi, Mutthu-Vengaiyer, being seated in a howdah, took his bow in hand, and discharged arrows on the foes all around, scattering thirty bands, and allowing no one to approach near him; and, by means of the driver causing the howdah-bearing elephant to turn on every side like a whirlwind, he slew a great many soldiers, and wounded many more. At the same time the enemy, by means of arrows and musket-bullets, pierced the body of Mutthu-Vengaiyer like a sieve, covering it with wounds. He nevertheless relaxed not, but fought courageously, like Abimanyan when battling with the forces of Duryodhen, as narrated in the Baratham. He did not even pause to draw out the arrows that had struck him, until his own stock of arrows being expended, he drew out those which were in his body, and discharging these on the foes, slew several of them. But at length Mutthu-Vengaiyer, from the number of his wounds, became exhausted, and expired. His troops also were cut in pieces; yet a few of them, although wounded, took up the body of Vengada-Kistnapa-Naicker and brought it to Madura.

Soon afterwards Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker, having heard that Chunda-Saheb was advancing towards Madura, and being himself totally destitute of forces to resist him, quitted Madura; taking with him the young prince and the royal appurtenances, and went to Siva-gangai. On his approach towards this place Sasivan-deven and the Sethupathi, Katta-deven, came forth to meet him, bringing golden and silver flowers, which they scattered at his feet; and, doing him homage, escorted him, giving up to him afterwards as many villages as were needful, and supplying him with all desired expenses, and every thing else without deficiency.

Meantime Chunda-Saheb captured Madura, and secured the whole country to himself. Minatchi-Ammal, at Trichinopoly, having received intelligence of all these things, observed, “Chunda-Saheb, after having sworn that he would not act treacherously, and receiving from me a crore of rupees, nevertheless has, traitor-like, conquered the kingdom for himself. The next thing which he will do is to kill me. Better to die by my own hand than by his.” In consequence of this conclusion she swallowed poison, and obtained (says the manuscript) divine bliss.

In comparing the preceding translated extract with the sections referred to of the Carnataca Dynasty, the reader will probably perceive, that the latter is much the more perspicuous of the two as to the cause of the intervention of the Mahomedans. As Vijia-Ranga-Choku-natha-Naicker died childless, public affairs certainly were left in a dilemma, by there being no regular heir to the throne. He ought to have foreseen this contingency, and to have provided against it, by adopting his nephew as his successor, and naming a regent, either in the person of his queen Minatchi-Ammal, or of his brother Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker, whereby disputes would have been avoided, and an appeal to foreign interference rendered quite unnecessary. There is, however, sometimes a sort of judicial infatuation resting on individuals, whereby they perceive not their clearest line of duty; and we are taught by the result in this case, that the sand in the hour-glass of the northern dynasty was run out. Even after the king's death, childless, the succession was sufficiently clear for the younger brother had before succeeded to the throne, on the demise of the elder brother without offspring. The case of the illustrious Tirumali-Naicker himself was an adequate precedent. Hence much blame seems to have rested with the dowager queen Minatchi-Ammal, who probably was urged on by her brother Vencati-Perumal-Naicker; being also herself perhaps ambitious of imitating the conduct and participating in the fame of Mungamal, though under clearly different circumstances. The award, as it is recorded, of Sabdar-ali-Khan was therefore perfectly correct and judicious; if not entirely disinterested. But it was wrong to give the Mahomedans any acquaintance with the internal affairs of the state. Nevertheless the queen and her brother persisted, as we have seen, until they had utterly ruined the kingdom. Of the two or three manuscript authorities adduced, the Carnataca Dynasty is also the most clear and intelligible as to the nature of the proceeding whereby the queen and her brother entirely committed themselves to the intrigue and treachery of Chunda-Saheb.

We are now come down to the period where Mr. Orme's history of the Carnatic commences; at least in its reference to aboriginal native powers. It may be well perhaps to enable the reader at one view to compare his statement of this revolution with the accounts of the native historians.

"The Carnatic is one of the most considerable Nabobships dependant on the Soubah of the Decan: from its capital it is likewise named the province of Arcot; but its present limits are greatly inferior to those which bounded the ancient Carnatic before it was conquered by the Great Mogul; for we do not find that the Nabobs of Arcot have ever extended their authority beyond the river Gondegama to the north, the great chain of mountains to the west, and the borders of the kingdoms of Tritchanopoly, Tanjore, and Mysore to the south. The sea bounds it to the east. It was not before the beginning of the present century that this country was entirely reduced by the Moors.

"Sadatulla, a regular and acknowledged Nabob of the Carnatic, having no issue, adopted the two sons of his brother; appointing the elder, Doast-ally, to succeed in the Nabobship; and conferring on the younger, Boker-ally, the government of Velore; he likewise directed that Gulam Hassain, the nephew of his favorite wife, should be Duan or prime minister to his successor. Having reigned from the year 1710 to 1732, he died much regretted by his subjects.

"The dispositions he had made were fulfilled without opposition or difficulty; but Nizam-al-muluck, the Soubah of the southern provinces, beheld the accession of Doast-ally with aversion, since it took effect without that deference to his authority which he was determined to establish throughout all the governments under his jurisdiction. The jealousy of this powerful superior prevented Doast-ally from procuring a regular confirmation from Delhi: it is said that he only obtained some letters of approbation from the vizir, without the proper forms of an authentic commission.

"Doast-ally had two sons, of whom the eldest, Subder-ally, was arrived at man's estate when his father succeeded to the Nabobship: he had likewise several daughters, one of whom he had at that time given in marriage to his nephew Mortiz-ally, son of Boker-ally; and another to a more distant relation named Chunda-Saheb. This lord gave his own daughter by a former wife in marriage to Gulam Hassein, and availing himself of the incapacity of his son-in-law, obtained the Nabob's permission to administer the office of Duan in his stead.

"The kingdoms of Tritchanopoly and Tanjore, although tributary to the Great Mogul, were each of them governed by its own prince or Raja, and the care of levying the tributes

"of these countries was intrusted to the Nabobs of Arcot, who were sometimes obliged to send an army to facilitate the collection of them. The death of the king of Tritchanopoly in 1736, was followed by disputes between the queen and a prince of the royal blood, which produced a confusion in the government sufficient to give the Nabob of Arcot hopes of subjecting the kingdom to his authority. He therefore determined to send an army under the command of his son Subder-ally and the Duan Chunda-Saheb to seize any opportunity which might offer of getting possession of the city of Tritchanopoly; but to prevent suspicions, the collection of the tribute was given out as the only intention of the expedition, and the army was ordered to move leisurely down to the sea-coast, before they proceeded to the south: accordingly they came to Madras, where they remained some days, and then went to Pondicherry, where they staid a longer time; during which, Chunda-Saheb laid the first foundation of his connexions with the French government in that city: from hence they marched to Tritchanopoly.

"By intrigues, of which we have not the details, Chunda-Saheb prevailed on the queen to admit him with a body of troops into the city, having first taken an oath on the Koran, that he would act in nothing to her detriment: the people of the country say that she fell in love with him; if so, she was ill requited, for he soon after seduced the garrison, seized the city, and confined her to a prison, where she died of grief. The submission of the rest of the kingdom soon followed that of the capital; after which, Subder-ally leaving Chunda-Saheb to govern these new acquisitions, returned to his father at Arcot, who appointed Meerassud, the preceptor of Subder-ally, to succeed Chunda-Saheb in the office* of Duan."

The reader will be readily able to mark the agreements and the differences in these accounts. As regards the oath of Chunda-Saheb on the Koran, wherein they both agree, Colonel Wilkes† informs us, that the so-called Koran was nothing more than a brick, covered over with gold cloth, in the Mahomedan fashion; so as externally to resemble that book: clearly proving, if true, that what followed was the result of premeditated design, and not suggested afterwards, and by degrees by reason of fortuitous and unforeseen circumstances. That Minatchi-Ammal poisoned herself is stated by the Telugu Manuscript alone: yet the nature of the case makes the occurrence very probable.

The victory at Ammaiya-palliyam, and rapid acquisition of the Madura country by Chunda-Saheb were greatly facilitated to him by the previous incursions of the Mysore armies. Colonel Wilkes informs us that Trichinopoly was besieged by the Mysore army, Chick-deo-raj, then being king of Mysore; but that the siege was razed by reason of the Mahrattas having attacked the capital of Mysore. This siege of Trichinopoly must have been during the reign of Ranga-Kistna-Mutthu-Virapa-Naicker; but no mention of it occurs in our manuscripts. It is however certain that the two states of Madura and Mysore were mutually hostile, from the reign of the famous Tirumala-Naicker down to the extinction of the Madura government. Colonel Wilkes places the death of the king of Trichinopoly, meaning Viji-Ranga-Choka-natha-Naicker, in 1752, in which he agrees with the Carnataca Dynasty. Mr. Orme is five years later; but it is probable that his date includes the five years of doubtful disputation between the two competitors for the sovereign power. During this five years, and perhaps for some time lower down, some account of the proceedings of the Mysore power is preserved in the Memoir of the house of Appiya-Naicker of Cannivadi, from which extracts have been before given, and another one is now added. It shows that the fine province of Dindigul had fallen into the hands of the Mysore king, after some resistance, specially from this Poligar; and is further remarkable as bringing Hyder-ali on the scene, at an early period of his career, acting even then in perfect conformity to the Mahomedan character for war, deceit, and treachery; and yielding his master an indication of future character and conduct, which he might have read to advantage, had not his eyes been sealed, both to the moral of this lesson, and also to that afforded by Rustum-Khan at Trichinopoly, with the history of which affair the Mysore king could not well have been unacquainted.

MEMOIR OF NARSASINGA-NAICKER, AND THE MYSORE SUBJUGATION OF THE DINDIGUL PROVINCE.

Chinna-Kattira-Naicker left two sons, who were named Narasinga-Naicker and Bettana-Naicker. After the decease of Chinna-Kattira-Naicker, his eldest son, Narasinga-Naicker, succeeded him in the principality. At that time the reigning prince at the Madura capital was Vijia-Cumara-Mutthu-Tirumali-Naicker, who summoned the seventy-two Palliya-Carers, including the specially adopted Narasinga-Appaiya-Naicker; and, sanctioning the tenures of their respective lands as heretofore customary, said, "Whenever the people of the palace may summon you, you will come and render the service which may be prescribed to you, meantime live in health;" and, adding presents, he dismissed them. Some time after they had retired to their respective towns, as the Mysoreans had overrun the whole country, the Dalavayi, Mutthu-Svami, and Govindaiyar,* the son of Samapaiyer, came; and, halting at Caruvattu-potal, they called Narasinga-Naicker of Cannivadi and said to him, "Is it not because the capital is taken that the Mysoreans have come and conquered the country? But now, forasmuch as Vijia-Cumara-Mutthu-Tirumali-

* Manager of Minatchi-Ammal.

Naicker is come to the crown, as our master, he has given to us the offices of Dalakarten and Piratani, and directed us to go and fight against the Mysore capital; and also to reduce the country to proper order. As you are the chief of the eighteen Dindigul Poligars, and an adopted child of the state, and as it is now needful to go and fight against the Mysoreans, both you and your people must accompany us." He replied, "Let it be even as you say."

About the same time the Mysoreans came from the capital, with twelve thousand cavalry, and twenty thousand Carnataka people, and encamped in the Dindigul province. Thereupon the Dalavayi Mutthu-Samaiyen said to Narasinga-Naicker, "Since the enemy's army is come into Dindigul, do you go and see all made secure in your own town, and then carefully guard the roads so as to prevent the Dindigul army from passing on this side." Ramanaiyer having received intelligence that he was come to his town, remarked, "This Narasinga-Naicker is one combined with the (Madura) lord's general Mutthu-Svami, is it not so?" and then moved his army from Dindigul, and encamped against Cannivadi. Having done so, he sent a challenge to Narasinga-Naicker, calling on him to come out and fight. The latter took care to secure the encampments and forts; and then, after some fighting, the army of Ravanaieren was worsted and driven away. It retreated to Mangkarei; and having there rallied and re-assembled the troops, (the commander) sent a message to Narasinga-Naicker, to this purport—"If you are willing to send one of your people, we will speak (and settle matters) with him; but unless you do so, we shall return again and fight with you." Narasinga-Naicker thereupon, reflecting on the best mode of proceeding, and what was befitting the time, sent confidential men of business, who discussed with Ramanaiyer all needful matters, and then returned. Ravanaieren then withdrew his troops, and proceeded with them to Dindigul.

They then directed their army against Mutthu-Svami-Ayyer, and encamped in Karuvattu-Pottal; when, after much fighting between Mutthu-Svami-Ayyer and Ramanaiyer, the latter conquered Mutthu-Svami-Ayyer, and destroyed his army, and then returned to Dindigul. Soon afterwards Ramanaiyer put his troops in motion, and again proceeding to Cannivadi, fought against Narasinga-Naicker. But

— அப்படியிருக்கிறநாணயில ஆண்பிள்ளைகள் இரண்டு பேர்பிள்ளைகளநர்சிங்க நாயக்கொன்றும்பெததணநாயக்கொன்றும்பிறத்திருக்கிறார்கள். நர்சிங்கநாயக்கர்முத தவரானதினாலேஎன்னக்கத்திர நாயக்கர்தெய்வீகமாய்ப்போனபிறகுநர்சிங்கநாயக் கர் துணைதனஞ்செய்து கொணடிருந்தார்ப்போது மதுரைசமத்தானத்திலவசையரு மார்முது திருமலைநாயக்கர்வர்கள் பட்டங்கடடிக்கொண்டு எழுபத்திரண்டுபாணயக் காரராயும்வரவழைத்துமுக்கியகுமார்வர்க்கமாகிய நர்சிங்கஅப்பையநாயக்காராயும் வரவழைத்துளப்போதும்போலவேஅவர்வர்க்கிமையுமீ வைத்துக்கொண்டுஅர்ணமனையா ர்அழைத்தபோது வந்து உத்திரவுசெய்த பிரகாரஞ் சேவகமுஞ்செய்து கொண்டுசுக மேஇருங்கனென்றுசொல்லிஉடுகரையம்குறித்து அனுப்பிவிச்சார்கள். இவர்களும்கூ ண்வந்துசேர்ந்துஇருக்கிறநாணயில மைசூரர்க்கிமையைமுழுதுங் கடடிக்கொண்டிருந ததினாலேதளவாய்முதுசுவாமியாய்நம்சாமப்பயர் குமார்சேவிறதய்யரும்குறவா டமிப்பொட்டலிலவ ததிறங்கிக்கொண்டுகன்னிவாடி நர்சிங்கநாயக்கரைவரவழைத்துச்ச மத்தானம்எடுபட்டுபோனதினாலேயலலோமைசூரர்வந்து சீமையைக்கடடிக்கொண் டார்கள்இப்போதுசமத்தானத்துக்குஆணியகுவசையகுமார்முது ததிருமலை நாயக்கர் வர்களபட்டத்துக்குவந்திருக்கிறதினாலேநாம்கைசூர்சமத்தானத்தினபேரிடப்போய் ச்சணடைசெய்துசீமையைச்சுவச்சப்பித்திக்கொண்டுவாச் சொல்லிநமக்குத்தளகர்த்த பிரதானிக்கமுகொடுத்ததுஅனுப்பிவிச்சிருக்கிறார்கள். திணிக்கலத்தினெட்டுபாணய ப்பட்டிக்கும்நீபெரியபாணயப்பட்டானதினாலேயும் சமத்தானத்துக்குக்குமார்வர்க் கமானதினாலேயும்இப்போதுமைசூரர்பேரிசணடைக்குப்போக வேண்டியிருக்கி றபடியினாலே நீயும்உனசனமும்கூடவே வரவேணுமென்றுசொன்னார்கள். அதேபிர காரமாகடுமென்றிருந்தார்கள். அப்படியிருக்கிற போதுமைசூர்சமத்தானத்திலிரு ததுபன்னீராய்ந்ருதினாயும்இருபதினாய்ந்ருடக சனமும்திணிக்கலிலேவந்திறங் கினார்கள். அப்போதுதளவாய்முதுசுவாமியனநர்சிங்கநாயக்கரைப்பார்த்துத்திண டிக்கலிலபாணயம்வந்திருக்கிறதினாலேநீபோய் உன்னாரிலச்சகலதையுங்கட்டுப்பத்தி ர்மாய்வைத்துப்போட்டுத்திணிக்கலப்பாணயம் இப்புறப்பட்டடுவராமலவழி பாதையி ல்சாகிரதையாகஇருக்கச்சொல்லப்பறதோபஸ்துசெய்துகொள்ளச்சொல்லி அனுப்பி விச்சார்கள். இவர்ஊர்வந்துசேர்ந்தசமர்ச்சார்மீம்ணய்யர்கேட்டுநர்சிங்கநாயக்கர்கர் தநாயக்களவர்களமுதுசுவாமியாய்கூடச்சேர்ந்தவாலவாவென்று திணிக்கலிலவ வந்திறங்கியிருந்த பாணயங்கனனிவாடியின் பேரிடவந்திறங்கினார்கள். கன்னிவாடியின்

Narasinga-Naicker resisted him, defeated and drove away his forces, and cut off the head of his brother-in-law; and then returned to his own town: while Ramanaiyer, collecting the remnants of his troops, proceeded to Dindigul. Subsequently Ramanaiyer, being indignant on account of his brother-in-law having been killed, collected some people, and while on the point of setting out to give a challenge for battle, Narasinga-Naicker reflected on the matter, and thought it expedient to send an offering or satisfaction in place of the head that had been cut off: which offering was sent by his people; and the requisite precautions being taken, he thereby pacified his adversary.

About the same time Sullerumbu-Sottala-Naicker came to Narasinga-Naicker, and spoke to him as follows: "As you are the heir (or administrator) of my chieftainship, my child, and the possessor of this land, and as I am now in the evening of my days, take to yourself at once the possession of my domain." When subsequently he was deified (died) Narasinga-Naicker, being his child, discharged the needful good and evil matters (that is, funeral rites), and added that village to his own possessions.

Nearly at the same period Pariku-Vengata-Rayer, one among the Mysoreans, came to Dindigul; and, while adjusting the affairs of that province, he summoned all the Palliya-Carers to meet him, and said to them, "There are now five or six years of tribute in arrears not paid by you; and in consequence let each one of you now settle your accounts." They replied, "We have been only accustomed to render military service to the (Madura) lords; and not to pay tribute." But as (the deputy) insisted on the payment, Narasinga-Naicker was acquitted for the sum of five thousand gold chukrams, and received permission to depart. At the same time Pariku-Vengata-Rayer wrote to the Mysore capital, that all the Palliya-Carers would neither pay tribute nor listen to what was said to them, and gave a great deal of trouble. Thereupon the Mysoreans sent to Dindigul six thousand cavalry, and twelve thousand Carnatuca people; and gave the command of this force to Arani-Vengata-paiyen. Thereupon Arani-Vengata-paiyen thought within himself, "As Cannivadi is the largest of all the palliyams connected with Dindigul, if we overcome that chief, all the others will do as we bid them, and will pay in the arrears of tribute:" in consequence he put his army in motion, and encamped against Canni- vadi. Having done so, Arani-Vengata-paiyen sent a message to Narasinga-Naicker to this effect, "Will you pay up the arrears of your palliyam, or will you come out and fight: which do you choose?" Narasinga-Naicker replied, "I am not able to pay the money: for the rest, be it as you please." Arani-Vengata-paiyer forthwith commenced hostile operations, while Narasinga-Naicker met and fought with him; and, making great havoc in Arani-Vengata-paiyen's army, he routed them, and drove them before him, until they took refuge in (the fort of) Dindigul. Arani-Vengata-paiyen hereupon reflected, "If one Poligar has done all this, unless he be overcome, what success can we expect any where?" and, being in Dindigul, he wrote to this effect to Mysore. Having done so, he succeeded in reducing to subjection all the other chiefs of the Dindigul Palliyams, the Palliya-Carer of Cannivadi only being excepted.

பேரில வறத்திறங்கிறாசிவகநாயக்கரைச் சண்டைக்குவரச் சொல்லிச் சொன்னார்கள் அப்போது பாடினிகளகோடடைகளெல்லாம் பதறிப்படுததிக்கொண்டு அநேகஞ்சண்டைசெய்திலரவணய்பார்பாணையஞ்சண்டைசெய்கிறதற்கு நிர்வாகியிலாமலஎடுபட்டுப்போய்மாவகரையிலிறங்கிக்கொண்டு அப்பாலதிரும்பவுரு சேகரித்துக்கொண்டுநர்சிவகநாயக்கருக்குஅவர்களசொல்லிஅனுப்பிவிச்சது. உனமனுஷனை அனுப்பிவிச்சாவகண்டுபேசிக்கொண்டுபோகிறோமெனறும்இல்லாதவரையிலதிரும்பவுடனபேரிலச்சண்டைச் செய்வோமெனறஞ்சொல்லி அனுப்பிவிச்சதில் நர்சிவநாயக்கர் யோசித்துச்சமையத்துக்குத்தக்கதாய்ப்போது காரியக்காரரை அனுப்பிவிச்சர்மணயயரிடத்திற் பேசுவேண்டியசமர்சாரமெல்லாம்பேசிவிச்சுக்கொண்டு அனுப்பிவிச்சுக்கொண்டுவறதுவிட்டார்கள் அப்போது ரவணயயரும் பாணையமும் பின்வாங்கித்திணடுக்கலலுக்குப்போய்ச்சேர்ந்தார்கள் அப்பாலமுததுசுவாமி அயயர்பேரில பாணையம் கறுவாடடுப்பொட்டலிலபோயிறங்கினார்கள். இறங்கமுததுசுவாமிஅயயருக்குர்மணயயருக்கும் அநேகபுத்தவகளான்றில்முதது சுவாமிஅயயரையும்அவர்தளததையும்அடித்துஅதம்பண்ணிப்போட்டுர்மணயயர்திணடுக்கலவறதுசேர்ந்தார்கள். அப்பாலதிரும்பவுட்கனனிவாடியிலநர்சிவகநாயக்கர் பேரிலர்மணயயர்பாணையம் எடுத்ததுவறதுசண்டைசெய்தார்ப்போதுநர்சிவகநாயக்கரும்பெதிர்த்துச்சண்டைசெய்துர்மணயயர்பாணையத்தைபுய்எடுபடுததி அவர்மச்சின்னையுறதலையைவெட்டிக்கொண்டுஊர்வறதுசேர்ந்தார்கள். ர்மணயயர்இருக்கிறசனததையுஞ்சேகரித்துக்கொண்டுதிணடுக்கல போய்ச்சேர்ந்தார்கள். அப்பாலர்மணயயர்தன் மச்சின்னை வெட்டிப்போட்டார்க்கொன்று ரோசத்துடனேசிறுதுசனங்கையுஞ்சேகர்ப்படுததிக்கொண்டுசண்டைக்குவரவே னுமெனறுததினஞ்செயத்தில்ப்போதுநர்சிவகநாயக்கர்யோசனைசெய்துலை வெட்டுகாணிக்கைக்கு * கொடுத்ததுமனுஷானையனுப்பிவிச்ச அதற்குத்தகுத்த பறதோபஸ்துசெய்துசமுதாயிச்சுப்போட்டார்கள். அப்படிக்கிருக்கிற நாணயில ளளொறும்புசொத்தளநாயக்கர்வறதுநர்சிவகநாயக்கரிடத்திலசொன்னசமர்சாரமென்னவெனறல்நீஎனக்குப்படததுக்குப்பாததியனதனாலேயும் நீ எனக்குப்பிள்ளையானதினாலேயும்இறதப்பூமிக்குஉடையவனானதினாலேயும்எனக்குஅறதியகாலமானதினாலேயும்பூமியைநீசேர்த்துக்கொவென்றுசொல்லியிருந்தார். அப்பாலஅவர் தெய்வீகமாயப்போனஉடனேஅவருக்குநர்சிவகநாயக்கர்பிள்ளையாயிருந்துசெயயவேண்டியநனமைதினமைகளும்நடப்பிவிச்சுப்போட்டுஅறதக்கிராமமுஞ்சேர்த்துக்கொண்டார். அப்படியிரு

The Mysoreans now assembled some infantry and cavalry, and giving the command to Ayitalu-Naicken (Hyder-ali-Naick), confided to him this charge—"The chiefs attached to Dindigul refuse to pay their tribute, and cause much trouble; do you therefore go and chastise them, conducting yourself according to the orders which you may receive; and, causing them to pay up arrears, see the country well settled, and then return." In consequence Hyder-ali-Naick came hostilely against Cannivadi. Having done so, he fought against Narasinga-Naicker; and, after a long contest, the latter became weakened and unable any longer to resist; and therefore took refuge in (the fort of) Varaha-giri. Hyder-ali-Naick encamped against Cannivadi, and sent some of his own people to Narasinga-Naicken, with a message to this effect—"You are a brave and skilful man. I wish not to destroy you: settle the arrears, and pay up the tribute, that it may be transmitted to the palace; and then be at ease in your own town." He made him many promises; and, calling for him, spoke to him in a way calculated to give pleasure; and having settled the rate of tribute at seven thousand gold (chakrams), he made him honorary presents; and said, "Continue always to pay at this rate, act according to orders which may come from the people of the palace, and prosper." He then retired to Dindigul. While the rate of tribute, so adjusted, was being regularly paid, Arani-Vengata-paiyen called Narasinga-Naicker to an interview, who accordingly went, and after an interview, took up

க்கிறதானியிலமைஞரார்ஞாளாக பறிக்குவெங்கடராபர்நிணடிக்கல சீர்மைகவசரு
 செயதுகொண்டு இருக்கிறபோதுபாணயக்காரரை பெல்லாம் பேட்டிக்குவார்வழிதது
 அஞ்சாறுவருஷமாகவகையறுப்புக்கொடுக்காமலிருக்கிறீர்களதுப்போது ம்வர்வர்வகை
 யறுப்புநீததுக்கொண்டுபோககொன்றுசொன்னதில கர்ததாக்களுடைய உததிரவுப
 டிக்குநாயகனசேவகளுசெயது கொண்டுருநதோம்ல்லாதுவகையறுப்புக்கொடுத்தவந
 ததிலையென்றுசொன்னார்கள். அப்படிக்குத்திராதென்று நர்சிகவப்பநாயக்கரிடத்தி
 லஅப்பாயிரம்பொனசக்கிரம்வாங்கிக்கொண்டு அனுப்பிவிட்டார்கள். அப்படியிருக்கி
 றதானியிலபறிக்குவெங்கடராபர்மைஞர்சமததான ததுக்குப்பாணயப்பட்டடாொல்லா
 ம்வகையறுப்புக்கொடுக்கிற துமிலைசொன்னபடி கேட்கிற துமிலலாமல அநேகஞ்சலவி
 யறகன செய்கிறார்களெனதுஎழுதியனுப்பிவிச்சார். அப்போதுமைஞரார்ஆராயிரவரு
 திரையும்பனனீராயிரம் கஸ்ருடகசனமுங்கொடுத்தது ஆர்ணிவெங்கிட்டப்பயனைஅநதத
 ணடுக்குமுகாமியாக நேமிததுத்திணடுக்கலுக்கு அனுப்பி விச்சார்கள். அப்போதுதி
 ணடுக்கலுக்குச்சேர்ந்த பாணயப்பட்டடுகளுக்குக்கல்லாவகனனிவாடி பெரிப்பாணயப்
 பட்டானதினாலே இவகைஒடிக்கினுள்ளல்லாருஞ்சொன்னபடிக்கேட்டுநமதுஉததிரவுப
 டிக்குநததுகொண்டுஉண்டாகியவகையறுப்புப்பணமுங்கொடுப்பார்களென்றுயோ
 சிததுஆறணிவெங்கிட்டப்பய்யனும் பாணயமுங்கனனிவாடியினபேரிலவநதிறங்கினுர்
 களஅப்போதுநர்சிகவநாயக்கருக்குஆறணிவெங்கிட்டப்பய்யர்சொல்லி அனுப்பி விச்ச
 து. உனபாணயப்பட்டடுக்கு வகையறுப்புபணணித்திர்ததுக்கோள்கிறுயோ இல்லாதவ
 னாயில்எதிராளியாய்ச் சணடைக்குவருகிறுயோ வென்றுகேட்டார்கள் அப்போதுநர்
 சிகவ நாயக்கர்சொன்னது பணங் கொடுக்க நிர்வாகமிலையென்று சொல்லியப்பால்உ
 வகளுக்கு சம்மதியானபடியெனது சொல்லி அனுப்பிவிச்சதிலஅப்பால ஆர்ணி வெங்கி
 ட்டப்பய்யருஞ்சணடைக்கு வநதுசணடை செய்தார் நர்சிகவ நாயக்கரும் யெதிர்தது
 ரொம்பவுருசணடைசெய்து ஆர்ணிவெங்கிட்டப்பய்யர் பாணயததிலரொம்பவுருசன
 ச்சேதருசெய்துபாணயததையெடுப்படுததிததிணடுக்கலவகாக்குமுடுக்கிப்போட்டுவ
 ததுவிட்டார்கள். அப்படியிருக்கிறபோதுஆர்ணிவெங்கிட்டப்பய்யனதிணடுக்கலவிலே
 போயிருநது கொண்டு ஒரு பாணயக்காரனிலவனவு செயதுபோட்டானுனதாலிவனை
 யெடுபடுததாமலிருநதால நமக்கெனனகாரியங்கட்டிவ்ருமெனது மைஞராருக்குஎழு
 திஅனுப்பிவிச்சுப் போட்டுஅப்பாலதிணடுக்கலசீர்மைபாணயப்பட்டடில கனனிவாடித
 விரமறப்பாணயக்காரரைபெல்லாருகவசப்படுததிக்கொண்டு இருநதான அப்படியிரு his residence for the time being in the Dalavayi Samapaiyen's choultry. While there Hyder-ali-Naicken came; and treacherously seizing him, confined him in the Dipdigul rock, and after some time carried him as a prisoner to Seringapatam. The period of his chieftainship was sixty-years.

PANDION CHRONICLE, CHAP. V. SEC. 5.—CARNATAKA DYNASTY, SEC. 14.

In further elucidation of the matters here referred to, we continue the translation of the Telugu Manuscript.

THE INTERVENTION OF THE MAHRATTAS AND OF THE NIZAM-UL-MULK.

Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker having received intelligence of the death of Minatchi-Ammal, wrote a letter to Sahji-rayer, and sent it to Poona: he also caused the needful funeral rites of the deceased queen to be performed. Soon afterwards Batte-Singu-Ragoji-Bosala came, with sixty thousand cavalry, and sitting down before Trichinopoly, blockaded it by a close siege. Chunda-Saheb was in Trichinopoly. His younger brother, Bade-Saheb, who was at Madura, having heard of the arrival of the Mahratta army, quitted Madura, with all the troops, and came to Vettu-Vatthur, near to Trichinopoly. The Mahrattas perceiving his approach, made ready their army; and engaging with Bade-Saheb's troops, cut off his head, threw it away, and destroyed the whole of his force. They then captured the fort of Trichinopoly; and taking Chunda-Saheb by the hand, and putting on him fetters, saying, "Ah, culprit!" threw him into prison. Santho-Singu-Ragoji-Bosala wrote a letter to the Carnataka governor Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker, who was then at Sivagangai, inviting him to come. In consequence, Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker, taking with him the crowned prince Vijja-Cumara-Mutthu-Tirumali-Naicker, proceeded to Trichinopoly. He there had an interview with Batte-Singu-Ragoji- க்கிற போது மைராட்சி துவாறுவருகிறாயுமொடுதது அயிதலுநாயக்கனை அதற்கு முகாமியாய் தேமிதது நீபோய்த்திணடுக்கலுக்குச்சொததபாணாயக்கார லொலாய்வகையறுப்புள்ள கொடுக்காமலொம்பவுருசலியன்கள செய்துகொண்டிருக்கிறார்கள் மவர்களை யெல்லாம் டக்கிட ததிரவுபடிக்குதடக்கும்படிக்குசெய்து நீ அவர்களுக்கெல்லாம் வகையறுப்புத்தீர்த்ததுபந்துபஸ் துசெய்து போட்டுவாவென துததிரவுசெய்தது ப்பிவிசசார்கள். அப்பால அயிதலுநாயக்கனும் பிராணயமும் கன்னிவாடியினபேரிலேவந்திறங்கிறார்கள். வந்திறங்கி தந்நிவமநாயக்கர்பேரில் ரொம்பவுருசணடைசெய்ததில் தந்நிவமநாயக்கருருசணடைசெய்கிறதற்கு திரவாகமில்லாமலவராக்கிரிமலக்குப்போயலிட்டார்கள். அப்பேரது அயிதலுநாயக்கன்கன்னிவாடியிலேவந்திறங்கிக்கொண்டு தந்நிவமநாயக்கருக்குதனமனுஷரிடத்தில் சொல்லி அனுப்பிவிசசது. நீகெட்டிக்காரன உணைநானகெடுததுப்போடுகிறதிலவகையறுப்புத்தீர்த்ததுக்கொண்டு உண்டாகிப்பணமும் அரமணக்குக்கொடுததுக்கொண்டு உணனாரிலககமே இருவெனது அனேகம்பர்வசங்களாய்ச்சொல்லி அனுப்பிவிச்சவரவழைத்துச்சலலாபமாய்ப்பேசிக்கொண்டியேழா விரம் பொனவகையறுப்புத்தீர்த்ததுடிகரையுமொடுதது எனறெனறைக்குமிந்தவகையறுப்புப்படிக்குப்பணவகொடுததுக்கொண்டு அரணமணயார் உததிரவுபடிக்குதடந்து கொண்டு ககமே இருவெனது சொல்லிப்போட்டு திணடுக்கலுக்குப்போயலிட்டான். அந்தப்பிறகாரம் உண்டாகிவகையறுப்புப்பணவருடுததுக்கொண்டிருக்கிறநாணயில ஆறணியெனகிடப்பயயென்கிறவர்பேட்டிக்கு வரசசொல்லிச்சொல்லி அனுப்பிவிசசார் அதெப்பிறகாரம் தந்நிவமநாயக்கருந் திணடுக்கலுக்குப்பேட்டிக்குப்போய்க்கண்டுபேசிக் கொண்டு தளவாய் சாமபயன்சததிராததில் வந்திறங்கியிருக்கிற போது அயிதலுநாயக்கன வரது அவகடமாய்க்கவுததவவருசெய்துபிடிததுக்கொண்டுபோயத திணடுக்கலமலயிற் போட்டிருதது கிறதுநாணக்குப்பிறகுசோங்கப் பட்டணததுக்குக்கொண்டுபோயலிட்டான். அவர்பட்டம்- (நாணய).

Bosala, who behaved towards him with the utmost courtesy, saying, "We have come and taken all this trouble, in order to rescue your kingdom and restore it to you; for the future we shall conduct ourselves conformably to your will: you must pay us thirty lacs of rupees, as the expenses of our army; and besides this, according to established custom, you must stately give a yearly allowance of three lacs of rupees." Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker replied, "As all our ready-money and jewels were taken possession of by Chunda-Saheb, we will engage to pay thirty lacs of rupees within three years, by annual instalments of ten lacs each." To this (the Mahratta chief) agreed; and, desiring a written engagement, signed by Vijia-Cumara-Tirumali-Naicker, this was given to him; whereupon Bote-singu-Ragoji-Bosala left it in charge to Murari-ravu and Iruthaiya-Ram to see Raja-Vijia-Cumara-Tirumali-Naicker reinstated; to subdue the as yet unconquered portion of the country; and to receive and remit the regulated yearly instalments: after having given this commission, he took Chunda Saheb with him, as a prisoner; and, returning to Poona, put Chunda-Saheb in fetters at Sattara.

Subsequently Murari-ravu inspected the country, and remarking, that if it were to remain in such a defective condition the money of the instalments could not possibly be paid, he brought the whole into subjection and order; and, giving it over to Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker, at the same time took upon himself the charge of seeing the cultivation of the country properly managed.

Matters being in this situation, the Nizam, Abbas-Shah, hearing of these things, reflected, "The Mahrattas are about to take and receive the revenue and the acknowledgment for the crown of a kingdom tributary to our Subah of Arcot;" and accordingly the Nizam, accompanied by Anavardi-Khan, and by a hundred thousand cavalry, came and encamped before Trichinopoly. Murari-rayer remarking the army of Abbas-Shah, and perceiving from the feebleness of his own force that he could not venture to fight, entered into a negociation with Abbas-Shah; explaining, that it had been left in charge with him to reinstate Raja-Vijia-Mutthu-Tirumali-Naicker, but now that his Highness was come himself, it would be optional with him to do so, and to receive the acknowledgment for the crown, with the revenue of the country; and, giving the fort up to him, Murari-ravu quitted it, and went to Poona.

Thereupon Abbas-Shah entered and took possession of the fort; and thence sent messengers to summon and bring with them the Carnataka prince. In consequence Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker, taking with him the crowned prince, proceeded to an interview with the Nizam, Abbas-Shah, who was rejoiced at seeing them; and said, "We shall give you your kingdom, but you must pay the stipulated present for the crown of thirty lacs of rupees; and, according to ancient custom, three lacs of rupees annually, agreeably to the arrangement made with the Mahrattas." Then especially addressing Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker, Abbas-Shah required from him an instrument in the hand writing of the crowned prince Vijia-Cumara-Mutthu-Tirumali-Naicker; adding many assurances of restoring him to the kingdom. He then set his troops within the fort in marching order; and, proceeding with his army, Abbas-Shah took with him Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker, and the crowned prince Vijia-Cumara-Tirumali-Naicker, saying, "You can return again after coming to Arcot." Subsequently to their arriving at this place Sabder-Ali-Khan died. As his children were young, the Nizam, Abbas-Shah, gave it in charge to Anavardi-Khan, who was with him, to remain until the children of Sabder-Ali-Khan should be competent to manage the affairs of the government; as also to conduct the Carnataka prince, Vijia-Cumara-Mutthu-Tirumali-Naicker, to Trichinopoly, and to reinstate him, receiving and remitting the money of the instalment: the whole of which instructions he gave to Anavardi-Khan, in the presence of Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker; and further directed Anavardi-Khan to come back to him (the Nizam), when the whole of these affairs should be adjusted. The Nizam then returned to his own dominions.

The occurrences referred to in this section of the Carnataka Dynasty, and the other manuscript just quoted, are inwoven with the details in the first book of Mr. Orme's History of the Carnatic; to which the reader may refer for more accurate details of Mahomedan intrigues. On these points, Mr. Orme was the most likely to be the best informed of the three writers; while in these native documents there is more of minute specification regarding the especial affairs of the Madura kingdom. The name of the Nizam is differently spelt in the two Manuscripts. It is the same person as is more usually known to Europeans by the title of Nizam-ul-Mulk,* who brought the Persian usurper Shah-Thamas-Kouli-Khan against Delhi. As Mr. Orme's work is pretty generally known, it is thought, on the whole, better simply to refer to him† than to occupy any larger portion of these pages with differences or agreements, which on a simple comparison will be sufficiently apparent.

PANDION CHRONICLE, CHAP. 6.—CARNATAKA DYNASTY, SEC. 15.

The translation of the Telugu Manuscript is continued.

Subsequently Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker, addressing Anavardi-Khan, said to him, "If no exertion be made, how can the Nizam Abbas-Shah's orders be carried into effect?" to which question the other replied, "Very well, I will do as you wish; but first the whole country must be reduced into subjection and proper order; and after some time, when all this business shall have been accomplished, I will conduct you to Trichinopoly, and seeing you reinstated, will then return to this place." At the same time he appointed to Raja-Vijia-Cumara-Mutthu-Tirumali-Naicker a daily stipend of one hundred pagodas, and to Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker one hundred rupees daily, which sums were paid.

While things were in this situation, the people of Vengata-giri and Kalastri did not pay their tribute-money; and Anavardi-Khan, by consequence, proceeded to fight against them. Both of them joined their forces; and beat the Nabob's army, greatly reducing its numbers. The Nabob's howdah also fell into their hands; which Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker perceiving, said to his own people, "We are the chief of an extensive country; Vengata-giri and Kalastri are our subordinate Zemindars; if, in our immediate presence, disgrace is done to the Nabob by these petty chiefs, can we quietly look on?" Saying thus, he turned his own howdah, and rushing down across the path, resisted and fought with Vengata-giri and Kalastri, when many men fell on both sides; and the forces of Vengata-giri and Kalastri were broken and scattered. Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker received two wounds; of which however he thought nothing, but ordered the notes of victory to be sounded. The scattered troops of the Nabob now rallied and joined themselves with his people; and the whole, being formed into one body, returned to Arcot.

* His proper name was Asuf-Jah. Des. Cat. Vol. 2, p. 182. This coincides with the spelling of the name in the Carnataca D, nasty.

† See Hist. of Military Transactions, &c. Vol. 1, B. 1.

The Nabob Anavardi-Khan now considered within himself, "If I give the kingdom to those people, since Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker has performed this feat of heroism, they will thenceforward value me not, but will gain increasing strength." Thus, regarding Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker as a formidable rival, he sent his own people to him on the plea of dressing his wounds; and being influenced by jealousy of his bravery, and by a strong desire of usurping the kingdom as his own, which he was convinced he could not effect so long as the other lived, he bid his physicians, when dressing and binding up the wounds of the patient, under pretext of administering internal medicine, to give him poison. The physicians accordingly mingled poison with his medicine; on taking which a violent purging and vomiting ensued, for the space of an hour, and he then expired.

Under the desire of procuring to himself the Subah of Arcot, (Anavardi-Khan) had also procured the assassination of the Nabob Sabder-Ali's children. The scheme which he employed was to engage a band of Patans, who, under pretence of asking for arrears of pay, raised an altercation, and stabbed (the young prince).

The relatives of Raja-Vijia-Cumara-Mutthu-Tirumali-Naicker becoming acquainted with the deeds done by the Nabob Anavardi-Khan, said to the former, "The Nabob Anavardi-Khan has got rid of your father, and of the children of Sabder-Ali-Khan; be assured that you cannot remain, for the Nabob will get quit of you also." They accordingly took the crowned prince, Vijia-Cumara-Mutthu-Tirumali-Naicker, along with them; and leaving Arcot by night, brought him with them to Sivagangai. All the wives of Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker entered the fire (that is, were burnt in the Suttee-rite). Vijia-Cumara performed their funeral obsequies.

Subsequently the Sethupathi and Sasivana-dever came, and rendered homage to Raja-Vijia-Cumara-Mutthu-Tirumali-Naicker, saying, "You now alone remain the valuable offspring of the Madura dynasty. That you have escaped and come hither is well. Had you remained at yonder place, then, with a view to usurp the kingdom, some convenient pretext would have been found, on your coming of age, and he would have killed you. And now should some better time happen, some legitimate king may come, and on his making an equitable inquiry, your kingdom will revert to you. At present there is no need for you to go any where." And accordingly they settled him there; and, giving him every needful allowance, saw that this was by him constantly received.

At some short interval afterwards Chunda-Saheb, getting himself released from the Mahrattas in the north, by whom he had been detained a prisoner, joined himself with Inayithu-Modin-Khan, (Hidayet Mohy-u'-din,) and bringing him on, they both fell on the Arcot (country); and, during the battle that was fought, the Nabob Anavardi-Khan was slain. His son Mahomed-Ali came and took refuge in Trichinopoly. Thereupon Inayithu-Modin-Khan conquered Arcot.

From a review of the events which we have now passed over, it will appear that there is an anachronism in the Pandion Chronicle in its brief mention of the Nizam's visit, when it says he left Maphuz-Khan and Mahomed-Ali in charge of Trichinopoly and Madura; since these were the sons of Anavardi-Khan, and did not come publicly forward on the scene until some years afterwards. The statement that the Nizam took Banguru-Tirumali-Naicker to Arcot, in which the Carnataca Dynasty and Telugu Manuscript agree, is not mentioned by Mr. Orme, nor yet the battle with the Zemindars of Vencata-giri (or Tripetty) and Kalastri: in other respects there is a considerable harmony between his statements and those of these manuscripts. The reader will have readily perceived that Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker was a mere plaything in the hands of the Nizam and Anavardi-Khan. In his peculiar situation he could indeed do nothing more than passively yield, though a better acquaintance with the Mahomedan character would have taught him that he might preferably have continued to dwell in the woods than to trust to those wily men. The Nizam himself was a thorough-bred Machiavelian, and his protégé, Anavardi-Khan, we have seen had studied his example. Mr. Orme differs* from the manuscripts in stating that the Nizam appointed Coja Abdullah to the Nabobship, who was assassinated just before his intended departure from the Nizam's capital, and Anavardi-Khan, who was blamed for the assassination, was sent in his room. According to Mr. Orme,† the assassination of Said-Mahomed-Khan, Subderali's son, was so contrived that the blame rested with Mortiz-Ali, Fouzdar of Vellore, by whom the Patans were immediately engaged, but reverted to Anavardi-Khan on Mortiz-Ali being received again at court, without any attempt being made at punishment. Hence the mode of procuring the death of Bangaru-Tirumali-

* Book I. p. 51, 52. † Ib. p. 54-60.

Naicker, though mentioned only by the Telugu MS. acquires the greatest probability. The amount of the daily stipend to Bingaru-Tirumali-Naicker and his son, is the same in the Carnataca Dynasty and Telugu MS. but reversed as to the persons receiving: on this trifling point the former of the two is most likely the correct authority. There can be no doubt, that from the time when the father and son had put themselves in the power of the Mahomedans, they ceased, intentionally on the part of the latter, to be any thing more than mere stipendiaries. Whether the Mahrattas might have treated them better is very questionable. These probably intended to imitate the conduct of Ekoji at Tanjore, had not the Nizam made his personal appearance. Mr. Orme says,* that the Mahrattas were sent at first by the Nizam, whose policy concurred with the applications received by the Mahrattas from Tanjore and Trichinopoly for help against Chunda-Saheb, at the time when, partly by treachery and partly by force, the latter had acquired authority over a great portion of the Madura country.

As yet the British arms had not interfered in the affairs of the Carnatic and Madura: they had indeed sent an impolitic expedition against Tanjore; but the French at Trichinopoly, under the subtle management of Mr. Dupleix, their chief, were already largely implicated. By their guarantee the ransom of Chunda-Saheb was settled with the Mahrattas; and they gave into the combination of Chunda-Saheb and Hidayet Mohy-u'-din (or Murzafa-jing) alike against the usurping Nabob of Arcot (who had slain Chunda-Saheb's relatives) and against Nazir-jing, eldest son of the late Nizam-ul-mulk, and legitimate Soubah of the Dekhan. This combination is hinted at both in the Carnataca Dynasty and Telugu MS. and therefore adverted to here; but the reader will find the details, with the treacherous and tragical results, fully stated in the first book of Mr. Orme's history of these and other connected transactions.

PANDION CHRONICLE, CHAP. 6.—CARNATAKA DYNASTY, SEC. 16.

Preparatory to entering on the illustration of the matters here referred to, it may be well to glance further at the advantages taken by the Mysoreans of the greatly disturbed state of affairs in the Madura kingdom. We therefore introduce a final extract, from the Memoir of Appiya-Naicker family, omitting the Tamil.

MYSORE AND OTHER AFFAIRS IN THE DINDIGUL PROVINCE.

In consequence of Narasinga-Naicker's imprisonment, his younger brother, Bettana-Naicker, succeeded to the chieftainship. At that time the king of the Madura capital, Vijja-Cumara-Mutthu-Tirumali-Naicker, Govindapaiyer, the son of Bungaru-Tirumali-Naicker's Dalavayi, Samapaiyer, Siva-ramaiyer, Ahnasvamiayer, these four persons. going to the capital of the Sethupathi, had an interview with him; and he brought with him Velleiyen-Servai-karen, and also some troops, and having summoned the seventy-two Palliya-Carers, the king was carried into the forest and there crowned. Hence, as having been crowned in the forest, he was usually styled "The forest-king;" and he (nominally) conducted the government. Bettana-Naicker remained there during one month, and then, receiving permission, returned to Cannivadi. The period of his chieftainship was seven years.

* Book 1, p. 41

While his son Narasingama-Naicker was ruling the palliyam, the Mysoreans came, and conquered all the palliyams. At that time Khan-Saheb was governor in the fort of Madura. Narasingama-Naicker went, in consequence, to Khan-Saheb; and paid attendance on him. While doing so, Subai-Valapaiyen assembled some people and horses in Dindigul, and halted with them at Vattal-Kundi; Khan-Saheb hearing this intelligence, gave some infantry and cavalry to Seru-Khan-Papu, and sent him away; who having come, before engaging with Valapaiyer, spoke thus to Narasingama-Naicker, "The Mysoreans have conquered your palliyam: heretofore you were an especially adopted child of the (Madura) lords, and were entitled by them Chinna-Maisuran. Now therefore, with a view of displaying your bravery, do you come on one side, and make the attack; and if you so manage as that the (enemy's) camp is defeated and dispersed, then I will forthwith conduct you to your own town, and see you reinstated there." In consequence Narasingama-Naicker went into the country of the Kallar (Collary) people, assembled and brought with him a small body of men, and both (himself and Seru-Khan) together assaulted the camp of Valapaiyer. In the contest the latter was wounded; and his camp, being broken up and defeated, took refuge in Dindigul. Thereupon Mallari-rayer, one of the suite of Seru-Khan-Papu, went and encamped before Dindigul; while Seru-Khan-Papu afterwards proceeded as far as to Narasingapur, belonging to the Cannivadi-palliyam. He then despatched Bavani-Singu, with some infantry and cavalry, bidding him go and reinstate Narasingama-Naicker, settle the country, and, having remained until good order was restored, then to return. By reason of this arrangement Narasingama-Naicker was restored to the government of his district; while Seru-Khan-Pāpu returned to Madura. Valapuiyer, who had been wounded in battle, died of his wounds; and Mullari-rayer, who had pursued him, captured Dindigul. At this time *Rama-Naicker came to the government of Dindigul; who having summoned Narasingama-Naicker, rated him with seven thousand gold chakrams, as tribute: which sum he paid, and returned. Subsequently Mirza, on the part of Hyder-Ali-Naicken, came to Dindigul, and sending for Narasingama-Naicker, settled his tribute at seven thousand gold chakrams; which sum he paid. Afterwards Syed-Saheb came to the government of Dindigul; who summoned Narasingama-Naicker, and treating him with great contumely, settled his tribute at ten thousand gold chakrams; which sum Narasingama-Naicker accordingly paid.

Subsequently the Māha-rajamaniya, Raja-Sri, the gentlemen of the Honorable Company, became the sole rulers; by whom the tribute, according to ancient custom, was fixed at ten thousand two hundred gold chakrams; at which rate the Dindigul collector, Macleod Rankin, Esq. and ——Unji,† Esq. were accustomed to receive it. In the time of ——Unji, Esq. Narasingama-Naicker was deified. The period of his rule was forty years.

The narrative‡ then goes on to state that its writer was the son of the last-mentioned chief; and to give an account of the manner of his own employment, by Mr. Hurdis and Colonel Innis, as guide and pioneer, with his people, against the Virupachi Poligar. These details, which are very minute, pertain to a later period than that to which our manuscripts bring us, and are considered to be irrelevant to the present work.

The elucidation of the matters contained in the closing portions of our leading manuscripts may best be conducted towards a conclusion by adding the remaining portion of the Telugu Manuscript,§ which comes down to a somewhat later period than either of the other two. It here follows.

* Apparently, by driving away the other. This one seems to be a Mysore governor.

† Native spelling—it may be Wynch. The name of the next following collector is stated to be Mr. Hurdis.

‡ It is Art. xxvi. No. 1, p. xlv. Vol. 2 of Mr. Wilson's Descriptive Catalogue.

§ This Manuscript is the one marked in Mr. Wilson's Descriptive Catalogue, Vol. 2, p. xlvii, Art. xxxi. No. 1. It is erroneously classed among Local Tracts, in Tamil; perhaps because the book was labelled outside "Tamil Keyfeyutta" by some careless native: the three tracts contained in the book are however each one in the Telugu language.

MAHOMED-ALI'S POLITICAL INTRIGUE AND ASSUMPTION OF MADURA.

Subsequently Chunda-Saheb came to Pondicherry, and entered into close union with the French people; thence proceeding to lay siege to Trichinopoly. Alamukhan (Alum-Khan), one of Chunda-Saheb's adherents, having conquered the Madura and Tinnevely countries, appointed his own son-in-law, named Muttimiya-Nazir-Khan, to the charge of them; and said to him, "You know that from the time of our ancestors, they have been servants employed by the Trichinopoly government, and myself also; therefore this kingdom belongs not to us. The Carnataca monarch is now in the Maraver's country; your business must be to call him thence; to see him crowned (or reinstated); and then to seek from him a jughir (estate in fief) for your services." Alum-Khan then proceeded to join himself with Chunda-Saheb's army; and was killed in battle. They also destroyed Chunda-Saheb. Muttimiya-Nazir-Khan, according to the instructions of Alum-Khan, came to Ramnad; and calling the Sethupathi's chief minister (Piratani), who was named Velleiyen-Servi-caren, he brought him to Sivagangai; and there also calling Tandavaraya-pillay, the Piratani of Sasivarna-dever, (palliya-caren of Sivagangai), he brought them both to Velleicuruchi; and, taking thence Raja-Vijia-Cumara-Mutthu-Tirumali-Naicker, they brought him to the Madura capital; and, according to the former customary ordinance, Raja-Vijia-Cumara-Mutthu-Tirumali-Naicker received the sceptre from the hands of Minatchi, in the temple and presence of Minatchi and Suntaresvarer: and being mounted on an elephant, seated in a howdah, he made a public entry; after which he was crowned. All the Zemindars and Palliya-carers paid homage: some of them offering a peculiar present of new garments;* and some brought presents of gold and silver flowers, showering them over him: and, prostrating themselves, rendered the honors usually given to the divinity. At the same time the office of Piratani was given to Alagapa-Muthaliar, and he received the title of Dalavayi-Muthaliar. The king thus ruled two years, from Angira year down to Stri-muga year.

* This kind of vestment, when brought, is waved round about the king by way of incantation to keep off the effects of an evil-eye, and is then given to the attendants. In a lower degree, in marriages, and other solemn ceremonies, the custom is still in use.

In this position of affairs the Nabob, Mahomed-Ali-Khan, who was in Trichinopoly, sent one Asuphu'-din-Saheb,* a Mahomedan pir (or saint), giving into his hand a hundred thousand rupees, and sent by him a written instrument, conveying to Mahomed-Miya, who had married the daughter of Mahomed-Khan-Mayana, a jaghir of Dimapur and Tiruvattur (Trivatore), village-lands, and engaging to give fifty thousand rupees, with a jaghir of one hundred thousand rupees, to the aforesaid Mahomed-Miya. The Mahomedan pir was instructed to tamper with the said Mahomed-Miya, aided by these arguments, with the view of engaging him to a treacherous seizure of the king. Mahomed-Khan-Mayana (the father-in-law) agreed to these terms; and the negociation becoming known to Hussein-Khan-Mayana, the elder brother of Mahomed-Khan-Mayana; he was very angry with his brother, and said, "From the time of our great forefathers, (our family) have served these Carnataca lords, and have lived on their bounty; if now we act treacherously towards them, it will not be pleasing to the Deity; neither will it be acceptable to men: nor will the evil fame of such a proceeding ever depart." On making this remonstrance, he forthwith ordered his family and personal attendants to be in readiness; and then proceeded to an audience of the king, making known to him, that should he remain here, he was in danger of evil machinations, instigated by emissaries from the Nabob; adding, "In a suitable time your kingdom will come to you: at this time it seems advisable and needful that you should remove hence." On conveying this information, he, without a moment's delay, took the king with him, protected by his own armed people: and leaving the king (at Velleicuruchi) took his leave of the king; but declined any such interview with his brother, and went away direct to his own jaghir at Kohai-kudi (on the western frontier). The Nabob then usurped the kingdom.

* The Telugu letters make out the name Opasarundin-Saheb.

Alum-Khan is somewhat favorably represented by Mr. Orme, and he does not here appear to disadvantage. His head was taken off by a cannon shot, in a skirmish * against Major Lawrence and Captain Clive. On looking a little more closely at the original of the Pandion Chronicle, we find it is said that he went and joined himself to Chunda-Saheb, and perished in a dispute. Chunda-Saheb was compelled to surrender himself a prisoner; and, by a singular † complication of contending interests, was beheaded, after having richly merited his fate. The intrigue of Mahomed-Ali deserves attention. In time past much has been said about the British assumption of the Carnatic. It may be well therefore to consider maturely in what way Anavardi-Khan, and his son Mahomed-Ali, came by their territorial possessions. The details have been given.

FALLEN ESTATE OF THE MADURA ROYAL-FAMILY.

As Velleicuruchi was near to Madura, the Sethupathi sent his Piratani to say to the king that the Nabob would do him mischief there; and called him away alone with the utmost speed: he then built for the king a palace at Derbha-sainam, near to Ramnad, and gave up to him the village called Vira-Soren. Besides which he gave him household expenses, and supplied him with furniture, and every other necessary. Such being the case, in the month Vyasi of Nandana year, the Nabob sent Ummad-ullam-Khan with orders to take the Ramnad and Sivagangai districts, adding, “As the Madura and Trichinopoly raja is concealed in that country, and, as we have taken possession of his kingdom, by his means some mischief may befall us: therefore that man must not be allowed to remain alive.” According to these instructions the Nabob’s son came, and, while being about to take the Ramnad fort, he had despatched harcarras (messengers) to find out where Raja-Vija-Mutthu-Cumari-Tirumali-Naicker was staying; and, when on the point of despatching a battalion and some troopers to take the king, the messengers which the latter had instructed to proceed to Ramnad to gather intelligence heard of this intended proceeding, and forthwith reported it to the king. Immediately on learning this news the king had post-horses prepared, with elephants, and camels for the baggage; and, putting the females belonging to his family in palanquins, he set out that same night: he went into the western district, and calling the people of the Kallar-nad (the collaries), proceeded to the Palliyam of the chief Tirumali-Kandapa-Naicker, who came forth to meet him at its boundary, and bringing gold and silver flowers, which he scattered at the king's feet: then prostrating himself and doing homage, said, "My lord, this district is your gift; therefore you may remain here;" and then, escorting him, he built for him a residence, and gave over to him the village of Tekam-patti. Besides which he supplied the king with household expenses and needful furniture; while he himself went twice a day to the palace, and paying homage, waited in respectful attendance for more than one hour; and then taking leave, was accustomed to return to his own house. This intercourse of respectful duty, according to his obligations, he steadily continued.

* Hist. Mil. Trans. Vol. 1, B. lii. p. 216.

† Ib. p. 226—241.

After the king had remained there a long time, "Maha-raja-Sri, the Honorable Lord Pigot," arrived at Madras, and the king hearing that he was about to proceed to Tanjore, to crown and restore to Tollaja-raja that kingdom; he sent the Dalavayi-Minatchi-Naicker to the Lord Saheb; who procured an interview with his lordship, by means of the Dubash, Mutthu-Krishnu-Muthaliar. His lordship was very gracious; and, having inquired into the matters of antiquity, which he noted down, he caused two hundred pagodas to be given for expenses, saying, "After going to Tanjore, and seeing that king crowned, I return to this place; and then proceeding to Trichinopoly, I will send for your king, and will do for your king according to what I am now about to do at Tanjore. Until my return you will remain here." The Lord Saheb thereupon proceeded to Tanjore; and, having crowned the king, returned to the town (of Madras), where, by the treachery of the persons at that place, his lordship died. Minatchi-Naicker, on learning this intelligence, considered it no longer safe to remain there; and quitting it, came to the town of Kandapa-Naicker, and reported all past occurrences personally to Raja-Vijia-Cumara-Mutthu-Tirumali-Naicker. After remaining there some time longer, Raja-Vijia-Cumara-Mutthu-Tirumali-Naicker was deified, in the twenty-third day of Margali month of Yeval-ambi year.

His son Raja-Visvanatha-Naicker, according to usage, succeeded him. The Poli-gars, Tirumali-Kandapa-Naicker, Bodei-Naicker, Irachiki-Naicker, Yelambadei-Naicker, Appachi-Kavunden, Uttapa-Naicker, all assembled, and agreeably to the statutes and ordinances of the capital, anointed and installed (the successor). The aforesaid Palliya-Carers brought silver and gold flowers, which they strewed at his feet; and made the ceremony of waving new garments around him: they then prostrated themselves, and having rendered homage, presented the usual donations, or offerings. (The installed prince) gave vestments to all of them, and dismissed them. One year afterwards all the before-mentioned Palliya-Carers again assembled, and conducted the marriage ceremonies of Raja-Visvanatha-Naicker, who remained at that place during the space of six years.

Subsequently to this period the country came under the authority of the Company's people; who, according to ancient rights and privileges, gave up their districts to the Sethupathi, the Sivogangai (chief), and others. And afterwards calling for the Zemindar, according to prescriptive right, they gave up to him Velleisuruchi. The name of his son is Raja-Vijia-Cumara-Visvanatha-Bangara-Tirumali-Naicker.

The latest notice which we have met with of this family is in one of the Mirtanjeya MSS. containing copy of a certificate by four Bramins; which represents the last-mentioned of the royal race as then a personal suppliant at Madras. We give a translation of the document entire; because what is repetition may serve instead of any resumé of our own as to the whole dynasty; and also because the rest is best stated in its own manner.

TO THE COMPANY-SIRCAR.

In the year 1820, the month of December, the sixteenth day, the following testimony was written, and delivered by the four undermentioned persons: that is to say—

Senbaga-Suntera-Pattar	}	of the line of Bramins established by Vicrama-Pandion .
Mirtanjeya-Pattar
Kupa-Pattar	}	of the line of Kulasegara .
Minatchi-notha-Pattar

These four persons being superintendents of the temple of Minatchi and Sundaesvarer, of the Madura division, of the Madu-Kulam-Tuluk, having been directed to write an account of the affairs of those who ruled in the Carnataka kingdom, we have, agreeably to this order, written as follows.

According to books written by our forefathers, and to traditions delivered by them verbally, and heard by us, we know and write to the ensuing purport.

In the S.S. 1481, in the Sittarti year, according to permission from the Rayer, the lords who ruled the kingdom were as here specified.

The son of Cottiya-Nagama-Naicker was Visvanatha-Naicker. His son was Kistnapa-Naicker. His son was Virapa-Naicker. His son was Cumara-Kistnapa-Naicker. His younger brother was Visvapa-Naicker. His younger brother was Casturi-Rangapa-Naicker. The son of the above Visvapa-Naicker was Mutthu-Kistnapa-Naicker. His son was Mutthu-Virapa-Naicker. His younger brother was Tirumali-Savuri. His son was Mutthu-Virapa-Naicker. His son was Choka-Natha-Naicker. His son was Ranga-Kistna-Mutthu-Virapa-Naicker. His son was Vijia-Ranga-Choka-natha-Naicker, who being a child, his grandmother, the crowned wife of the above Choka-natha-Naicker, named Mangamal, ruled the kingdom. After that, the said Vijia-Ranga-Choka-Natha-Naicker himself ruled. As he had no child, his royal wife Minatchi-Ammal, assuming the crown, her brother Vencata-Perumal-Naicker ruled the country. Thus during one hundred and eighty years the Carnataka lords were reigning. In the S.S. 1660, in the Sittarti year, Chanda-Saheb and Bاده-Saheb, in the time of disturbance, took possession of the Carnataka (kingdom). At that time Vijia-Cumara-Mutthu-Tirumali-Naicker, the son of Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker, a relative of Minatchi-Ammal, was in Madura. Then the Piratani of the Sethupathi, named Velleiyen-servi-karen, and the Piratani of Udiya-dever, named Tundavaraya-pillay, conducted the aforesaid Vijia-Cumara, and placed him in Velleicurchi, a village belonging to the Sivagangai Zemindary. As the family and relatives of the said Vijia-Cumara were very numerous, the before-mentioned persons gave to these, for the purpose of maintenance, some villages and connected lands. The names of these villages which were made over to them are the following :

Vira-solen, in the Ramnad Zemindary. Velleicurchi, as above, in the Sivaganga Zemindary. Setteicurchi, in the Bodei-naicken Zemindary. Tegampetti, in the Kandaman-naicken Zemindary. They had now been thirteen years and six months in Vellei- curchi, when the fort of Madura, which had been taken by Cope-Saheb, with the aid of the Mysoreans, was retaken by the before-mentioned two persons; that is Velleiyen-Servi-Karen and Tandavaraya-pillay, who drove Cope-Saheb away, and entered Madura. They then brought the aforesaid Vijia-Cumara from Velleicurchi, and in Margali month of Angirasa year had him crowned. He ruled six months, in the Carnataka fashion, down to Strimuga year; and while so ruling, Myana, Mantimeya, and Nabi-Khan, these three persons, dismissed the above-mentioned Naicker, sent him to Velleicurchi, and took possession of the fort with the kingdom of Madura. The son of Vijia-Cumara-Mutthu-Tirumali-Naicker, who was in the above-mentioned Velleicurchi, was Visvanatha-Naicker. His son was Vijia-Cumara-Visvanatha-Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker. He is now waiting in attendance at Chennapatnam (Madras). His brothers, and all the people of his family, are at Velleicarchi. Among the four villages that were assigned to them for their maintenance, Vira-Solen village of the Ramnad Zemindary, and Setteicurchi in Bodei-Naicker Zemindary, being taken away by the Zemindars, the said family suffer great distress from want of sufficient maintenance. There are also others of the Carnataka race.—This account we give with our full assent and belief.

These presents are written and delivered as testimonies, in consequence of inquiries sent from the Sircar at Chennapatnam regarding the Carnataka rule at Madura.

The remaining details in the closing portion of the Pandion Chronicle will not further demand much observation. Cook-Saheb (spelt according to the original) denotes Captain Cope. Mr. Orme represents him as besieging the fort of Madura with insufficient means, and suffering a severe* repulse, compelling him to raise the siege. The account by Mr. Orme of the attack by the Collaries on Colonel Heron's army in the Natham pass† is highly graphical and interesting. Other matters are local and not very important. Colonel Preston entered the fort by breaching and storming it on the north-west angle, where a new wall, still called Preston's battery, exists; and an eighteen-pounder shot, fired during this attack, still sticks in the wall over the north, or Trichinopoly, gate. Any minute statement of particulars however on these points, besides being found elsewhere, is not the object of this work, which is rather to illustrate the ancient history of the kingdom, by general

* Hist. Mil. Trans. Vol. 1, Book, 3, p. 170.

† Ib. B. 5, p. 392—394.

outlines, in connexion with the manners, morals, and sentiments of the people, down to the period where historians of the Mahomedan and British Military transactions have taken up the recital. This object, with one exception, is now completed.

That exception relates to the dates, especially at the remoter periods, in which there is some discrepancy and confusion in the various native authorities adduced. If however the reader, who may think the matter of any importance, will take the pains to mark down the various dates to be met with, in the Salivahana-Sagartam era, treating them as specified Vol. 2, p. 122, he will perceive that the disagreements are not extreme, with a few exceptions in the higher dates. And we do not know that by any effort we could come at a nearer approximation to a decision than is attempted in the page just referred to; though the adjustment is there allowed to remain open. We trust we now may, with the reader's permission, consider the point as settled to the best of our means and ability. If any thing further be attempted, it must be by consulting accurate copies of the most ancient inscriptions.

As regards the historical and moral bearing of this work, the reader will doubtless have perceived much, in the past state of the people, to regret, or to deplore. Still do they remain ignorant, superstitious, and prostrate before the dogmas and absurd puerilities inculcated by Bramins. Education, if conducted on the principles of true knowledge and science, may do much for them. But to teach them merely their own shasters, and allow of nothing else, will be of little benefit to them, or be worse than useless. Human science, or the highest attainments of merely human wisdom, can do them little good in raising the moral tone of their minds, and emancipating them from degrading and enervating superstitions, or slavish prejudices. The Christian religion, taught directly in its plainness, simplicity, purity, and power, has hitherto, in past experience, been found to be the only lever than can raise the moral tone of a nation's mind; and impart to them a dignified position, in a general comparison with their species. Those who believe in the divine authority of the Christian religion, are bound, by the very admission, to regard it as an emanation of infinitely superior wisdom to any thing that is merely earthly; and by necessity not given in vain, or without an existing necessity, and an express adaptation to the design in view, with an apparatus of means to secure the full application of the power when properly employed. For to admit a divine origin, and an emanafrom infinite wisdom, not possessing such attributes, must be a singular inconsistency of belief, or very great error of judgment; while, by a manifest contradiction, that which is formally admitted to be divine, must be practically regarded and treated as not level even to the limited attainment of wisdom which is merely human; for even human wisdom never avows an end, and seeks its attainment, without the use of adequate means. But the express design of the Christian Revelation is to raise the tone, in morals and sentiment, of mankind at large, as a necessary ultimate end; though not the chief end, which is higher still. To avow therefore a belief of the Christian religion, and yet to be opposed to its dissemination, by all legitimate and honorable means, among the natives, must be either positive and known disingenuousness, or else an evidence of a state of intellect certainly not enviable.

Political or private interests may indeed interfere, and tend to produce such a sophism of the mind as we have adverted to. Whether they ought, or ought not, to do so, is a question on which we shall waste no words: it being well known to be a hopeless effort to attempt to persuade any one to an induction opposed to known interests. Changes, in this matter, are only to be wrought by the express agency of Divine Providence, or the gradual force and expansion of public opinion, bearing on public concerns. We are however satisfied that to diffuse knowledge, founded on unexceptionable testimony—the most unexceptionable being unforced confession—is the direct means of producing that impression on the public mind, which, sooner or later, will surely exert its own moral force, and break through obstacles, by gradual and well prepared changes; such as, viewed at an earlier period, would appear to be impossible, as being impeded by obstacles, considered to be impregnable, or insurmountable. India, within the short compass of the present century, has witnessed some of these great moral changes; and, before the close of the century, it may very possibly witness many more.

In cases where a direct and avowed denial is made of the divine origin of Christianity, there is more of consistency, though to us unenviable, in speculatively arguing against, and practically impeding, its dissemination. Most of the obstacles thrown in the way, by overt acts or proceedings of Europeans, have in reality resulted from this source, though the origin has frequently not been defined by its true name. It is however incumbent on all, who may be conscious of denying or disbelieving the divine origin of the ameliorating system which we plead for, without having seriously investigated its claims, to remember that it possesses a body of external testimony and internal evidence which challenges candid inquiry; and the result is always perfectly sure. A thinking individual of such a class, we should suppose, cannot but perceive, on attention, that he owes his own proud station above millions of idolaters around him to the elevated tone of a nation's mind, raised by the Christianity of others, and lifting him along with it; even as a vessel is raised by the flowing tide, on which it merely floats, without forming an integral portion. Universal experience ought to be his teacher.

Europeans have also a further responsibility resting on them, as regards the indirect, but very powerful, influence of their example. Do they consider the term Feringhi in that sense wherein it used to be, and still is partially, employed by natives to be a reproach? then let them universally rise above the level of the vices, which used to mark the Feringhis of former days, and exhibit the moral influence of goodness; always powerful; very perceptible by natives; and quite as lovely as awful in their view. Public bodies of men who have the ameliorating the condition of the more degraded portions of the human race for their object, may be encouraged by knowing that Hinduism is self-contradictory, and self-destructive, when brought into contact with scriptural light and knowledge. It then admits its own inferiority, and only shelters itself behind a rampart of ancient custom, prejudice, and family interests; but has no unity or integrity in itself. Hinduism is yet a giant in dimensions; but without nerve: it is already seen to rest on certain public props, mercifully extended to it; but whenever an impartial policy, and public wisdom, aided or induced by changes of public opinion, shall see it to be fit or expedient to withdraw them, and leave the giant to walk alone, then, in a strong epileptic fit, will Hinduism fall to the ground, crushed and dismembered by its own weight; to rise, to live, and breathe, again no more.

APPENDIX.

AN INQUIRY CONCERNING THE EARLIEST LOCATION OF MANKIND AFTER THE DELUGE.

In the first volume, at p. 143, and again at p. 236, some intimations were given, leading to an implied doubt whether the more common opinion, as to the earliest location of the descendants of Noah subsequently to the flood, be the correct one. * It may be needful, for the sake of some readers, to observe, that this doubt is not there hinted at for the first time, as will immediately be perceptible; and, also, that the question is not, whether the inspired book of Genesis says that the ark rested on the mountains of Ararat, since that is unquestionable, but whether Mount Masis, in Armenia, also called in the present day Ardagh, or "Finger Mountain," and usually considered to be the scriptural Ararat, be, in reality, the precise locality designated, and meant to be designated, by the sacred writer. Were the latter point free from doubt or difficulty, the question must be considered as settled at once. But such is not the case and we purpose to bestow a little space to the discussion of the subject.

The learned Dr. Shuckford, in his elaborate and valuable work on the connexion of sacred and profane history, has adduced some reasons for an opinion contrary to the received one; inducing him to fix the site of the true Ararat in Bactria, or Cashgar; or, more generally speaking, somewhere near the northern boundaries of Hindustan. His inductive proofs are, first and chiefly, that the sacred historian expressly says, (Gen. xi. 2.) that the first emigrants "journeyed from the east" till they found a plain in the land of Shinar, "and dwelt there." But the Armenian mountain is almost due north of the land of Shinar, or plain of Babylon. The second indication is, that no mention whatever is made of Noah among the turbulent settlers at Babel, who being alive till after that epoch, would doubtless have been mentioned had he been there. Hence Dr. Shuckford observes that some authors have supposed Ararat to be some of the mountains to the north of India, where they think the ark rested, and that Noah settled there: while part only of his descendants travelled to Shinar; to which latter portion the sacred historian confines his record, as that only which was immediately connected with the particular family to be the leading theme of his writings. The reasons tending to support the opinion that the earliest location of Noah's descendants was north of India, are the following ones:—It affords a plain and simple interpretation of the Mosaic narrative—is supported by ancient western testimonies—agrees with some Chaldean traditions—with the early accounts of the Chinese—and with some early Assyrian vestiges. The inference from Scripture is direct: from the mountainous district north of India, the first migratory portion of mankind, proceeding towards Shinar, would journey “from the east.” Ancient western testimonies are brought from Portius Cato, and Justin. The first says, “Two hundred and fifty years before Ninus the earth was overflowed with waters, and mankind began again in Saga-Scythia.” Justin intimates that the Scythians might contend for priority of origin with the most ancient nations of the world. Now Saga-Scythia is in the same latitude with Bactria, between the Caspian sea and Imaus, north of Mount Parapamisus. Further, Chaldean traditions say, that when Xisuthrus (or Noah) came out of the ark, with his wife and daughter, and the pilot of the ark, he offered sacrifice to God: after which they disappeared, nor were seen again; but the sons of Xisuthrus journeyed towards Babylonia, where they built Babylon, and other cities. Besides, the Chinese history and traditions favor the like conclusion: they say that Fohi (or Noah) had no father; that he carefully bred seven sorts of creatures, which he was accustomed to sacrifice to the pervading spirit of the universe, deriving thence his name; and that he settled in the province of Xeusi, the north-west province of China. Dr. Shuckford, who draws these statements from Martini, Hist. Sinica,* Le Comptes,† Memoir of China, and Couplets Confucius,‡ infers, that the being without father, denotes the first man after the deluge; that the sacrifice is the same thing as is conspicuous in the Mosaic account of Noah; and notes, that the north-west province of China is near the supposed site of Ararat, on the north of India. Lastly, some early accounts represent Ninus and Semiramis, about three hundred years after the dispersion of Nimrod’s people from Babel, as attacking the region of the east, with the united forces of that dispersion, yet finding the nations about Bactria fully able to resist and repel all their armies; whence follows the direct inference, that Bactria must have had an organized, and a warlike, people earlier than themselves. From the whole Dr. Shuckford§ concludes, that Noah came out of the ark near Saga-Scythia, on the hills beyond Bactria, north of India; where he lived to an advanced age, giving those of his posterity near him the benefit of his counsels and care; that part of his posterity spread down to India on the south; part penetrated east to China, peopled Scythia, and the more northern continent; thence passing over to North America: and he wishes that we could obtain a more thorough insight into the antiquities and records of the primitive nations, if there be any such records extant. It may be noted, that these conclusions were formed nearly a century before the field of Sanscrit literature was opened to Europeans; and the learned writer in one place|| speaks of Indian writings as lost; including under one generic term both Hindus and Chinese.

These arguments have not, we believe, been fully adverted to, by those who have denied the inferential conclusion. The absence of Noah from Babel has been admitted, but it has been said, “that it was more consistent with the character and situation of Noah to sit “down to the quiet enjoyment of the rest of his days in the cultivation of his vineyard in

* Page 21. † Page 318. ‡ Preface, p.p. 28, 76.

§ Sacred and Profane History of the World connected. Vol. 1. B. 2. || Ib. p. 104.

"Armenia, and in devout contemplation of the awful scene he had witnessed, and of his own signal favor with the Almighty, than to take part in the turbulent measures of his apostate children, which could not but remind him of the violence and wickedness of the former world."* It has also been thought that "plausible traditions of the ancients, or of the Chinese, are vastly overborne by those which refer us directly to Armenia."†

The argument which proceeds on the simple and direct interpretation of the Mosaic account—"they journeyed from the east"—being considered the strongest, has received the most attentive discussion. A glance at the map is sufficient to shew, that the commonly received Ararat is somewhat west, as well as north, of the plain of Shinar. Mr. Bryant gets over this difficulty, by supposing that a part of the race of Noah took their departure from (Armenian) Ararat, towards the east in the first instance, that next they took a turn and bent their course southerly, and then retrograding, finally came "from the east" to Shinar. Hence his implied paraphrase necessarily is, "And it came to pass, as they journeyed" (towards the east, and then towards the south, they altered their course, and came) "from the east." Such a mode of supposition accords with a spirit of hypothesis too much indulged by Mr. Bryant; but in this instance he has not been approved, or followed. Mr. Faber, in his "Origin of Pagan Idolatry," rejects such a mode of paraphrase; but seeks to support the general conclusion, in harmony with the common opinion, by arguments drawn from Biblical criticism. He translates the Hebrew word, rendered "from the east," by "before," or "from the first." He says that the Septuagint renders Ararat by the word Armenia; and he derives an argument from a passage in one of the Hebrew prophets which speaks of forces drawn from Ararat, Minni, and Ashchenaz against Babylon, and coming from the north.

Before we enter on some consideration of these criticisms, we may further note, that the received opinion, which both Mr. Bryant and Mr. Faber support, numbers also the authorities of Abydenus, Nicolaus Damascenus, and, above all, Josephus. Berosus also (who lived in the time of Ptolemy Philadelphus) says that the ark rested on one of the mountains of Armenia. If we allude to such modern travellers as Morier, Sir R. Kerr Porter, and the amiable and much lamented Rev. Henry Martyn, who have fallen in with the common opinion, it is merely to note, that they appear to have done so without particular inquiry; by receiving that opinion as fully established. Some stress has been laid on the position, that Josephus must have known the opinion of his countrymen, the people of Judea; which may be granted, even while doubting whether they were the most competent judges on such a point; unless clear evidence of tradition, from Abraham down to the great Hebrew legislator, could be shown, proving that by Ararat, the latter intended to denote the mountain in Armenia. It may also be noted, in perfect fairness to the question, that Father Chamich's History of Armenia, translated by Mr. Johannes Avdall, and published in Calcutta a few years since, assumes, as a matter of course, that the ark rested on a mountain of Armenia: but then this writer is very modern; and his own derivation of the term Ararat (as applied to the whole land of Armenia) is from Arak, an ancient king, which militates to some extent against the commen opinion. Still, so completely is the origin of this tradition lost in the night of by-gone time, that (apart from Scripture) there is more strength perhaps arising out of the simple fact of such a tradition, than from any other source; and were the Armenian tradition only balanced by Chinese tradition, we should probably ourselves also feel inclined to give the former the preference.

* Mansford's Scripture Gazetteer. Art. Ararat. † Ib.

But now if we examine the Mosaic record, and first in connexion with Mr. Faber's criticism on Gen. xi. 2, we cannot but note that the prefix MEM usually signifies from, or out of, and not before, at least in the sense of time; as also that the word MIKEDEM, is literally and most naturally rendered "from (or out of) the east," as by our authorized version, while admitting "eastward," perhaps incorrectly, into the margin. The Septuagint renders the word by apo anatolon, "from the eastern parts;" the Vulgate by de oriente, "from the east;" and Junius and Tremelius (the most critical of Latin versions) by ab oriente. Let it be granted, on the authority of the first rate critic, Bochart, quoting Habakkuk, chap. i. 12, that in this passage the same word MIKEDEM, cannot be so literally rendered without embarrassment to the sense; yet still the conclusion only is, that in Hebrew, as in all other languages, words have a figurative and poetical meaning, as well as a plain and literal one: and we cannot hastily concede the figurative and poetical sense, in so plain and simple a narrative, and in a style so simple and unadorned, as that of the book of Genesis. It is every way most probable, that the plain literal sense is to be taken in the Mosaic record; even as without hesitation we naturally accept the figurative one, in the high and fervid poetry of the prophet; who, in his use of poetry and metaphor, is even distinguished among others of the minor prophets. Add further the consideration that, in a language known to have undergone such changes as did the very ancient Hebrew, a word adduced from so comparatively late an authority as the book of Habakkuk, is not an entirely safe criterion by which to judge of the proper use of a word in the more primitive book of Genesis. The reference of Mr. Faber, in confirmation of his criticism, to Gen. ii. 14, if we perfectly understand it, neither seems to be accurate, nor yet in point. He says, "The word, ill rendered in our English translation from the east, denotes before, in the sense of time or place; when used to describe the course of the Hiddekel, it intimated—that that river flowed before Assyria, not to the eastward of it." The reference is to Gen. ii. 14—"The third river is Hiddekel: that is it which goeth toward the east of Assyria." Here the word is not MIKEDEM, but KIDMATH, KIDMATH ASSHUR; rendered ad orientem Assyriam by Junius and Tremelius, though the Septuagint and Vulgate give the same rendering as Mr. Faber. The word occurs in Gen. xxv. 6—"Eastward into the east country," KIDMATH EL-ERETZ KEDEM, where the sense cannot well be mistaken. But being a different, though kindred word, it weighs nothing in ascertaining the meaning of MIKEDEM: Notwithstanding, Mr. Faber adds, immediately after the sentence just before quoted; "And here it teaches us in a manner exactly agreeable to the general context of the history, not that the builders of the tower discovered the plain as they journeyed from the east, but as they first journeyed; that is to say, in the course of their first general migration from Ararat, (in Armenia,) near which they would doubtless remain after the flood, until their numbers had sufficiently increased for the forming of new settlements. In this sense accordingly the passage is rightly understood by Josephus, who says not a single syllable respecting any supposed journey from the east

"but simply intimates that when men first ventured to descend from the high ground where the ark had rested, they travelled to the plain of Shinar, which was the first country that they planted." It here seems to be assumed that the site of Eden, and the resting place of the ark, were the same, which we believe has not, and cannot be proved; nor can we admit the identity. And the silence of Josephus neither affirms nor contradicts the sacred writer; or rather he affirms, because he does not contradict; and if he were to contradict, his authority would be worth nothing: the sacred writer, independent of Josephus, must be taken on his own plain and direct meaning, whatever that meaning be. And when Josephus speaks of the first country planted, the plain construction is, by those who travelled to Shinar; neither asserting a universal migration, nor denying a previous location.

We may now turn to Gen. viii. 4, 5, where it is said, "The ark rested—on the mountains of Ararat;" and "the tops of the mountains were seen." Hence the common mode of alluding to Ararat, as if one mountain, is plainly inaccurate. The original bears out this plural rendering, being HAREYI-ARARAT, and RAASHEVI-HEHARIM. The Septuagint certainly does not here render this word Ararat by Armenia, but simply by ta horee ta Ararat, "the Ararat mountains." Junius and Tremelius read super uno montium Ararati, "upon one of the mountains of Ararat." But the inspired Hebrew text plainly rendered does not, in our view at least, appear to accord with the received, or common, Mount Ararat. This has indeed two peaks, or the greater and lesser Ararat; and according to angular measurements from Erivan, made by Captain (now Colonel) Monteith, the distance between the two peaks is twelve thousand yards, with a cleft or glen between; but it is still singular and solitary in its grandeur. We might, in passing, perhaps advert to the great difference in height between the Himalaya mountains, and others in the same province, compared with Mount Masis; being not less than from fifteen thousand to eighteen thousand feet, or the whole difference in some cases, and more than the difference in others, between the level of Switzerland and the top of Mont Blanc; a consideration that may weigh in the scale of probabilities when the subsiding waters of a deluge are in question. Does then such a mountain as Ardagh in Armenia, of nine thousand six hundred feet elevation, appear fully to answer the indications of the sacred writings? Let it be compared, for instance, with the many tops or peaks of Himalaya, in the great northern range of mountains; and then let it be decided which best answers to the indication? It is true that from the greater Ararat (so called) some smaller mountains run off, or, as described by Sir R. K. Porter, "start from the sides, like branches from the root of a tree." But the metaphor used implies comparative insignificance. All travellers, struck with the grandeur in that region of the assumed Ararat, consider it as one mountain, scarcely noticing the puny offsets. But Himalaya, with its many peaks, is a stupendous elevation, amidst gigantic mountains on all sides; hence "mountains" and "mountain tops" here would seem to be most applicable: that it is the "Maha-meru of a thousand peaks," is possible, though not certain; and geography shews it to be part of the range called Imaus, both by ancient geographers and Hindu legend.

The inference drawn by Mr. Faber from the prophet Jeremiah, demands some attention. It turns entirely on the word Ararat being used to denote the country of Armenia. We think it clear, from the construction of the original in the book of Genesis, that the sacred writer is there speaking of the name of particular mountains, not of the general name of a country. And if the statement contained in Avdall's History of Armenia be accurate, as we conceive it to be, that the country came to be called Ararat from the name of Arah, an early king, then we have a sufficient reason for the prophet's speaking of it as known by that name in his day, and also for setting aside Mr. Faber's derivation of Armenia, from Ar, and Minni; or the mountainous country of Minni; which derivation moreover is not sanctioned by the passage in the prophet Jeremiah, (chap. li. 27.) We there read of the kingdoms of Ararat, Minni, and Ashchenaz; and Mr. Faber's attempt to blend Ararat and Minni together, as if the words were in regimen, must not be admitted; since MAMELCHOTH ARARAT, MINNI, VE ASHCHEHAZ, can only be so rendered by a critical perversion, not by a fair translation, such as the authorized English version, supported as it is by more accurately critical versions: for instance, that of Junius and Tremelius, the most strictly literal and critical version that we have met with. Thus we think it possible to leave the prophet's language in its plain literal import, fulfilled as it was by the assemblage of armies under Cyrus, in his siege of Babylon, without at all affecting the question, as to the precise mountain, or chain of mountains, intended by the sacred writer in the book of Genesis, termed by him HAREVI ARARAT.

The strong scriptural argument, adduced by Dr. Shuckford, from Gen. xi. 2.—“And it came to pass, as they journeyed from the east, that they found a plain in the land of Shinar; and they dwelt there,” remains undamaged, if not incontrovertible. It appears so to us; and, also, that it is strengthened by the critical failures (if we rightly so deem them) of Mr. Faber, and the singularly unwarrantable hypothesis of Mr. Bryant. The like result seems to us to be produced by another singular supposition, which makes the first emigrants from Ararat to have travelled in a semi-circular direction, half round all the points of the compass, following the course of the river Euphrates, from its rise until near Bagdad; supposing such to be a natural mode of travelling, as being led on by the river; and confirming the hypothesis by the important discovery that the Phrat is no other word than Vrat, which in Sanscrit means a circle, (not a semi-circle we presume); and therefore the first emigrants went in a semi-circular route, by the banks of the river, which hence they termed Phrat, or Vrat, the Euphrates. Of this hypothesis Dr. Mansford seems to approve. However, as yet we have not seen the words of the book of Genesis, “from the east,” satisfactorily disposed of by any inferential deduction differing from that of Dr. Shuckford.

His argument receives support from another source of inference,* before only slightly adverted to. It appears, by all we can gather from fragments of very ancient history, that the two kingdoms of Babylon and Nineveh very soon became engaged in war. We meddle not here with the dispute whether Ashur went forth from Babel and built Nineveh, or whether it was Nimrod that set out and founded the latter city; though this discussion has engaged some of the most learned pens that ever wrote, on one side or other. We incline to the former opinion; yet the point now in question is only that Ninus, the first distinguished monarch of Assyria, from whom Nineveh received its name, attacked and easily overran the neighbouring kingdom, or rather infant petty state of Babylon; but not satisfied, Ninus carried his arms eastward, to the country since called Bactria, a thousand miles eastward of Shinar, where he met with a power equal to his own, and fully able to defend itself against him. But if Ararat were in Armenia, and the emigration was from thence to Shinar, we have not only the insuperable difficulty how they could journey from the east, but also how, at so very early a period after the deluge, a powerful people able to withstand this early conqueror, could be met with in Bactria, or the country of the ancient Sasae, that is of the Scythians, or the Sacti-dwipa of the Hindus. There is no other conceivable mode of accounting for such a circumstance, but from the inference that the Ararat, whereon the ark rested, was somewhere near that region; that the immediate descendants of Noah peopled it, himself residing near it in his own vineyard or garden; that the emigration was thence to Shinar, in an easterly direction; that when, after another emigration of part of the people to Nineveh, the latter kingdom acquired sufficient strength, by being addicted to war, to attack and overthrow the adjoining nation, found to be unprepared and feeble, it was checked on going further east, by an earlier population, of sufficient power to resist the hostile encroachments. These inferences are deduced from early records of other nations; but the Hindu records afford very considerable confirmation. In them nothing is more prominent than the wars between the Surs and Assurs. These indeed are made to be a sort of good and evil genii, different from mortals; but this is only consistent with the usual turn of Hindu invention. If we are right in our supposition, that the country of Hindustan was peopled direct from the seat of early population; and if this spread took place after the Assyrian incursions, and in any measure by reason of them; then it is every way likely that fabulous accounts would be handed down by the descendants of the Surs, and afterwards fixed in the shape of mythological legend and poetry. We may note, that the Surs are usually represented as virtuous and peaceably disposed, but afflicted by the Assurs, who are malignant and hostile: the Assurs seem to be the stronger; but the Surs are often benefitted and get the victory by interposition, deemed to be divine. If history is to be looked for from India of such assaults and repulses, who that is acquainted with the country and its languages would expect to find it in any other and plainer shape? Accordingly we conceive that the Surs are the earliest progenitors of the Hindus in another country; and the Assurs, their opponents and invaders from Assyria. If asked what that other country is? we should reply, it is not Armenia; but the Saca-dwipa, or country north-west of Himalaya; which we believe to have been the earliest cradle of the human race, in its renovation after the flood.

There is a consideration of some degree of weight, when taken with others, arising from the different character of early monarchies in the families of the dispersion at Babel, and in the descendants of those families supposed to have remained near the resting place of the ark, migrating subsequently into India and China. Among the former, as at Babylon, and the first rulers at Nineveh, in the earliest period in Egypt, in early Greece, and at the first foundation of Rome, monarchies were elective; and the strongest, the bravest, or the wisest, man was chosen to be king by the suffrages of the people, of which Dr. Shuckford gives a variety of proofs, and examples; whereas the early Indian and Chinese monarchies proceeded on a different principle, and were founded on a different basis; being of the paternal character, descending by right of primogeniture, and strictly despotic, though mildly so; the theory being that of the authority, respect, and influence of the father, or eldest born son; over the whole family; and, in the largest sense, the whole people, being traceable to a common head, was the whole family. This remarkable principle, which never traced sovereignty (as in most other countries) originally to the suffrage or consent of the people; unquestionably obtained in the earliest ages in India, and always in China; we believe also in Eastern Tartary and Japan. To see the argument in its fuller force, the reader should follow the numerous instances of originally elective monarchies adduced by the very learned Dr. Shuckford,* as having existed among the western families of the dispersion, from Nimrod, Ninus, and Belus, down even to Romulus and his immediate successors. We may add, in confirmation of Dr. Shuckford's remarks from Diodorus Siculus, a fact not mentioned by him, which is, that the right of primogeniture descended to the eldest son of the second brother, if his son were born before the eldest son of the eldest brother.†—This argument however is of the auxiliary kind, and no more.

Let us now pay some attention to the deduction to be fairly, and we believe inevitably, made from the investigations instituted by Sir W. Jones into the origin of families and nations. In a series of anniversary discourses before the Asiatic Society he undertook, with the exertion of all his peculiar powers and qualifications, to ascertain into how many primary stocks the original families of the earth could have been divided; and, after a long and arduous inquiry, detailed step by step, he concluded that there were only three discoverable: appealing to any one to controvert his arguments and inferences, and announcing his own moral certainty of the general results. No one could be better qualified for such an inquiry, owing to his very extensive knowledge of languages, and to his judicial habits accustoming him to look through sophistry, to receive only evidence as testimony, and to yield his judgment to evidence alone. Happily for mankind, he who in early life set out, perhaps to some extent, a sceptic, was guided by these rules; by strong natural powers; and we believe, in some places, by an overruling influence from above; until he came at last to write concerning the Hebrew Scriptures, in a way that would not be entirely unsuitable to a Christian divine of first rate acquirements. Now, besides drawing from this, a posteriori, process of argument the strongest conclusions in favor of the Mosaic account generally, and more particularly of the three children of Noah and their families, he condenses the whole argument into an inquiry as to the place whence these three families first departed; and he shews from arguments, not capable of condensation here, but which all who doubt may consult at length,‡ that the only country which coincides with all indications is, in his view, the country of Iran, or Persia; whence, as from a common centre, all the primitive families might have diverged to their several subsequent locations, while from no other country could they have so diverged without natural impossibilities, and the strongest opposing evidence being encountered. We confess that sometimes, in minor points, his chain of argument might be strengthened, and that all his data do not fully appear; nor do they all appear to be incontrovertible: but so much he admits, asks for confidence in his impartiality, and leaves minor points open; but urges the strength of the main conclusions; and to us these, with some variations and exceptions, appear irrefragable. We ask only a few more degrees of northern latitude, which may be granted without disturbing any one essential position, and the grant will bring us to Bactria, or Saca-dwipa, and east of the Caspian Sea; being the region indicated by all previous inferences as the first location of mankind subsequent to the deluge; though the ark probably rested further to the eastward. If, after all, there remain any important difference between the conclusions of Sir W. Jones and ours, we believe it will turn on the sole point of time; as his inquiries, in the ascending series, stop at a period subsequent to our own.

* Connections, B. 6. cf alibi. † See vol. 1, p. 223.

‡ See Anniversary Discourses passim; and especially the 6th and 9th.

• We will now advert to Colonel Wilford. That he borrowed, and sometimes largely, from the learned work of Dr. Shuckford, we think we have seen sufficient evidence to conjecture. However, what we have to do with are facts and arguments. And we must premise our opinion, that the notion which seems to have been usually entertained of the site of Eden, and the site of the first location of man after the deluge, being one and the same is fallacious. Colonel Wilford is not the only person who seems to have taken this idea for granted, without evidence or examination. But we know of no evidence of the kind. The situation of Eden we consider to have been* in Armenia, and the first location after the flood not there. We know so little of antediluvian history as not to be certain with regard to the exact residence of Noah before the flood; but it does not seem likely that such a machine as the ark should have continued, during the whole period of its sojourn on the waters, precisely over one spot; we rather think, on the contrary, that it must of necessity have been propelled to some distance in one direction, or possibly in different directions, at different times: and supposing, for argument sake, that it might have been built in the country since called Armenia, it is not too much to suppose that it floated so far as the Himalaya mountains; the loftiest in Asia, and therefore the first to emerge out of the waters. However, these suppositions are perfectly unimportant—as much so as the starting point of the ark's voyage—with regard to the place of its resting; which is the only point of consequence. We make these remarks chiefly because Colonel Wilford, in his usual manner, jumbles together Eden and Ararat, Swambhuvā, or Adam, with Satyavrata, or Noah, and the flaming sword of the cherubim, with Garudha, or the kite-vehicle of Vishnu, and eagle of Jupiter, all in a breath;† and with no very great reason. We almost consider a proposition disgraced which he maintains: however, discrimination must be exercised; and the position regarding the location of mankind we believe is too strong to be much affected by his arguments or opinions either way. If he fell in with the conclusion which is consistent with truth, we suppose it was not entirely by accident, but guided by some reasons; and when we find the talented Editor of Calmet's Dictionary investigating into them, and declaring his conviction of their correctness, they must be admitted to have some force. As to any antediluvian researches of Colonel Wilford, we dismiss them at once; the detected forgeries of his Pandit render such a course necessary. Those forgeries are no where more visible to the reader than in supposed antediluvian fragments; put together in reality, according to order, at Benares. But in matters subsequent to the deluge, we believe a discriminating eye may distinguish some that are true. We admit therefore that Colonel Wilford has placed the site of early population after the flood in the mountainous district of Cashgar, further eastward than we are inclined to do ourselves; but then we add, that if the position had not stronger support than is afforded by Colonel Wilford, it would not, by us at least, be advanced or supported.

* See vol. 1, p. p. 166, 167.

† As. Res. vol. 6.

Let it however be observed, that Hindu books, of unquestionable and unsuspected authenticity, make the ark of Satyavrata, or Noah, to have rested on the mountains called (இடாவூத்) Imaut; and other books treat of Himalaya in particular as eminently sacred. Now, in maps of ancient geography, we find one range of mountains called Emodi-montes, and another Mons Imaus; the latter dividing Scythia intra Imaum from Scythia extra Imaum; and the former ranging further to the south-east. We suspect the whole to be one common name; and that the north-western Imaus is the one intended by Hindu authorities. The identical mountain where the ark rested, we consider to be the subsequently celebrated Meru, or navel of the world; around which the various dwipas are represented, by infant geographers, as spreading in concentric circles: this mountain is probably that one known to the Chinese as "the Celestial Mountain,"* and is, also, we conceive, the true Kailasa of the Hindus. Fix the precise site of the Imaut mountain, where the ark rested, on the Himalaya peaks, the loftiest in the world, or any where else, as in Scythia; and let that be taken as the Meru of the Hindus, and then their fables about this mountain become at once intelligible. Here we may note, in passing, that in so far as the remarks of M. Bailly on the site of early population, discreetly taken, go towards fixing the first location of mankind in Scythia, they weigh in favor of the position already laid down; and which is, we think, nearly proved.

It might perhaps be thought a defect, if we were to omit at least a passing notice as to the, by some, supposed claim of Apamea, in Phrygia, to be the resting place of the ark. The claim however is founded only on commemorative medals; some of them thought to be spurious. The best attested was struck in honor of Adrian, the Roman emperor; and it would be futile to rest on such a modern testimonial the slightest weight, beyond its intention as a mere commemoration; without limiting the occurrence to that particular place or country.

We have now gone through what we had to offer on the earliest location of mankind after the flood. The subject is not one of speculation alone; since it bears on a correct interpretation of Scripture, and on some obscure points in very early history. With no desire to accomplish, but that of searching for truth, we leave the question to the judgment and candor of our readers; and if they decide the point against us and our authorities, we shall yield them all the praise of an unbiassed opinion, and lament the fallibility and error of our own judgment. Let it only be observed, that we have consulted brevity rather than detail; and, that some of the arguments employed are capable of more extensive amplification.

* M. de Guignes, quoted by Sir W. Jones, Works, vol. 3.—Fifth Anniversary Discourse.

B.

DESCRIPTION OF KAILASA AND VAICONTHA.

(Referred to vol. 1, p.p. 127, 130, 131.)

On the summit of the mountain Kailasa, which rises above seven inferior hills, resides Isvaren, with five faces, ten hands, and fifteen eyes.

The detail of the three eyes to each head is the following:—

The right eye is Chandra-Bagavan, (the moon,) with sixteen (daily) degrees of increase.

The left eye is Surya-Bagavan, (the sun,) possessing a thousand rays.

The centre eye is that situated on the middle of the forehead, which, in the time of the deluge, dries and burns up all the world.

In this manner to five heads there are three eyes; in all fifteen eyes.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE FIVE HEADS BELONGING TO THIS SATHA-SIVEN (OR ETERNAL SIVEN).

In the middle is a head, with the form of the firmament, or visible heavens.

On the right side of this middle head is Brahma.

Next is a head with the form of Rudra (the destroyer).

Opposite, on the left side, is a head having the form of Vishnu.

And next to this last is a head having the form of Isvaren.

DESCRIPTION OF THE CROWN WHICH COVERS THE AFORESAID FIVE HEADS, HAVING FIVE FACES.

One crown made of Chintamani, and Naga-gems, with the rest of the nine jewels.

Within this crown is Ganga and the Moon, having two measures, (increasing and decreasing).

This Satha-Siven has the epithet of Nila-Kanden, (or blue-throated,) because when the gods and assuras prepared the amrita, he swallowed the black and baleful poison (of the serpent Vasuki).

DESCRIPTION OF THE FIVE HANDS ON THE RIGHT SIDE OF THIS SIVEN.

In the first right hand is the treble Sulam, (or trident).

In the second hand is the goddess-formed Parasi, (a kind of spear).

In the third hand is the celebrated weapon. (No name.)

In the fourth hand is the Vajra, (or a kind of sword).

In the fifth hand, the god agni, (that is, fire).

ON THE LEFT SIDE,

In the first hand, a serpent for a weapon.

கயிலாசகிரிபுதுபதததிலயெழுதாமுலகாக்குமேலேஉச்சஸ்தாநததிலபஞ்சமுகததுடனேபததுகையையும்பதினஞ்சுகண்ணுமாயிருக்கப்பட்டஇசுபர்னுகருஞ்சிர்சுண்ணுகருமுனறுகண்ணுகுவயனம்.வலதுகண்ணுநததிர்பகவான்பூணகலையோடுகூடினசுநதிர்பகவானகண்-க-இடதுகண்ணுரியபகவானஆயிர்ப்கிரணததுடனெகூடினகண்-க-சகலபிறபஞ்சததையும்மகாப்பிறனாயகாலததிலதெகியானென்றுயிருக்கப்பட்டதெநததிககண்-க-இததப்படிக்கிஅஞ்சுகிர்சுகும்கண்-யிடு-அநதசதாசிவருக்குஅஞ்சுகிர்சுகுவயனம்.நயிவிருகருநகிர்சுகுசாச்சுருபமாகஇருக்கப்பட்டசுர்சு-க-அநதசுகிர்சுகுவலதுபிறம்பாமதேவசுருபமாகஇருக்கப்பட்டசுர்சு-க-ருததிர்புருபமாகஇருகருநகிர்சு-க-அநதததுடதுபிறததிலவிடினுசுருபமாகஇருகருநகிர்சு-க-அநதசுகிர்சுகுஅநததசுகிர்சுகுசுருபமாகசுகிர்சு-க-ஆகஇததப்படிக்குஅஞ்சுகிர்சுகுடனெயும்அஞ்சுகுமுகததுடனெயும்கூடியிருகருநதாசிவருடையசுகிர்சுகுடெலெருக்கப்பட்டகிரீடததுகுவயனம்சுநதமேணிசுகுநததினமுதலாயிருக்கப்பட்டநவர்நினைததினலேகிரீடம்அநதக்கிரீடததுகருளொருக்கிறசுடையிலேகெவகையும்இர்ணயிகலையுடனேகூடிஇருக்கிறசுநதிர்பையும்நரிததிருகருநர்.அநதச்சதாசிவருக்குதேவாஅசுராளஅமுதமதனம்பண்ணுருபோதுசகலபிறவஞ்சததையும்தெகிகருநதாயிருக்கிறகாளகூடவிசததைப்பானம்பண்ணினபடியினலேயும்கழுததிலககறுப்பாயிருக்கிறபடியினலேயும்நீலகண்டொண்ணும்பேர்அநதஇசுர்னுகுவலதுகைஅஞ்சுகும்வயனம்வலதுபுறமுதகையயிலேமுணுருணததுடனேகூடினருலாயிதம்-க-இர்ணடாங்கயயிலேசயிதததிருபமாகஇருக்கிறபர்சுண்ணுமுணுங்கயயிலபிறதாபதைஉடைததாயிருகருநஆயிதம்ஒண்ணுலாங்கயயிலவச்சிராயிதம்ஒண்ணுஅஞ்சாங்கயயிலஅக்கினிபகவானஆயிதமாகவைததிருகருநர்.இடதுபிறததிலமுதகையயிலகாயிதம்ஒண்ணுஇர்ணடாயிங்கையயிலசகலபாவததையும்போக்கடிக்குறகறமமாருநஆயிதம்ஒண்ணுமுணுங்கயலமணியாகுநஆயிதம்ஒண்ணுலாங்கயயிலசகலபிறவஞ்சததையும்லடசிகுருநதாயிருகருநஅபையப்பிறசாதம்கொடுக்கிறகைஒண்ணுஅஞ்சாங்கயயிலஅங்குசததைஉடைததாயிருக்கிறகை-க-இததப்படிக்குப்பததுகையுடனேகூடிஇருகருநஅநதச்சதாசிவருடையமார்புவாயவுசுருபமாகஇருகருநதுமார்புகருக்கிளேமேலவயறுநததிர்புருபமாகஇருக்கிறதுகிளவயததிலேசகலபிறவஞ்சமும்ககலஅண்டமும்க்விஷ்டினுசுருபமாகவும்சிவருபமாகவும்இருக்குதுஇரிப்புகருக்கிளேபாதம்விகாக்கும்பாமதேவர்பூமிசொருபமாகஇருகருநர்இநதச்சிதாசிவரிருக்கப்பட்டசிவகாசனததினுடகாலதுலும்துலுவேதம்அநததுலுசாதுகருளளேசுவாமிகுருதுபிறமாகஇருக்கிறவளபாரசததிருபமாகஇருக்கிறபார்பதிஅம்மன-க-துலுக்காதுகருவெளியிலசததிருபமாகஇருக்கப்பட்டஅட்டகணனிகைகள்-அ-மடுனமணுபாகஇருக்கப்பட்டகணனிகையள்-க-ஆக-யி-கணனிகையமும்சுவாமிஅம்மனிடததிலபிறபாமலககாததிருகருநபேர்களஅ.

In the second hand is the ceremony which removes all sins, for a weapon.

In the third hand is the instrument called mani, (a bell).

. In the fourth hand is the blessing which preserves the world. •

. In the fifth hand is the weapon angusam, (or hook for driving elephants).

On the breast of this Satha-Siven, thus possessing ten hands, is Vaivu (the wind).

On the seat of the stomach is Rudra.

On the seat of the abdomen is the universal Vishnu, and also Siven.

From the hips down to the feet is Brahma, having the form of the earth.

. The four feet of the throne of this Satha-Siven are the four Vedas.

In the midst of these four feet, and on the left side, is a Parvati, having the form of the consort of the heavenly one.

On the outside of these four feet are the eight virgins who attend.

Also three virgins having the name of Manon-mani.

These eleven virgins attend on the god and goddess without intermission.

At the foot of the throne are the twelve bulls, having the form of spiritual warriors.

On the left side of Siven, near the door of the temple, is Subraminiyen, mounted on the peacock vehicle. He has four attendants.

The wall round the throne has four gobrams (or towers)—on the four corners are four budas, (a kind of demons).

On the first step of the throne are eleven destroying angels.

On the second step are many devotees, equal to Panchali-Bagavan, who, some with their wives, and some fasting, wait to see the god having the form of the lingam, when he walks or dances.

On the third step are many rishis, with plaited hair rolled up, who have come from their stations of penance in Taraca-vana to worship and behold the god.

On the fourth step are Rachsashas, as Elephant-mouth, Lion-mouth, Ravana, and others; also Venaiyen, Subraminiyen, Vira-Bhadra—these all do penance.

On the fifth step is Brahma with five heads, with Indra and other lords; who dance or perform severe meditation.

On the sixth step are those who sing hymns in praise of the god; and those who blow trombones, and other such-like instruments; those who beat kettle drums; those who wave fans; those who carry warlike arms; with many Chakraverti kings: who all wait to lay hold on the sacred lotus feet of the deity, (that is to obtain immortal happiness).

On the seventh step is the elephant that is named Airavata, and the horse named Uchi-irchvam, the unicorn rishis, two-headed rudras, and four-legged monkeys; with those beings that have four legs and eight hands, who are the troops or army of the god. These fan the four-handed Siven on the left and right side of his throne.

On the right side of the god, Nareda and Aya-cripan play on the vina, or lute; near to these and behind, three female Gandharvas bring Parijatam flowers, and do homage to Nareda. Further behind, Vairaven is seated on the vehicle shaped like a dog.

On the right hand tower, on the right hand side, are the one-legged and the two-legged individuals, who perform penance. Near to this is the Chandra-pushpa tank; on the

ந்தப்பீடததடியிலுருதுபிறத்திலெயும்ஞானவயிராகிபகருபவகளாகஇருக்கிற்காணைய
 ள-யெ-சதாசிவருக்குஇடதுபிறத்திலகோபுவாசல்க்கிடபயிலவாகனததுடனேசுப்
 பிறமணியசுவாமி இருக்கிறார் அவருக்குப்பரிசாகாளானதுசதாசிவருடைய வாசல-ச
 க்குகோபுரம்-ச-மூலானுக்குப்பூதம் -ச- அநதச்சாதாசிவருடையபீடததகருஅடு
 ததமுதலததடடிலிருக்கிறபதினொருபேர் பெகாதிசருத்திராள இர்ணடாததடடிலச
 வாமிசனனிதியிலவகருமமாக இருக்கிறபகவானநடனிந்தனம்பண்ணுகிறகாலத்தில்
 அவர் வர்பத்தாள் அவர்வர்கடகினததுடனேதி நியமுடனெயும் பெயகமுடனெபிதல்
 சசலிபகவானமுதலாயிருக்கிற பத்ததாளெல்லாம்தெரிசினததுகருவறதுகாததுகொ
 ண்டிருக்கிறார்கள் மூன்றதடடில தாருகாவனததில இருக்கிற சகலமான ரிஷி ஜகாமும்
 பாறகும்படியாயசடாமண்டலங்கமுடனெகூடநிறததனம்பண்ணிததெரிசினம்பண
 ணிக்கொண்டிருக்கிறார்கள். ஓலாநதடடில கெசவத்திறனசிகவத்திறனராவணமுத
 லாயிருக்கிறாடசதாமும்வினாயகனசுப்பிறமணியசுவாமியீபத்திரான்முதலாயிருக்கிற
 பேரொல்லாநதவசுபண்ணுகிறார்கள் அஞ்சாநதடடிலபஞ்சமுகததுடனேகூடியிருக்கு
 ரபஞ்சப்பிறமாவும்இந்திராதிங்களாயிருக்கிறதேவதைகளும் நிறதனமபண்ணுகுற பே
 ருமதியானமபண்ணுகுற பேருமாகஇருக்குார்கள் ஆறநதடடிலசுவாமிகருசுவதீகி
 யானம்பண்ணுகுறபேருதிருச்சினமுதலானவாததியம் பணிமாறுகிற பேரும்தாளம
 போடுகிறபேரும்வீச்சுநிலீசுகிறபேரும்ஆயிதவகளைவததுகொண்டுஇருக்கிறபேரு
 ம் அனெகசுகிறவறத்திகளெல்லாம்பவாம்பாதார்விறதத்திலேஅடையும்படிகுதியா
 னம்பண்ணிக்கொண்டுஇருக்குார்கள் யேழாநதடடிலஅயிராபதமென்கிறஆண-உ-உ
 ச்சையிச்சிர்வம்பென்கிறகுதினா-உ-கொம்புடனேஇருக்கிறரிசியளசிரீவளமுதலாயிரு
 க்கிறகெசவருத்திராள முதலாயிருக்கிற கபிகுாளசதுறப்பாதியள பெயட்டுப்பாதம்
 லுகையெயடுக்கையோடே கூடிக்கொண்டுஇருக்கிற பேர்அவர் சேவகாளசுவாமிபீட
 ததுக்குவலதுபிறத்திலும்பிடதுபிறத்திலும்பார்மசிவனும்லுகையுடனே ஆகாசமாற
 க்கத்திலிருந்து கொண்டு சாமர்ப்வேசுகிறார்கள் சுவாமிக்குவலதுபிறம் ஞாதரும்அயக்கி
 ரீபனுமலீனாகானம்பண்ணுகிறார்கள் அவர்களுக்கிறதபினபுறம்கெததுருபஸ்ததிறிய
 ளமூணுபேருபாரிசாதபுடபம்கொண்டு வறதுஞாதரைப்புகைசபண்ணுகுறஅதற
 குபினபிறம்சுவானவாகனததிலவயிரீவனயேறிக்கொண்டு இருக்கிறார்வலதுபாகோ
 புறததுக்குவலதுபிறம்யேகபாதி யெனறதுவிபாதி யெனறம் இர்ணபேருதவ
 சுபண்ணுகிறார்கள்அடுததாப்போலேசநதிர்நுஷறகாணி அதற்குவலதுபுறமகாலிஷட
 டுணுவும்லசுமியும்சுவகுசகாதாரியாயிருக்குார்கள்அடுததவலதுபிறத்திலமூணுகறப
 கிறார்ருஷித்தினநிவிலேமூர்ததீகரித்திருக்கிற ஆதிசேஷனும்அதற்குவலதுபிறம்விபா
 தியும்இருக்கிறார்கள்அடுததீகரிபிறம்யேகபாதிஉளறததமுதமாகததவசுபண்ணிக்கொ
 ண்டு இருக்கிறார்அடுததீகரிபிறம் அக்கினிகுண்டலததிலகறபகவிருஷத்தின கீளேயெம
 தர்மராசாதவசுபண்ணிக்கொண்டுஇருக்குார்கள்அதற்குவலதுபிறம்சொறனபுஷக்காணி

right side of which are Maha-Vishnu, with Lakshmi, bearing the Chank and Chakram. On their right hand, among three Karpuga trees, (which yield whatever is desired,) is Athi-seshan. On the right side of that, is the being with tiger-legs. Near, on the east side, is the one-legged being, looking up at the heavens while doing penance. Near to this, on the east side, beneath a Karpuga tree, and in the midst of a circle of fire, is Yama-dherma-raja, doing penance. On the right hand of this is Sorna-pushcaranam. On the east, are three rishis, doing penance beneath two Karpuga trees. To the east of that, Urdu-bagu and Jambusta-bagu do penance. To the east, on the bullock vehicle, is Soma-suntira-murti; and on the lion-vehicle is Parvati. At the base of this mountain is the god having the form of the lingam, worshipped by four holy rishis. There is also a Karpuga tree in the shape of a man, devoutly regarding the god. On the south side are two persons doing penance, by standing on one leg. Further south, beyond four Karpuga trees, are Padma-patha, a rishi and his three disciples, who are engaged in abstract devotion. To the west side are two Karpuga trees, beneath which Kristna-verma, a Bramin, is performing penance, standing on one leg. Further to the west, some swans devoutly contemplate the god. Again to the west, Sayanodanapatha is performing penance, at the bottom of a fire-pit used for the homa, and beneath a Karpuga tree.

To the north, Paratshaden stands with his foot treading on a serpent, in the attitude called Kalika-martana. On the west, on the top of a Karpuga tree, Sweta-vanga-rishi is doing penance. On the neighbouring north side is Sornapathu rishi, fixed with his head upwards contemplating the heavens, doing penance on the point of a sharp spike. On the neighbouring north side, Krishnaverma and Kanaka-rubi, the rishis are engaged in contemplation, in the midst of two Karpuga trees, on the banks of a river; they are invested with the sacred beads, and rest the toe only of the right foot on the ground. (Swetankutta-pathiyayi.) To the west, Lacshmi, Sarasvathi, and Parvati, do penance. On the north, in the air above, two female Gandharvas bring Senbuga flowers, and scatter them down on the god

THE FIRST VAICONTHA.

In Vaicontha, in the ocean of milk, in the midst of the seven seas, is the lord of all worlds, Striman-Narrayana-murti; reclining on the serpent Athi-seshan. At his feet are Stri-devi and Bu-devi, two female divinities. Athi-seshan has a thousand heads. In the lotos (arising out of the navel) of the god, is the five-headed Brahma, creating all things. Above, is Maha-Vishnu, the lord of the Chank and Chakram, as the preserver of the world. Striman-Narrayana-murti reposes in a jewelled Sabha-mandabam, (hall of assembly,) which is splendid with the radiance of ten millions of suns. To this Vaicontha there are seven outward enclosures: in the enclosure nearest to the last recess, beneath the feet, on the two sides are nine Brahmas, endued with pine species of perfections. At the feet of the god are twelve persons endued with surpassing wisdom; and possessing the Sva-rubam * (or

* The four qualities of heaven are, Sva-lugam, the place or world; Sva-mibam, nearness to the deity; Sha-rubam, celestial form; Sva-uchiyam absorption into the essence of the divinity.

முதலாவதுவைகுண்டம்பைகுண்டத்திலே ராப்பிலித்ததியிலசத்தசமுத்திரமத்தியிலச
கலபுலனகந்தநாவாகஇருக்கப்பட்டபுரிமநாராயணமுறத்திஆதிசெடலாகஇருக்கப்பட்ட
டதெறபத்தினமேலேசயனம்பண்ணிக்கொண்டு இருக்கிறார் அவர்பாநார்விதத்திலுள்ள
தேவிபூதேவியென்று அம்மன - உ - அநதஆதிசெலிசனுக்குள்ளே - த - அநதப்பகவானு
டையபுபிசமலத்திலபருமுகம்பிறமாசகலபிறபருசத்தையும் உறபத்திபண்ணுகிறார் பிர
மதேவர் அநதரகுமேலேசவகைசக்கரபகவான லோகசமொட்சுறை தமாக்கமா விட்டு
னு இருக்கிறார் அனெகங்கோடிருரியப்பிறகாசமாயிருக்கிற இாறதினசபாமண்டத்தில
இருக்கிறார் அநதவைகுண்டத்தின்கு யேழுபிறகாரம் அநதப்புறத்தின்கு அநிததமுதல
புரிமநாராயணமுறத்திசயனம்பண்ணிக்கொண்டுப்பிறகாறத்திலபரத்தின்குக்கீளேடு
ரண்டுபுறமும் தவப்பிறசாதிபாகப்பிராமதேவரிருக்கிறபேர் - க - சுவாமிபாதத்திலசனக்
சனததையளவியிருக்கப்பட்டசாஸுபியளவியிருக்கப்பட்ட அமுசையையுடைத்தாயிருக்
கப்பட்டபேர் - ட - சுவாமிவடக்குவாசலிலுள்ளபாலகான - உ - அநிததமேலபிறத்தில divine form). In the north entry to the god's presence are four door-keepers. On the neighbouring west side are two rishis, endued with heavenly piety, doing penance. Above, the wheel and club resplendently shine, being self-supported.

THE SECOND VAICONTHA.

To the left, on the southern side, the shell, the bow, the arrow, the sword and shield, resplendently shine, being self-supported.

In the southern entry there is one endued with heavenly piety, and the form of Vishnu; holding the Chank and Chakram. Seven heavenly physicians wait at the entry. In the first enclosure are thirty-three apsaras, (or divine females). In the second enclosure are forty-one persons who continually worship the god, by prostrations of the body.

In the third enclosure are seventy-one divine Bramins, who are constantly engaged in repeating passages from the four vedas.

In the fourth enclosure are one hundred and eleven illustrious persons, entirely denuded of garments.

THIRD VAICONTHA.

In the fifth enclosure are the Gandharvas, and the shrine of Andren.

In the sixth enclosure are the Karpuga tree, two birds called Gandaperandam,* peacocks, swans, lotos tanks with lotos flowers; and in the sixth enclosure, on the side nearest to the god's presence, are Garuden, and six door-keepers bearing the Chank and Chakram, and two divine females holding fans.

In the seventh enclosure is the sea which produces fishes, with other living things, and the nine jewels—

Here the Manuscript has the appearance of breaking off abruptly, either from defect of invention or of inspiration: or perhaps the author's faculties

“ — strain'd to the high
In that celestial colloquy sublime,
As with an object that excels the sense
Dazzled and spent, sunk down, and sought repair.”

* Fabled to be so large as to be able to swallow elephants.

இரண்டு ரிசியீசராளபர்மபததாளதவசுபணணிக்கொண்டு இருக்கிறார்கள் அதின மேலே சக்கர்மும் கதைபுமுந்ததிகரிச்சுக்கொண்டு இருக்குது.

இரண்டாவது வைகுண்டம் அதற்கு இடது தென்கிழக்கே கந்தனுசு பாணங்கத்தி தேவையததுடனே அதுகளமுறத்திகரிச்சுக்கொண்டு இருக்கிறது தெற்கு வாசலிலசங்கச்சிக்காதாரியாப்பரம்பததாளபவில்டிடுனு சொருபமாயிருக்கிறபேர்-ச- சததமருததுக்களாத்வாசலகாப்பார்-எ-முதலப்பிறகாரத்திலஅப்பாத்திறியள-நயந- இரண்டாம்பிறகாரத்திலசுவாமியைபிரார்த்திச்சுக்கொண்டு இருப்பாயிதமாய அறசினபண்ணு குறபேர்-சயி-முனாம்பிறகாரத்திலநாலுவேதவகமும்பாராயணம்பணணிக்கொண்டு இருக்கப்பட்டுதவப்பிராமணுள-எயக-னாம்பிறகாரத்திலதிறிதண்டசனனியாகியளாக்இருக்கப்பட்டரிசியர்-நயக.

முனாவது வைகுண்டம் அஞ்சாம்பிராகாரத்திலகந்தனருவாமும் இறதிர்விவானமும் ஆரூம்பிராகாரத்திலகற்பகவிருடஷமும் கண்டகொரண்டபட்சியமும் மயூர்ங்கமும் அமுசங்கமும் தாமரைப்பிஷபங்கமும் தெறபக்குளங்கமும் சனனிதிதானத்திலஆரூம்பிறகாரத்திலகெருடபகீவானும் துவாரபாலகாள்சங்குசக்கிற அவதாரியளாக்-ச-சாமரம்போடுகிறதேவதனனிகள்-உ-பேழாம்பிறகாரத்திலமச்சமுதலாயிருக்கிறநவரறினாக்மும் உறபத்தியாயிருக்கப்பட்டசததசமுத்திரமும்.

C.

THE PROVERBS, OR SENTENTIOUS SAYINGS, OF ATHIVIRA-RAMEN.

(Referred to vol. 2, p. 78.)

The poem entitled Vettiverkai, condescendingly made by Athivira-rama-Pandion.

They who lay aside their faults, and act according to the rules laid down by the conquering-spear-holding hand of Athivira-ramen, of the race of Kulasegara, will suffer no want.

He who explains literature is a lord.

The beauty * of learning is language without fault.

The beauty of the wealthy is to protect relatives.

The beauty of spiritual teachers is the Vedam and good morals.

The beauty of kings is to wield a righteous sceptre.

The beauty of merchants is to increase their capital.

The beauty of farmers is the desire to live by ploughing (or cultivation).

The beauty of ministers (of state) is clear foresight of events.

The beauty of feasting is hospitality.

The beauty of wives is not to contradict.

The beauty of a well-matched wife is to reverence her husband.

The beauty of mistresses is to ornament their persons.

The beauty of the learned is to repress ostentation.

The beauty of the poor is rectitude amidst privation.

The fruit of a palmyra tree, though it is large, yet when planted a tree arises which will not afford shade sufficient for a single person; but the seed of the banyan tree, though small as eggs in the roe of fishes, yet when planted grows up to be a tree so large as to afford shade sufficient for many elephants and ornamented cars, with their accompaniments of horses, and armies of men.

(Thus)—All those of lowly state are not little (in worth).

* அழகு Beauty, or ornament.

And all the great are not truly great (in true dignity).

All children are not truly children, (some are without filial piety).

All relatives are not truly relatives.

All wives are not true wives.

Cow's milk when boiled does not lose its flavour.

If gold be melted in the fire, it loses not its lustre.

Sandal-wood by grinding does not lose its perfume.

The black akel-wood by being burnt does not give a bad odour.

If the sea be stirred up it does not become muddy.

Greatness and lowliness (as regards rank in life) will each produce their respective fruits.

The small faults done by the lowly, the great are in duty bound to bear with, (or pardon.)

If lowly people commit great faults, it is very difficult for the great to bear with them.

To prosper is good, to prosper is good.

If the stupid be instructed for a hundred years, the instruction, like the green weed on the surface of water, will take no root.

If the great (in capacity) are taught only for a single day, their learning will be like a root penetrating the earth.

To study is good, to study is good.

It is good to study, even if we beg for a livelihood.

If an unlearned man boast of the dignity of his rank, (or caste,) he is to be compared to (உதிர) the empty husks found among rice-corn.

Among the four divisions of caste, if the highest be without learning, he is the lowest of all.

Let a learned man be of what class he may by birth, or in whatever state; yet, on seeing him, others will address him with politeness and attention.

The king will take pleasure in the intelligent (or well-informed).

Rather than have children void of sense, who know not how to render honor to those to whom it is due, it would be better for people to have no children.

(Brute) elephants (however great in size) give no presents or charity.

A cat has neither austere devotion, nor benevolence.

To* a wise man (a stoic) there is neither pleasure nor pain.

To a moth there is neither property nor dignity.

To an alligator there is neither swimming nor remaining. (Sense obscure).

The unlearned have neither veneration nor modesty.

To the sick, there are no niceties of times and seasons to be observed.

To the totally vicious there is neither friendship nor fear.

* Literally rendered: the idiom is like the Latin, est pro habeo.

Neither prosperity nor adversity are unchangeable. Sometimes those who have rode for short distances on an elephant in royal state, have afterwards had to walk a great distance with sore feet.

Sometimes the splendid, and the rich, have had to beg the coarsest food from a charitable asylum.

Sometimes those who have publicly begged alms have held intercourse with kings, or ruled as princes.

Those who have heaped up gold like a little mountain, in that same day, have destroyed or dispersed the whole.

A house of seven stories in height, falling down, has become like a stable for buffalos.

Though there is a wide earth and heaven, common to all, yet to those who have no home it is all as if nothing.

Though the fierce elephant be large yet it dreads the little knotted bamboo rod.

The antler-headed deer, though dwelling in the wide hilly forest, yet fears the tiger.

The terai, (a kind of frog,) though it dwell in a deep pit, yet greatly fears the snake.

It is better to dwell in a forest, amidst fierce tigers, than in the country of kings, who sway a sceptre of violence.

Rather than dwell in an ancient country without rulers, it is better to live in the woods, among wild people who feed on honey.

To beg is the proper occupation of those who possess nothing.

To give to those who have nothing, is the duty of those who have.

Sometimes the gay ornaments of a bride are only put on in order immediately to embrace a dead corpse (on the funeral pile) with dishevelled hair.

When a waste land, feeding only cows and horses, becomes cultivated, by men and women dwelling on it, it often becomes fertile in corn.

One who has seed-corn and the plough in his hand, and yet is lazy, is chaff, (பதர் empty husks).

Those of the Braminical tribe who do not repeat the four vedas every morning and evening are chaff (worthless).

Those merchants who do not contrive to live on the interest only of their trading capital are chaff.

The idiot who sends his own wife back to her mother's house, and afterwards does not go to see her, is chaff.

The idiot who leaves his own wife at home, and seeks familiarity with his neighbour's wife, is chaff.

The idiot who gives up his weapons, and his money, into the hand of another is chaff.

If any one speak as loud as the beating of a drum, and bites his tongue, through haste (or anger), listen to him with politeness.

One who declares a lie, by his manner of doing it, seems really to speak the truth.

One who declares the truth, by his incapacity of speech, appears really to announce falsehood.

Hence, any king who does not hear both parties seven times, and judge according to a right statement of the case, transgresses the law of Menu.

The tears (of the oppressed) which gush out from a deep source of grief, even though gods or the Trimurti itself, were the judges, would be for ever as the cutting of a saw.

Never so speak as wrongfully to inculcate others.

Enter not a torrent in which there are whirlpools. (Law suits seem designed).

Do not go on a distant journey alone, (or without suitable aid).

Do not go on an extensive water without a puni, (canoe, or catamaran.)

Do not associate with insnaring females of powerful attractions, without giving largesses.

Go straight on thy way. And in that way return.

Behold ! these precepts point out the proper path in this world.

It is perhaps superfluous to remark, that these sayings are those of a heathen prince : consequently may be expected to contain some things good and right, and others that are defective or wrong. It is not improbable that they may have been taken down in substance from his mouth as he sat in public to dispense justice ; being polished and reduced to poetical measure afterwards, by some of the attendant poets of his court. The translation is made from the printed text of Sarana Perumal, of Madras.

D.

GEOGRAPHICAL AND OTHER MISCELLANEOUS MATTERS.

(TRANSLATIONS.)

In the early times, when many Pandion kings reigned, the rulers of the Tamil country divided it into the Soren, Sera, and Pandion kingdoms; and settled the bounds of their respective dominions: of which boundaries the following is a detail.

VERSES CONCERNING BOUNDARIES.

VENPA.—A Stanza by Avyar.

வெள்ளாற்றின்மேற்கு மேற்கு ப்பெருவெளியா	-	ம்
தெள்ளாம்புனற்கணனிதெற்காகுமீ—உள்ளா	.	ன்
ஆயநதகடற்கிழக்கன்பத்தற்காத	- - -	ம்
பாண்டிநாட்டெலகைப்ப	- - - -	தி

To the south of the river Vellar, to the west is Peruveli, to the south is Cape Comorin, on the east is the sea: to the extent of fifty-six kadams (560 miles) is the Pandion's kingdom.

VENPA.—A Stanza by Vembaturar.

வெள்ளாற்றின்மேற்கு வெள்குமரிக்கேவடக்	-	கு
தெள்ளுக்கடலின்மேற்குதேவரீ தொழும—உள்ளமகி	ழ்
வனஞ்சிபேரூதின்மேற்குமாறனெல	- -	கை
யன்பத்தற்காதமா	- - - - -	ம்

South of the river Vellar, north of Cape Comorin, west of the sea, east of the large town called Vanasi,* fifty-six kadams, is the Maran (or Pandion's) kingdom.

* Supposed to be the same as the Banavasi of Ptolemy.

VENPA.—Stanza by Pugerenthi, the poet who was retained in the palace of the Pandion king.

வெள்ளாற்றின்மெற்காகுமேறகுப்பேருவெனியா - ம்
தெள்ளாடினற்குமரிதெற்கெலகை—விளளா - கு
நாடிகுநாயகனார்நற்புனைவநாதனா - - ர்
கூட்டத்திருமதிளகீட்கூ - - - - - ற

South of the river Vellar, on the west is Peruvali, the water round Cape Comorin to the south, is, by the consent of all, the dominion of the prince of the country.

BOUNDARIES OF THE SOREN KINGDOM.

VENPA.—Stanza by Avyar.

கடலகிழக்குதெற்குகரைபொருவெளளா - - ற
குடநிசைக்குககோட்டைக்கரையாம்—வடநிசைக்கு - கு
பெருடநீப்பெண்ணையிருபத்துநாற்காத - - ம்
சொள்ளாட்டெலகையென்சொ - - - ல்

East as far as the sea, to the south as far as the Vellar, to the west as far as Cotta-Karei, as far as the Penniyar (river) of the Yenad (country) to the north, to the extent of twenty-four kadams (240 miles), are the boundaries of the Soren kingdom.

VENPA.—Stanza by Pugerenthi.

கடலகிழக்குதெற்குகரைபுராநும்வெளளா - - ற
குடநிசைக்குககோட்டைக்கரையாம்—வடநிசைக்கு - கு
நளமுதலாயிருபத்துநாற்காத - - ம்
சொழ்நாட்டெலகையென்சொ - - - ல்

The sea to the east, to the south the Vellar, to the west Cotta-Karei, to the north as far as Ila, being twenty-four kadams, is the boundary of the Soren country.

BOUNDARIES OF THE SERA COUNTRY.

VENPA.—Supposed to be by Avyar.

வடக்குத்தலமபழ்ணிவாழ்கிழக்குச்செய்கோ - - டி
குடநிசைக்குககோழிகூடாகும்—கடற்கரை - டி
ஞோமதுதெற்காகுமோடொண்டிங்காத - - ஞ்
சோநாட்டெலகையென்சொ - - - பு

The northernmost place is Pazhani, (vulgo, Pyney), the most eastern is Chengodu (Trichengude), the most western is Kozhikudu, on the south is the shore of the sea, in all eighty kadams (800 miles), is called the boundary of the Sera country.

VENPA.—Stanza by Avyar.

வடக்குத்தலமபழணிவான்கிளக்குத்தெனகா	-	-	சி
குடதிசைகொளிக் கூடாகும—கடற்கரை	-	-	யி
ஞோமீதுதெற்காகுமோரொண்பந்நகாத	-	-	ஞ
சேர்நாடடெலகையெனச்செப	-	-	பு

The northernmost place is Pazhani, to the south is the southern Casi, to the west is Kolikudu, the sea shore on the south, is called the boundary of the Sera kingdom.

VENPA.—An ancient Stanza by an unknown writer.

மூசறுவண்டுமூலுமபசுந்தொவக	-	-	-	ந்
பாசறுகொண்டபகீர்திகு—வாச	-	-	-	த்
தொடையெடுப்பான்சோழன்றுகிலெடுப்பான்சேர்	-	-	-	ன்
குடையெடுப்பான்கொற்கையாகோ	-	-	-	ன்

To the sea, which has flowers inhabited by the humming-birds, he who brings scented flowers is the Soren; he who brings garments is the Seren; he who brings the umbrella is the king of Korkhi, (or Madura).

[The allusion is to the custom of bringing presents once a year, putting them on a brass-plate, and launching them into the sea, as a sort of homage to its imaginary deity Varunen. The custom, under some modifications, is still said to be followed by private individuals in different places.]

The following, not being poetry or extracts, is presumed to belong to Mirtanjeya-Pattar.

THE FOUR BOUNDARIES OF THE PANDION KINGDOM.

South of the Vellar, east of Perur, north of Cape Comorin, west of the eastern sea; from east to west twenty-eight kadams, south to north twenty-eight kadams, making together fifty-six kadams. Its yearly revenues, ten millions of chakrams.

THE BOUNDARIES OF THE SOREN COUNTRY.

To the east the sea, on the south the Vellar, on the west Cottei-Karei, on the north Izhani (or Ilam); from east to west twelve kadams, from south to north twelve kadams; making together twenty-four kadams. Its revenue, ten millions of gold pons.

BOUNDARIES OF THE SERA COUNTRY.

On the north Pazhani, to the east the great town (or Perur), on the south the sea, on the west the great mountain; from east to west forty kadams, from south to north forty kadams, making together eighty kadams. Its revenue ten millions of pattans, of which four make a cali-pon.

The particulars of the foregoing things are engraven on stones, which are fixed in a wall to the east of the shrine of Cabali (a name of Siven).

The account of the land revenues of the Pandion country, arising from cultivation, were taken away during the times of disturbance.

BOUNDARIES OF THE TAMIL COUNTRY.

Pavanandi in the Nannul, (a work on grammar,) written by him, says—

குணகடலகுமரிகுடகம்பெருகட - - - ம்

என்நாண்டெலகையினிருததமிழ்ககடலு - - - ள்

Its meaning is this:—The eastern boundary is the east sea, the southern boundary is Cape Comorin, the western boundary is the west sea, the northern boundary is Tripeti.

Within these four boundaries are included the Tonda-mandalam, Nadu-Nadu, Sora-desam, Pundiya-desam, Sera-desam, Kongana-desam; and the whole of these being taken together, form what is called the Dravida country.

The principal town or metropolis of the Pandion country is Madura; the principal mountain is the great hill called Potheiya; the name of the king's horse is Gana-vattam; the chief rivers are the Tembaraveni and Vegavathai. The king's distinctive garland is made from flowers of the veppa tree; the device of his banner is a fish; his descent is from the lunar pedigree.

The metropolis of the Sora country is Uriyur; its principal mountains are Coli and Neri; its chief river is the Cauvery; the name of the king's horse is Goram. His distinctive garland is the flower of the atti tree. The device on his banner is a tiger. He is of the solar pedigree.

The metropolis of the Sera country is Tiru-Vanasi-Kalam; the name of the king's horse is Padalam; the king's distinctive garland is the flower of the panna tree. The chief rivers are the Tembaraveni and the Purani. The device on the king's banner is a bow. He is of the agni-kulam, (or fire-race).

The poets of the Soren country have sung as follows:—

கோர்ததுககொப்போகனவட்டம்மா	-	-	னே
கூறுவதுவகாலிரிகுவைகையோவமமா	-	-	னே
ஆருக்குவேம்புதிகராகுமொவமமா	-	-	னே
ஆதிததனுக்குதிகரம்புலியோவமமா	-	-	னே
வீரர்க்குதிகராகமீனவனோவமமா	-	-	னே
வெற்றிப்புலிகொடிகுமீனமொவமமா	-	-	னே
ஊரிநபுகாதனக்குகொற்கையோவமமா	-	-	னே
ஒக்குமோசோழனுக்குப்பாண்டியனகாணமமா			னே

O lady, the Gana-vattam does not equal Goram.

The Vaigai is not to be compared to the Caveri.

The Veppa garland is not equal to that of atti flowers.

The lunar descent does not equal that of the sun.

Does the fish-banner* king equal the brave!
 Is the fish-banner equal to that of the tiger?
Korkhi (Madura) is not equal to (Uriyur) the town of praise.
 The Pandion is not to be compared to the Soren.

The two brothers, named Irattiyar, have sung in favor of the Pandion, as follows:-

குறுமுனிவன்கொலவிலோ தமிழ்பிறந்ததமமா னே
 ஒப்பரியதிருவினையாட்டுறைபூரோவமமா - னே
 திருநெடுமாலவதராஞ்சிறுபுலியோவமமா - னே
 சிவனமுடிமேலணிவதுவுஞ்செங்கதிரோவமமா னே
 கரையழிந்தகாவிரியோவுரைதெரிந்ததமமா - னே
 கடிப்பகைக்குமேம்போகடுகையோவமமா - னே
 பாவைபடிந்ததுஞ்சோழன்பதந்தனிலோவமமா னே
 பராகிரமபாண்டியனடிகழைப்பகொளிதோவமமா னே

O lady, the Tamil language of Agastyar was not born from Coli (but from Potheiya).
 The sixty-four Tiruvilliadels did not take place in Uriyur.
 The Nedu-mal (Vishnu) was never born as a tiger.
 Is the sun fixed on the top of Siva's crown of hair?
 The bank-destroying Caveri never saw any writing ascend up against the stream.
 The Atti garland is not so heroic as that of the Veppa flower.
 Did the sea ever submit at the feet of the Soren?
 Is the praise of the heroic Pandions a light thing? *

[If not deeply tinctured with mythological belief, it will perhaps be acknowledged by the reader, that the Soren panegyrists have the best of it. He will remember that Agastyar, the father of the Tamil language, lived on Potheiya mountain; that Vishnu was, a ce qu'on dit, incarnate as a fish; that Siva is represented as wearing the crescent in his tuft of hair, the Pandion being also of the lunar pedigree; that a writing was said to ascend the Vaigai, in the time of Kuna-Pandion; that the sea submitted to Ukruma-Pandion (See 13th Tiruvilliadel): and he may need to be informed, that when a troop of Hindu warriors put on a Veppa garland, they thereby made a public vow to conquer or die.]

THE MEASURE OF THE SEA AND WORLD.

The extent of the earth from east to west is one hundred thousand yojanas.† From south to north is one hundred thousand yojanas. To the east, and west, and south, and north of those boundaries, is a hundred thousand times a hundred thousand yojanas.

In the midst of this (earth) is the mountain Maha-meru. On the south of Maha-meru are nine continents. In this earth the Malayala country is not included: that was produced by Parasu-Ramen. A great part of the Malayala country is rude and mountainous: the deity of that portion is Subraminiyen. Some part of the country is alkaline and desert, producing nothing: the deity of this portion is Cali. Some part is woody, inhabited by herdsmen: the deity is Vishnu. Some part is fertile, and intersected by rivers: the deity is Indren. Some part is salt, sandy, and barren: the deity is Varunen.

Or fish-catching king. † A yojaneē is said to be 13½ English miles.

[This division of the soil of a country is presumed to be common and popular. There is a stanza current, which is either the same division or very similar; as follows:—

காடாகுமுலலை-கழிநெய்தலாகுங்கலவகுறிஞ - சி
 நாடாமருதநடை-வெம்பாலையினனாடமுறநெய்வ - வ
 கோடசரின்-வருணனாகுகனிநதிரானகூறுதுற - - கை
 மாடாயர்மீனர்குறவருழவாமறவர்க - - - னே

Of which the meaning is:—

The forest is thorny ground, its inhabitants herdsmen, its deity Krishna.

The sea-shore is salt ground, its inhabitants fishermen, its deity Varunen.

The mountain is bleak, its inhabitants are Kuruver, its deity Subraminiyen.

The level country is fertile, its inhabitants are ploughmen, its deity Indren.

The barren land is alkaline, its inhabitants Maraver, its deity Durga.

The Kuruver and Maraver are wild tribes, or people less civilized than others. By alkaline land is meant that which produces உவர்மணல, or fuller's earth. This popular idea of the qualities of different soils may perhaps illustrate the parable of the sower in the gospels; and renders it probable that some popular saying of the kind existed amongst the more ancient inhabitants of Palestine. The sea-shore may not be included, because Judea was an inland country.]

The salt sea is a hundred thousand yojanas: the divu (or island) beyond is a hundred thousand yojanas. Beyond, the sea of sugarcane juice is two hundred thousand yojanas. The island beyond that is four hundred thousand yojanas. Further on, the sea of honey is four hundred thousand yojanas: the island beyond it is eight hundred thousand yojanas. In (the sea of milk) is Vishnu's place of repose. Beyond that, the island is sixteen hundred thousand yojanas. Further on, the sea of sour milk is sixteen hundred thousand yojanas. The island beyond is thirty-two hundred thousand yojanas. The sea of ghee, further on, is thirty-two hundred thousand yojanas. Beyond that, the island is sixty-four hundred thousand yojanas. Beyond, the sea of fresh-water is called Perem-perai-kadal (or the largest of all seas); and is sixty-four hundred thousand yojanas. Beyond that is the wall of heaven. In that is Uthiya-giri-parvatam, (or the sun-rising mountain,) in which the sun rises. Making in all seven seas, and seven hundred and fifty-two yojanas. This is a standard measure.

E.

SCHEDULE of such Tamil and Telugu Manuscripts, in the Mackenzie Collection at Calcutta, as appear to the Editor of the present work to be adapted to cast further light on the History and Antiquities of the Sora, Sera, and Pandion kingdoms. Extracted from the Descriptive Catalogue by H. H. Wilson, Esq.

A.—TAMIL MANUSCRIPTS.

I.—PAURANIC AND LEGENDARY HISTORY.

No. 10.—Kasi-Khanda of the Skanda-Purana.

An account of Benares. The translation is ascribed to Athivira-rama-Pandion.

No. 14.—Periya-Purana.

It contains some particulars concerning Nyana-Sampanten, and the persecution of the Samunals.

No. 15.—Tiruvanda-Purana.

It illustrates a particular act of cruel superstition in Tiruvanda-Soren; who had his son put to death for accidentally driving over and killing a calf in the street of Tiruvalur.

No. 16 —Kanchistalla-Purana.

It ascribes the foundation of Conjeveram to Kulottunga-Soren. This Stalla-Purana would bear a similar relation to an account of the Soren kingdom, as the one abstracted in the first volume of this work does to the Pandiya-mandalam.

No. 17.—Arunachula-Mahatmya.

An account of the temple at Tirunamali, or Trinomalee, which commemorates the legend specified in vol. 1, p. 122, of this work. The temple was repaired by Vajrankusa, a name, or title, of a king of Madura. The temple is within the boundaries of the ancient Sora-desam.

No. 18.—Vriddhachala-Purana.

Legend of Verdhachalam in the Carnatic. It might be of some service.

No. 19.—Indrakila-Parvata-Mahatmya.

Legend of a double shrine of Vishnu and Siva on a hill near Valliamanagar, or Vellum, in Tanjore; the site of one of Indren's penances. The town is said to have been founded by Kala-Kantha-Soren. It is mentioned in the Carnataka Dynasty (vol. 2, p. 17) as given up to the Tanjore king by Visvanatha-Naicker, in exchange for the rock and fort of Trichinopoly.

No. 20.—Sivandhi-Stalla-Purana.

Legendary account of Trichinopoly. The rock is termed a splinter from Maha-meru: it was the abode of the giant Trisira, a commander of part of Ravanen's forces; the rock being called Trisira-mali, or hill of Trisira, and the district, Trisira-palliam, by corruption, Trichinopoly. The neighbouring town of Uriyur, or Wariur, was founded by Sarvaditya-Soren. It was for a time the capital of Sora-desam, until buried by a shower of dust: as the legend says, because a Soren king forcibly took some Sivandhi flowers from the garden of Sarama-muni. The queen only escaped the dust-shower; and her child being selected by an elephant, (see vol. 2, p. 59,) was acknowledged rightful heir to the throne.

No. 21.—Awaryar-Kovil Mahatmya.

Legendary account of a temple near Chittambaram; said to have been founded by Manika-Vasagar, (of whom, see vol. 1, pp. 105—110. 181). Mr. Wilson, alluding to Sonnerat's account of him and of Hindu festivals, says, that notwithstanding many inaccuracies and provincialisms, "it continues* to be the only authority worthy to be consulted on these subjects, as observable in the south of India." We trust that this tacit reproach on the English lords and literati of the Carnatic, will not be perpetual.

No. 22.—Vedapuri-Stalla-Purana.

Legend of a Saiva shrine at Vedapur. It contains an account of the Bauddhas, by Nyana-Sampanten.

No. 23.—Tribhuvana-Stalla-Purana.

Legend of that place near Sittambaram; and also of various temples on the river Valar: said to have been founded by Kulottunga-Soren and Keri-kala-Soren.

No. 24.—Nalei-Stalla-Purana.

Adapted to illustrate the five elementary types of Siva. (See vol. 1, p. 174.)

No. 26.—Madhyarjuna Mahatmya.

Legend of a shrine between the Cauveri and Coleroon rivers; where Vira-Soren was released from the crime of Bramagatti, or killing a Bramin.

No. 27.—Perawoliyar-Purana.

Another name for the Madura-Stalla-Purana, or else a different version. The Sanscrit original is called Halasya Mahatmya; and is found among the Sanscrit Mc.Kenzie MSS. No. 121, Cata. p. 91.

No. 28.—Tirapasura-Stalla-Purana.

Kerikala-Soren is said to have founded the town, and the temple of Devi or Purvatī.

[The writer has had the opportunity of thoroughly examining this now decaying structure. Though still used for religious purposes, its cloisters are chiefly inhabited by large bats, and owls also already tenant the porch-tower of this temple and other neighbouring ones.]

No. 29.—Srirangha-Mahatmya.

Legendary account of Seringham Pagoda; said to have been founded by a Soren prince.

According to the Carnataka Dynasty, (vol. 2. p. 17.) it was either rebuilt, or much enlarged, by Visvanatha-Naicker.

No. 32.—Palani-Purana.

Legends of Palani, Sivagiri, and Varahagiri, in the Dindigul province.

[Palani is here written according to the southern pronunciation. Pazhani, or more commonly Pyney, is a great resort of pilgrims from very distant places. At the usual season of the year many of them are seen at Madras. The grossest imposition is practised on them, by connivance with the Madras Bramins. The standing miracle is the carrying milk in small pans from Madras, sealed up, and its being found to be fresh on being offered at Palani. Common report, about Madura, says that much depends on the nature of the present offered with it. If thought suitable, and satisfactory, the attendant Bramin at Palani (and many Bramins are retained for the purpose) opens the pans, tastes the milk, pronounces it fresh; and assures the votary of the success of his suit, and of the favor of the god. If the present be judged unsuitable, or beneath the votary's rank or appearance, the Bramin gives him proof that the milk is sour, and his suit unacceptable. Sic ait populus. The account also given of the important occasion leading to the foundation of this most celebrated and profitable shrine (to others as well as Bramins), is, that Siva one day gave a fruit (pazham) to his younger son, Pulliar, (or Ganesa), on which the elder boy, Subraminiyen, (or Karticeya), was greatly offended at the apparent partiality. To appease him, Siva said, Pazhani (پاذھی) "Thou art a fruit:" and to commemorate the honor thus done to Subraminiyen, the image was formed, and the temple built. Very many temples have an origin not less puerile.]

No. 34.—Jambukesvara-Stalla-Purana.

Legend of the Saiva temple near Srirangham. (See vol. 1, p. 126.) Jambuk, a munī, presented a Jambu, or rose-apple, to Siva; the god rejected it after tasting it. The sage took it up, and put it on his head; and the god being pleased with this act of respect, consented to dwell here as Jambukesvara. Purvatī was once also banished to this place, after having incurred her lord's displeasure.

No. 36.—Srikarani-Purana.

A statement of the origin of the accountants of Tonda-mandalam, as descendants of Brahma and Sarasvati: they accompanied Chenna-Soren when he first came from the north of India to Tonda-mandalam. This chief it seems divided the villages of the country among sixty-four tribes of Brahmins; giving one share to the accountants. The legend is said to be from the Brahmanda-Puranam, translated into poetical Tamil, by Narkiren, (see vol. 1, pp. 100, 176,) whence the substance was afterwards composed, (we suppose in the Vasagam, or ordinary Tamil,) by the Bramin Guruvappam.

[An inspection of the MS. would be requisite, in order to ascertain whether it makes Chenna-Soren come from Ayodhya, or otherwise.]

No. 38.—Muppuntoti-Wolle (முப்புத்தேதாட்டவெளி?)

Illustrates some antiquities relative to the fort, temples, and reservoirs at Arcot.

No. 40.—Warayur-grama-Vernanam.

Gives an account of Uriyur and its temples: calculated to be of service in illustrating the history of this temporary capital of the Soren kingdom.

No. 41.—Vishnu-Kanchi-Kovil-Vernanam.

Relates to the temple of Varada-Swami, or Varada-rama, at Conjeveram.

[It is the temple to which immense multitudes of people from Madras, and other places, flock during the principal festival in May.]

II.—LOCAL HISTORY AND BIOGRAPHY.

No. 1.—Chola-Mahatmya.

This work professes to be translated from the Bhavishottara-Purana; but is not included therein: The manuscript (on paper, the best Tamil manuscripts being usually on palm leaves) was compiled by order of Sarabhaji (or Serbojee), one of the Mahratta kings of Tanjore. It supplies a desideratum as to the original foundation of Tanjore, and contains a list of sixteen Soren kings, some of them of great celebrity; the names occurring in numerous inscriptions. Much of it is legendary: it is also named Vrihadiswara-Mahatmya.

No. 2.—Chola-Purva-Pattayam.

The title shews that the palm leaf book must be the original, and the paper one a copy. It is a history of Soren kings, professedly derived from inscriptions at Conjeveram. Yet it (ridiculously) makes the heads of the three southern families, Vira Chola, Bala Chera, and Vajranga Pandiya, to have been born for the purpose of destroying Salivahana, who it says lived in Trichinopoly, and patronised the Bauddhas. His former metropolis is said to have been Bhoja-rayapur, in Ayodhya; though, in fact, the town of Boja was not quite so far north. It contains the story before adverted to (I. 20.) of Uriyur, the queen and her child. For the rest, it can only be depended upon so far as borne out by inscriptions. It is suspected to be of more value than the account of it given to Mr. Wilson would imply. It might possibly furnish at the least important extracts.

No. 3.—Chola-desa Purvika Cheritra.

This is a work written on paper, by a native Christian, named Vedanaigen, in Colonel Mackenzie's employ, in answer to his inquiries. It appears to be a discriminating investigation of some value, and worth the perusal. We should not be disposed to attribute so much reason, as Mr. Wilson appears disposed to do, to an inference as to modern date of the Soren princes from the perfect state of the buildings ascribed to them; because some are not in so perfect a state; others of very ancient foundation have been rebuilt or enlarged; and some are known to have been kept in constant and careful repair, under the inspection of Bramins, from revenues appropriated to the purpose by the Sircar.

No. 4.—Chola-mandala, Tonda-mandala, Pandya-mandala, Rajakal.

Kings of the Sora, Tonda, and Pandiya kingdoms. How far it answers to its extensive title, we cannot ascertain from Mr. Wilson's notice. After very careful inspection, we find it to be the only manuscript in the collection on which he founds his statements in the general Introduction, that "the founder of the (Pandiya) kingdom was Pandya, a native of Oude"*—which, at all events, does not accord with "local traditions," if the locality designate Madura—and, that "the Chola kingdom" was first cleared and cultivated by Tayaman Nalei, a settler from Oude, or from Upper Hindustan.† The like statement is given in the notice of the manuscript. It stands therefore as one authority against several. This manuscript is on palm leaves. A long extract from Mr. Ellis, on Merasi right, supersedes a fuller notice of the actual contents: that is valuable, but this would be more so. It has some statements regarding the Sethopathis, in asserting them to have been lords paramount over Madura for eleven generations, previous to the rule of the Carnataca dynasty; which, if true, would fill up a chasm in our manuscripts. On the whole, it is a subject of some regret that this manuscript is at Calcutta, and not at Madras.

No. 7.—Pandya-Rajakal.

Pandion kings. Another important document. The book on paper must be a copy from the one on palm leaves. It appears to be not so full as the Pandion Chronicle in the list of kings; but full in the accounts of the Madura college, which possibly are taken from the Stalla-Purana. It might have been useful as an auxiliary; but we conjecture that its place is more than supplied by our own documents.

No. 8.—Tondamana-Kuthai.

Illustrating the separation of Tonda-mandalam from Sora-mandalam by Kulottunga-Soren, in favor of his illegitimate son Adonda-Chakraverti: as such it would be valuable in a consecutive account of the Sora-desam.

No. 10.—Kongadesa Rajakal.

Kings of Konga (or Sera) desam. This manuscript is valuable; and has been fully noticed. (Vol. 2, p. 63.)

No. 12.—Kerala-desam-Kathai.

A story of the Kerala country: it would be probably very useful in a connected account of Sera-desam.

No. 16.—Vadur-Stalla-Purana.

This Purana is alluded to vol. 1, p. 110, note.

Its contents harmonize with the account abstracted from the Madura-Stalla-Puranam.

No. 18.—Sanghattar-Cheritra.

An account of the Madura College of Bramins.

No. 19.—Gnyana-Samandhar-Cheritra.

See vol. 1, pp. 111—15, 185. Perhaps this Sarittiram might yield a few further particulars.

No. 24.—Madura-Virappan-Amman.

Relates to the family of Bomma-Naick, and to the service of Virappen, with Chokanatha-Naick. As such it would be useful in illustration of a portion of the very modern history of Madura.

No. 25.—Bommanayaka-Katha.

An account of the family of a Poligar who accompanied Nagama-Naick.

No. 26.—Ramapuyyen.

This MS. would perhaps give fuller particulars respecting the subduing of the Sethupathi's insurrection, as stated in the Carnataka Dynasty, sec. 9. (Vol. 2, p. 31.)

No. 28.—Narasinh-Raya-Vamsavali.

An account of the kings of Vijianagaram.

No. 32.—Valankai-Cheritra.

A compilation by Vedanaigen, in the service of Colonel Mackenzie. As an explanation, or illustration, of many every-day matters in the south, and some of antiquity, this Sarittiram appears to us peculiarly well worth a translation. It professes on some points to give information such as we have long sought for in vain.

No. 35.—Tottiyar-Jathi-Varuana.

Account of the Totrya tribe of Telugu origin. Nagama-Naick's poligars were of this caste. (Vol. 2, p. 11.) They were brave and daring soldiers.

No. 36.—Marawa-Jathi-Vernanam.

Account of the local customs in Marawa, at Ramnad, and at Tinnevely: as such probably interesting.

• No. 39.—Narival-Palempetta-Vernanam.

Account of the grant of honorary distinctions to Alagiya-nayak Polygar, of Palimpett, and his genealogy.

B.—TELUGU MANUSCRIPTS.

I.—PAURANIC AND LEGENDARY LITERATURE.

No. 18.—Venkateswara-Mahatmya.

Legendary account of the temple at Tripetty. It might be of some service in illustrating the Padava, Soren, and latter Vijayanagaram, dynasties.

No. 19.—Jaganath-Mahatmya.

Legend of Juggernaut. It might possibly reflect some light on the ancient Calinga, or the more modern Udiya-desam, or kingdom of Orrisa.

II.—LOCAL HISTORY, BIOGRAPHY, &c.

No. 1.—Krishna-Raya-Cheritra.

A poetical account of the reign of Krishna-Raya, the seventeenth prince of the Norapata kings of Vijayanagaram. It appears to be of considerable consequence and authority. This is the prince referred to in the first sections of the Carnataka Dynasty.

No. 2.—Rama-rama-Cheritra.

This relates to a later period, and to the overthrow of Rama-rama and of the Vijayanagaram kingdom, by Ibrahim-Adil-Shah.

No. 4.—Pratapa-Cheritra.

An account of Pratapa, the last of the Kakateya kings of Telingana of any power. It appears to be of importance to the history of the kings of Warankal.

No. 5.—Jangama-Kalanyana.

It contains sonnets of princes of various countries in the south of India, and of the Vijayanagaram, down to the defeat and death of Rama-rama. It is composed in the style of prophecy, by Sarvanyana.

No. 8.—Nava-Chōla-Cheritra.

An account of nine distinguished Chōla princes, who patronised the Vira-saiva, or Jan- gama, religion. These nine kings are named, Kerikala, Vikrama, Uttunga, Athivaram, Varadherma, Satyendrac, Manujendra, Vira, and Uttama.

No. 13.—Tanjawar-Raja-Cheritra.

This manuscript (of which the title is incorrect) appears very much to resemble the Carnataca Dynasty. It is a narrative, in another language, of the same succession of princes.

No. 14.—Trichinapali-Raja-Cheritra.

An account of Raghunath, a Poligar of the Tinnevely country; and apparently an ancestor of the present Tondaman Bahader, whose capital is at Virala-mali, about twenty-three miles south of Trichinopoly.

The son of Raghunath was Tirumala-Raya: thirteen other names occur down to Raghunath, who was an officer in the service of Vijaya-Raghava, raja of Tanjore. This Raghunath appears to have cut out for himself, by conquest, from the Madura kingdom, the independent principality now called Tondaman's country. His son was Tirumala-Raya; his son was Sri-Vijaya-Raghunath, said to have conquered Chandu-Khan; and probably the ally of the Tanjore king and the English, during the siege of Trichinopoly, by the French in the interests of Chunda-Saheb. By reason of the aid then rendered the Tondaman still holds his independent principality.

No. 15.—Sinhala-Dwipa-Raja-Kath.

Account of a war between Periya-Krishnapu-Nayak, of Madura, successor of Visvanatha, and Tambi-Nayak, called improperly king of Ceylon.

No. 17.—Kaliyuga Raja-Cheritra.

A short account of the most distinguished princes of the Kali age, as Paricshit, Satanika, &c.

No. 22.—Makaraj-Bomraj-Vamsavali.

The genealogy of a family, said to have derived from Tondaman-Chakraverti, who ruled in Karveti-nagaram, in the zillah of Chittoor, near the Naggery pass, and south of Tripetty.

The Appendix, up to the preceding half-sheet, having been struck off at an early period in the printing of this volume, the Editor, by the intervening delay, as to the remainder, is able, with no common satisfaction to state, not only that at least the greater portion of the preceding MSS. are at Madras, under charge of the Literary Society and Auxiliary of the Royal Asiatic Society, but also that the inspection of so many of them as he could discover has been most kindly and politely conceded to him. For the first indication pointing to these MSS. he is indebted to Sir Ralph Palmer, Knight; but subsequently and more immediately to A. D. Campbell, Esq. and J. C. Morris, Esq. members of the College Board, and the latter gentleman the secretary to the Literary Society. Other MSS. not included in the foregoing list, have hereby come under inspection; with what effect the latter portion of the present volume will itself best evince. From an inspection* of some of the preceding MSS. some approximation has been made towards a better appreciation of the whole collection: which, though not so valuable as it may have been once represented to be, is yet in some danger as to the contrary extreme of undue depreciation. This danger it is conceived arises, in part, from a report given in at Madras concerning these documents; the result, it is apprehended, either of superficial examination, or else of not precisely knowing what are the points of information on these antiquarian subjects which are desired, by such Europeans as take an interest in historical or other details concerning India. The contempt of natives, and of every thing connected with them, is, by descendants of Europeans, in danger of being carried somewhat too far; even as Europeans themselves have very possibly sometimes verged towards the contrary extreme. But a person may entirely disapprove the native religion, with many native customs, without allowing this feeling to prejudice him against records from which real truth and historical facts may be gleaned, by patient labor and assiduity. The Editor believes that there is a mine requiring to be carefully worked, in order to ascertain and demonstrate the real value of the ore. The opportunity of forming this opinion has been unexpectedly placed in his power. But whether time may be afforded, or sufficient encouragement given, to proceed in researches, the labor attendant on which few can understand or appreciate, will yet remain to be discovered.

F.

As the economy of native courts differed in some particulars from those, even of despotic monarchies, in Europe, the Editor, at an earlier stage of his inquiries, sometimes found himself at a loss accurately to distinguish the respective offices of Mantiri, Piratani, and Dalavayi or Dalakarten; and it is therefore possible that many readers may experience the like difficulty. In reading over a portion of the Manavala Narrayana-Sathayam, a stanza was met with which defines these, and other offices; and it is in the midst of connected matter not destitute of interest. Hence it has been thought suitable to insert a translation of the first ten stanzas. The work is a very popular one; and, from being used in native schools, three or four copies are said to be found in every house. A printed edition was published some short time since by a college Pandit, stated to be corrected by collation of various copies. The Tamil therefore is not here printed. Two or three copies on palm leaves are among the Mackenzie collection; and, unhappily, lent their aid to an inference, too sweeping, of its containing duplicates and triplicates of every day and very common school

* It may be perhaps of sufficient consequence, from the notices already given (Vol. 2, p 73, 74; and Appendix, p. 35, No. 4.), to observe particularly that the MS. in question does not contain the statement ascribed to it. The founding of the shrine at Ramiseram is indeed attributed to a follower of Rama; but Madura is merely said to have been founded by "an agricultural Pandion from the North."

books. Colonel Mackenzie may indeed, in some instances, have been imposed upon by interested and illiterate natives; and there is some trash meriting rejection from his accumulation, including duplicates or triplicates of course; but still, so far as this poem is concerned, it is not in itself contemptible; while its great popularity, as an established, though brief, code of Hindu manners and morals, alone suffices to stamp it with considerable importance.

THE SATHAGAM, (OR CENTUM OF VERSES,) OF MANAVALA-NARRAYANEN.

1.—Bramanal-mahadhuvaṃ, The Dignity of Bramins.

The Bramin must well understand the Agamas, the Puranas, and the law of Menu; and being himself endowed with wisdom, and performing without fault the sacrifices, and the like, with the various kinds of mantras, or charms, he must by these means ASSIST the gods. He must shew the nature of times and seasons, as plainly as one exhibits a fruit held in the hand. The Bramins must remove their own sins by the power of the Gayatri, even as fire consumes cotton at the very touch. Three rains every month, an illustrious reputation of kings for good government, fertile fields, all these are acquired, by the virtue of the Sadur-Veda-Nayagar.*

2.—Raja-muraimai, The Economics of Kings.

The Raja must understand four things: that is to say, the law of Menu, to listen to the advice of the Mantiri, (or counselling minister,) he must be himself intelligent, of good natural capacity, and must know the nature of his kingdom. He must be patient as regards the ear, the eye, and the mind. Being thus qualified, he must sway the sceptre. As the lotos flower, which blossoms in the day, and the cumuthan (or ali) flower blossoms at night, so he must observe the proper times for managing affairs. He must know the proper place wherein to conquer his enemies; even as the alligator when in the water can draw in an elephant, but when out of the water is trampled on by the same beast with one of his feet. He must have valiant troops, wealth, provisions, these and like preparations; he must make large grants and charitable gifts; he must have good reputation for personal good qualities, and fame for splendid acts. Such a one is a king.

3.—Vaisiyar-perumai, The Honor of Merchants.

The merchants must skilfully conduct their own business. They must not lay on too large profits. Whosoever comes to them, they must preserve an even and correct balance. If the dishonest come, offering to leave a pledge, they must give them no loan; but if the honest come, and only ask a loan without pledge, they must give it. In writing their accounts they must not allow of a mistake, even if no more than the eighth part of a mustard seed. They will assist a very especial (public) measure, even to the extent of a Crore (of money). Such is the just rule of the mercantile class.

* Literally, "Lords of the four Vedas."

4.—Vellaler-perumai, The honor of Agriculturists.

The Vellaler, by the effect of their ploughing (or cultivation), maintain the prayers of the Bramins, the strength of kings, the profits of merchants, the welfare of all. Charity, donations, the enjoyments of domestic life and connubial happiness, homage to the gods, the Sastras, the Vedas, the Puranas, and all other books, truth, reputation, renown, the very being of the gods, things of good report or integrity, the good order of castes, and (manual) skill, all these things come to pass by the merit (or efficacy) of the Vellaler's plough.

5.—Purudar-muraimai, The Occupations of Men.

The proper occupations of the ruder sex are—to understand true wisdom, or to be very wealthy, or to go on religious pilgrimage to celebrated rivers, or to be endowed with a just and charitable disposition, or to be renowned, or to be well skilled in combats, or well learned so as to praise others with approbation, or to be very intelligent in all things; and if there be any man without any one of these qualifications, why, O Divinity! didst thou create such a one on the earth? was it by the sin of the mother's womb? or was it by the influence of an evil eye from others?

6.—Putanam-muraimai, The requisites of a town.

If the nature of the capital town of a king be inquired into, it is the following: it must contain the temple of the skilful female singers and dancers, many choultries in the midst of tanks, many tanks, many open choultries, (Mandabams) ditches for the fort, many streets, with bazar streets, cars, elephants, horses, infantry-soldiers. To these four last must be a (Dalagarten) general, as commander. There must be a Mantiri, a Piratani, a Tanapathi, and people of different offices of the government: there must be persons of the four principal castes; the place must be invested with the sixteen qualities of (danam), or gifts. Near to the town there must be a river: and it must have a good and just king. Unless it possess these attributes, it is not Sri-ranga-patnam; (that is, not a good or well appointed town)

7.—Mantiri-muthalanavarkal-muraimai, The duties of the king's ministers.

The proper office of the Mantiri is to acquaint and advise the king concerning the nature of becoming proceedings; and concerning such as ought to be rejected. The Dalagarten is, according to time and his own strength, to conquer the enemies of the state. The Piratani manages carefully the treasure, the internal administration of the kingdom, with all connected matters. The Royasen (or secretary) must be able to read fluently, must have a good memory as to what is said to him, and must be able to write down instructions without error or omission—Such a one is a Royasen. The Karnin (or accountant) must have his account true as the sun; or even if the sun should happen to rise in the west, at least his account must not vary. The Tanapathi (or ambassador) must be skilful in speech, in the decorum of princely assemblies, and the excellencies or peculiarities of other kings.

8.—Narkala-muraimai, The results of propitious times.

If any one receive authority, it will be attended with power. If any have robes and jewels, the result will be elegance. If great riches are possessed, they will impart influence. If any have great talents, fame will be the consequence. Those possessed of piety will receive divine favor. Any possessed of youth naturally seek marriage. These results follow, even as the cumutham flower opens to the rays of the moon.

9.—Vahana-muraimai, Decorum of Vehicles.

Any one who having friends (or relatives) and confidential persons, is doing well, and aiding them, then a gift of a horse is suitable; he may mount and ride on one. If any one has given donations and charities, and has reputation and renown, he may ride in a palanquin. If any one has conquered enemies in the service and to the glory of his prince, he may ride on an elephant. If any one skilfully speaks or pleads before the valiant and powerful, he may receive a banner.† But if any one of the before-mentioned persons, not having pleased the king, and received them from him as honorary presents, take these distinctions to himself, he is like the stage-player, who assumes habits and titles not belonging to him; or he is like those who mount horses and palanquins merely for the purpose of a marriage procession in the town.

10.—Narguna-menmai, The excellence of good dispositions.

To walk according to a father's and mother's advice; to fulfil exactly promises or engagements verbally made; to adhere faithfully to vows offered; never to tell lies; to do deeds of charity or beneficence; to be very patient; to fulfil contracts or engagements made by ancestors; to exercise trust in God; are excellencies. Examples of these virtues are, Parasu-Ramen; Karnen; Rama; Bishma; Hari-chandren; Mabali; Dherma-rajā; Bagirathen; and Pracalathanen.

G.

In vol. 1, at p. 183, a reference is made to a manuscript bearing on the legendary history, and subsequent affairs, of Ceylon: it is one of those which we have denominated Mirtanjaya MSS. As the historical use of this document chiefly relates to an incident in the reign of Vijja-Ranga-Choka-natha-Naicker, and a few later matters, it was at one time intended to insert it in the body of annotations connected with that period. But on considering the more important matter pressing for introduction there, together with the reference contained in this document to matters of greater antiquity in the Pandion history, and the express assertion which it makes, not that the Samunal religion was the primitive one at Madura, but that it was brought thither from Ceylon, we have judged this position in the Appendix to be, on the whole, the most suitable.

† The collated text of the College Pandit reads—"If any one be possessed of very high and faultless reputation, he will receive respectful salutations." But this sentence would more properly belong to the preceding stanza. Besides, a palanquin seems to be indicated for a Mankiri, an elephant for a Dalarayi, and a banner for a successful ambassador.

Exclusive of Captain Mahony's paper, referred to in our first volume, the reader will find the traditions concerning the early history of Ceylon in a quarto work edited by PHILALETHES, A.M. Oxon: derived from authorities in the Dutch language. Concerning the legend here given, and some matters at the close, which carry with them an artificial appearance, the reader may of course extend to them that measure of credence which he pleases.

NARRATIVE OF THE AFFAIRS OF THE KINGS OF KANDI-DESAM, (OR CEYLON).

In the early time, when the Pandion was ruling in Madura, the Samunar came from Singala-Desam, and taught some sastras to the king and to the people, with the design of bringing about the general establishment of their Baudtha religion. They displayed certain wonderful and astonishing performances; and, as they were skilful in magical incantations and ceremonies, they succeeded in deluding the king, and bringing him over to the profession of their religious way. Notwithstanding, the wife of the king did not enter into that way; but, continuing to worship Minatchi and Santar-swarer, she prayed to them; lamenting, and desiring to know how the king had been seduced into a strange religion. While so engaged the god visited the king with a severe bowel-complaint, which could not be cured by the efforts of many physicians; and, when the king was suffering greatly from the disorder, the god Subraminyr assumed the form of Sammanta-murti, who came with a sacred cortege; and a severe discussion took place between Sammantar and the Samunar: when Sammantar said to them, "The physicians have not been able to cure the king's disorder; if you can do so, your religion is the great one; but if you cannot cure the disease, you shall all of you mount the impaling stakes, or else enter into the Saiva religion; and, if I am unable to cure that sickness, then I myself, with all my sacred company, will mount the impaling stakes. Thus you and I will execute and deliver over a written agreement in the presence of the king." Both parties accordingly went into the presence of the king, and by a strict appointment each party gave a writing into the hands of the king; who, through partiality towards the Samunar, ordered them to have the first trial of their healing power. They, by their charms, and inspection in their books, made every effort; but were so far from curing the king, that they increased, and greatly aggravated, his distress. Next the king ordered Sammantar-murti to try his skill; who, meditating on the god, gave the king vibuthi, or sacred ashes, and immediately the bowel complaint was cured. The whole of the Samunar, great as their number was, refused to profess the Saiva religion; and all of them mounted the impaling stakes.

கண்டிதேசத்து ராசாக்களுடைய வர்த்தமானங்கள் பெண்ண வென்றால் ஆதியில் மதுரையிலப்பாண்டியின்ராச்சியபரிபாலனம்பண்ணியலச்சிவகன் தேசத்திலிருந்துசமுணர்வளவந்து மதுரைத்தேசமெல்லாம்தங்களுடையபுத்தமத்திலவரும்படிக்குச்சிதுதுசாஸ்திரங்களைராசாவுக்குஞ்சனங்களுக்கும்போதித்தது சிறுதுஅதிசெயமாகயிருக்கிறமகிமைமயனையும் காண்பிவிச்சு அவர்களமற்றிராததநீர்ததிலக்கெட்டிக்காறரானபடியினாலேராசாவைதங்களுமத்ததுக்குள்ளாகமயக்கிவசப்படுத்திக்கொணரியிருக்கையிலஅநதப்பாண்டியராசாபெண்சாதிமட்டும்அநதமத்ததுக்குளப்படாமலமீருட்சிசுநதேசமரணப்பிரததிச்சுக்கொணிராசாவும் தேசமும்சமணர்களமதமாகப்போர்சுதேயிதறகுணனஉபாயமென்றுசுவாமியைப்பிரததிச்சுக்கொண்டிருக்கையிலசுவாமிபாண்டியனுக்குவயததுவலிபோலேஉணர்பண்ணிவிச்சுஅனேகம்வயததிராளெல்லாம்பாத்ததிலும்தீராமலராசாவுக்குநிரம்பவும் உபதநீரங்கணரியிருக்கிறமுன்னுக்குஅதுநிமித்தியமாக சுப்பிரமணியசுவாமிசம்மநதமூநீதி அவதாரமாகஎடுத்து கொண்டுசிறுதுதிருக்கூட்டங்களுடனேவநதார் அப்போது சமணர்களுக்கும் சம்மநதமூநீதிக்கும்வாதுகளவந்துசம்மநத மூநீதிசொன்னதுபாண்டியராசாவுக்கு வயததுவலிஉபதநீர்தம் ஒருததராலுநதீராமலிருக்குதேநீங்கனதீர்ததாலஉங்களுமதநதான்பெரியது நீங்களுநதவயத்து வலியைதீர்க்கமாட்டாதே போலுநீங்களுவளவுபேரும்களுவீஸ்வறுகிறது அல்லவென்றால்நம்மிடசிவசமையததுக்குளப்படுகிறது நாமநதவயததுவலியைததீராதேபோலுநாமும்நம்மிடதிருக்கூட்டங்களும்களுவீஸ்வறுகிறதுயிநதப்பிறகார்தீங்களுந்நாமும்ராசாமுன்னுக்குஉடனபடிக்கைச்சீட்டெனாறுகிறபுப்போ மென்றுஉபயத்திராமும் ராசா வினிடததிலப்போய்க்ககையேறி ராசா அவர்களிருபேரிடத்திலும்கையெருததுவாங்கினதிலும்சமணர்களபேரிலப்பட்டசததுனாலே அவர்களைததானேமுன்னேபார்க்கச்சொல்லிச்சொன்னார்அவர்களமற்றிராததுனாலேயும்அவர்களுக்குததெரிநதசாஸ்திரங்களுலேயும் பார்த்ததிலும் ராசாவுக்கு உபதநீர்ததீராமலநிரம்பவும் அதுஉபதநீரங்கண்டுது அநதமுன்னுக்குசம்மநதமூநீதியைப்பார்க்கச்சொன்னார்சம்மநதமூநீதிசுவாமியைததிராமணம்பண்ணிவீழுகொடுத்தார்துடனேவயததுவலிசொஸ்தமாச்சுதுசமணர்களவளவு பேரும்சிவமதத்துக்குள்ளாக நாங்களவருகிறதிலுலையென்றுஅவ்வளவுபேருநதானேகளுவீஸ்வறுகள அநதச்சமணர்களவகையில்ஒருபெண்பிள்ளையும் அவளமகளுமாகததப்பிக்கண்டி தேசத்துக்குப்போனார்கள்அப்போதுகண்டிதேசத்தனனர்கநாடாய்அவனவனவீட்டுக்கு அவனவனபெரியதனமாகயிருநதநார்களுஅப்போது அநதஅம்மாளுடையபெண்ணலலாருபவதியாகபுத்தியிரிகிறபக்குவமாகயிருநதுதுஅப்போதுஅநதசிவகன் தேசத்துததலவமார் பெண்மேலேயிச்சைப்படபிடுகக்கெனக்கெனபதாய்ஒன்றுக்கொன்றுசிலிவாட்டமாகிஅநதப்பெண்ணும்ஒருதருக்கும்சரிப்படாமலஒருஅனாவீடுகல்வீடுக்கட்டி அவர்களுக்குஅன்னபனாதிக்களதேவையானபதார்த்தம் ஒருவருசததுக்குநிதானம்பண்ணிஅநதவீட்டுக்குள்ளேவைத்துவாச

But a female, with her daughter, from among these Simunar-escaped, and went over to Kandi-desam (or Ceylon). At that time that country was its own king; and in every house each master was lord and chief. That lady's daughter was of handsome appearance; and now nearly advancing towards maturity. Several leading men of that Singala-desam were desirous of forming a marriage contract with her; but she rejected all their various proposals, and would accept no one of them. In consequence the suiters constructed a house entirely of stone, in which they confined both mother and daughter for a twelve-month; supplying them at once with needful support and such kinds of food as they desired; and having carefully barred and secured the door, they placed guards around. Some time subsequent to these arrangements, the mother called out that her daughter was arrived at maturity; and a short time after she again called out, saying that her daughter was pregnant. Thereupon the Singala head men were astonished; and said, "After taking all these precautions, how has it happened that this female is with child?" They proceeded to open the prison; and to inquire into the circumstances of the case. The young woman said, "Except only Surya-Bagavan (the Sun), I know nothing of any one." They said, "Will you take an oath to the truth of this?" She answered, "Whatever oath or test you prescribe, I will do accordingly." In consequence they had an iron image of a child, heated to redness, and directed her to take this into her arms, and carry it to a certain mark, which they pointed out. She took up the iron image, pressed it to her breast, as though it had been her own child; and, taking it to the prescribed distance, brought it back again and laid it down before them. Seeing this wonder, they were all astonished, and said, "This female can only be considered as a divine form, and not as merely human." They all fell at her feet; and then said to each other, "The child that shall be born of that female shall thenceforward be our king; and we will submit ourselves to his guidance and authority:" to this effect the head men, and the whole of the country people of that Singala-desam made a solemn decree. Again, when some time had gone by, that lady was delivered of a male child. The child daily increased in size, and was remarkable for great personal strength. The people had a jewel throne, and a crown with pendant ear-drops, made; and caused the young man to be anointed and installed as king of the Singala-desam.

Of this race when many kings had reigned, among them was one who was named Raja-singha-maha-raja. He conducted the affairs of the country in a warlike and powerful manner. The sword of his hand, and the wrist circlet which he wore, are still preserved. That sword even if two or three persons attempt to lift it they cannot do so: but he was of size and the stature to use this sword. He ruled the kingdom a long time. After him his son, named Vijja-Tanma-maha-raja, also ruled for a considerable period. After him his son, Vijja-Baru-raja, ruled for a short space; and after him his son, Umara-singha-maha-raja, held the supreme authority.

Thus far the crown went by regular descent from father to son. That king was long unmarried, because there was no female of the royal race; in consequence of which circumstance the head men and country people of that country consulted together, and said, "If there be no child to this king, as heir to the throne, the royal authority will afterwards cease, and it will be needful to send to Madura or Tirasirapuram (Trichinopoly) to negotiate for a wife to the king: accordingly they selected and sent suitable negotiators, to whom they gave in charge certain garments and ornaments, with some cloths of surprising workmanship. These messengers obtained an interview with the king (of Madura), and represented to him, that as their own king had no suitable choice in marriage, they solicited that a female from his house might be given to their king, and intrusted to their safe conduct. On this request being made, the king, Vijia-Runga-Choka-natha-Naicker, was highly incensed; and, refusing to receive the garments brought as presents from the Kandi king by his people, said, "Is your king of our caste? Heretofore has there been agreement between us, and will there be henceforward? Have you dared, without fear, to come and ask a female from me?" and saying thus, he ordered his Chobedaris (attendants with silver sticks) to carry them outside of the fort, without permission to return. And he strictly charged all his relatives not to give any female to them.

ஸ அடைததுப்பூட்டுப்போட்டுசுத்தியுங்காவலனைத்துப்பததிர்ப்பிததியிருந்தார்கள் அப்படி இருக்குமிடத்திலுளிறுநாளைக்குப்பிறகு அநதப்பெண்ணு துவாசசுதெனறுஉ ளளாக இருநதுஅநதஅம்மாளகூப்பிட்டுச்சொன்னாள்பிணையும்கிறுதுநாளைக்குப்பி ரகுஅநதஅம்மாள பெண்கெற்பமாக இருக்கிறுளெனறு கூப்பிட்டுச் சொன்னாள்அப் போ துசிங்களததலவமார்ஆச்சரியப்பட்டுநாம்அகாக்குளளேவைத்து இததனைபநது பஸ்ததுப்பண்ணிஇருக்கஇநதப்பெண் கெற்பமானவயனம்பெனனவெனறுகதவைத திர்ததுஅநதப்பெண்ணைவரவளைத்து கெற்பமானவயனம்பெனனவெனறுகேட்டார்கள் ஸ்ருரிபுபகவா னுடையசெயலேஅலலாமல நானொனறுமறியேனெனறுஅநதப்பெண் சொன்னாள்இநதப்பிறகார்பிறநனனயம்பண்ணிக்குடுப்பியாவெனறு கேட்டார்களநீங கள்பென்னபிறமாணம்பண்ணிக்குடுக்கச்சொன்னியளோஅநதப்பிறமாணம்பண்ணிக் குடுக்குறேமெனறுஅநதப்பெண்சொன்னாள்அப்போதுஇரும்புநாலேஒருபிள்ளைப ணணிஅதைத தியிலப்பருக்கக்காச்சி இநதஇரும்புப் பிள்ளையை யெடுத்ததுக்கொணரி ஒருஅடையாளம் சொல்லிஅநதமட்டுக்குப்போய்வர்ச்சொல்லிச் சொன்னார்கள்அநத ப்படிக்கிஅநதப்பிள்ளையையெடுத்ததுமார்பில தனகுளநதையைப்போலேஅணைத்துக் கொணரிஅவர்களசொன்னவெக்குவரைக்கும்போய்திரும்பக்கொணடுவநதுஅவர்கள் மூன்னெவைததாள அப்போதுசறுவததிராணும்ஆச்சரியப்பட்டு இநதப்பெண்தெயவ ருருபமேஅலலாமல மனுடொனறுசொல்லப்போகாதெனறு சறுவததிராணும்அநத அம்மாளகாலிலேவினாநதுஇனிமேலிநதஅம்மாளவயத்திலேபிறக்கிற பிள்ளையெநம்பி டதேசததுக்குராசாவில்லாதத்தினாலேராசாவாகவைத்துஅவர்ஆக்கினைக்குள்ளாகஇரு ந்துநடந்துகொள்வோமெனறுசிங்களதேசத்துத்தலவமார்நாட்டார்சறுவததிராணும் கூடிநீர்மானம் பண்ணிக்கொண்டார்கள் பிணையும்கிறுதுநாளைக்குப்பிறகுஅநதஅம் மாள்வயத்திலஆண்பிள்ளை பிறநதுதுஅநதப்பிள்ளைநாளுக்குநாள்நீநகவாருகபுசபலப ருக்கிறமததுடனே இருநதார்அப்போதுநாறின சிம்மாசனமும்கிரீடருண்டலமும்உ ணடுபண்ணிஅவரைசிங்களதேசததுக்குராசாவாகபட்டாபிஷேகம்பண்ணிவச்சார்கள் அநதவம்முசம்பாரம்பரியமாக அனேகராசாக்களபட்டமாணடுவநததிலஅநதவங்கிச ததிலராச்சிங்கமகாராசாவெனறுஒருராசாப்பிறநதார்அவர்பராக்கிறமசாலியாகஇருந துராச்சியபரிபாலனம்பண்ணிக்கொணடுஇருநதார் அவர்கையக்கத்திஅவர்போட்டிரு நதகடையம்இப்போதுமிருக்குதுஅநதக்கத்திொணடுமூனறுபேர்கூடியெறிதநாலும் யெடுக்கப்படாதுஅவர்அநதக்கத்திகட்டததக்கஆகிறிதியும் உணனிதமாகவுமிருப்பார் அவர்அநதப்படி வெகுநாளராச்சியமாணடுமவருக்குப்பிறகாலம் அவர்குமார்னவிசை யதனமமகாராசாஅவர்வெகுநாளராச்சியமாணடுமவருக்குப்பிறகாலம் அவர்குமார்ன விசையபாருராசா அவர்சிறுதுளுராச்சியமாணடு அவருக்குப்பிறகாலம்அவர்குமார் னருமாச்சிங்கமகாராசா துணைததனம்பண்ணினார்அதுவரைக்கும் மகனபட்டமாகவந ததுஅநதராசாவுக்குராச்சிவங்கிசத்திலப் பெண்களிலலாமல இருநததினாலே வெகுரு

Notwithstanding, a very poor person in the country, of our religion, treated secretly with the men who had come from Kandi, and, agreeing to give them his daughter, he received from them some gold huns and garments; and, bidding the men who had come go before him to Ramiseram, he in the night time, no one knowing his purpose, set out with his family to Ramiseram, and there embarked on a Dhoney (country vessel), in company with the Kandi people, and went with them to Kandi; where he gave to that king his daughter in marriage. Some time elapsed, but the king remained childless, and the king himself died.

After his death his brother-in-law, the brother of his queen, was chosen king, and ruled the country. His name was Vijia-bala-maha-raja. As he was desirous of marrying from among his own relatives, he sent messengers with a view to accomplish this end. At that period the king Vijia-Ranga-Choka-natha-Naicker was deceased, and after him the rani (or queen), Minatchi-Ammal, ruled in Trichinopoly; and Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker had reigned five years in Madura and the Tinnevely country: when the Rani-Ammal was deified (died); and, as the king, Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker, had been driven away, and was come to reside at Velleicurchi, his relatives and dependents had left him, and were dispersed; and one of these reflected, "As the king of Kandi, who has sent these messengers, is of our own religious persuasion, it may be permitted us to give him a wife:" accordingly he went and gave the king a wife.

That king also died without issue; and, as before, the people chose the brother of his wife to be king. His name was Angaranguthi-maha-raja. Some of his relatives from this country assembled themselves and furnished him with a wife from among their number. He having no child, his brother-in-law, named Kondajulu-maha-raja, was made king. In order to procure him a wife, some people came to this country. At that time Rama-Kistnama-Naicker and Naranapa-Naicker, being brothers, were in the suite of Raja-Bangaru-Tirumalu-Naicker; and afterwards they went to Rumanathapuram and Latchmipuram. The Kandi men came and spoke with these persons; and both of them agreed to go: taking their families with them, they went to Kandi, and supplied the king with a wife. As that king also died without issue, his brother-in-law, or wife's brother, was crowned. His name was Kirti-Simala-maha-raja. He ruled a long time, and he married

ஈர்க்கவியாணமில்லாமலிருந்தது அந்த சிங்களத்தலைவரும் நாட்டாரும் கூடியோசனைப
 ண்ணிந்த தராசாவுக்குப்பிறகாலம்பட்டததுக்குப்பிள்ளையிலலாமலிருந்ததாலரசரீக
 ம்யெடுததுப்போர்தாக்கிருக்குதென்று மதுரைநிருசிர்புரத்ததராசாவளியிலப்போய்
 பெண்கேட்டுக்கவியாணம்பண்ண வேணுமென்றுசிறுதுவலத்திற் பூசுதுதிகள அதிசிய
 மானவதைதுக்ர் னும்குறித்ததுக் காரியலத்தானையும்துணுப்பிராசபேட்டிபண்ணியெங
 களராசாவுக்குக்கவியாண மில்லாமலிருக்கிறபடியினாலே இவடத்திலிருந்து பெண்போ
 ய்க்கவியாணமாகும்படியாய்த் ததர்வுசெய்ய வேணுமென்றுகேட்டார்என அப்போது
 ராசாவினைச்செய்வதெனக்கருதுவதற்குக்கவியாணம் நிர்ம்பவர்க்கோபமாகி கண்டிராசாவ
 கைமதுசாள் கொண்பிறத்தவஸ்துநிபூசுதுதிகளையும்ஒப்புக்கொள்ளாமல உங்களராச
 தம்மிடச் சாதியா முனனும்கிணனும்தமக்குமவர் கருக்குஞ்சும்ததமுண்டாபயமில்லாம
 ல் தம்மிட சதிலவந துப்டெண்டேக்கோபச்சாவென்றுஅவர்களைச் சோபுதாரியினாவிட்டு
 க்கோட்டைக்கி கொளியே கொண்போய் விட்டுவிடச்சொல்லி பநதுசனங்கருக்கெல்
 லாரிடுவர்க்குருக்குபெண்குடுக்கவேண்டாமென்று தாக்கீதபண்ணிவிச்சார்என அப்படி
 யிருக்குமிடத்திலொருவாராட்டுப்பிறத்திலதம்மிடசாதியிலொம்பெளியவராயிருந்ததா
 ரிஅவர் ஒருத்தராயுமிடம்மல்க் கண்டியிலிருந்தது வந்தமனுசனாக்க் கண்டுபேசிதம்மிட
 டெண்ணைக்குடுக்கிடுமென்றுஅவர்களைத் ததில்கிறுதுவிரகனும்வலத்திற் பூசுதுதிகள
 ம்வாங்கித் கொண்பிறத்தமனுசனா முனனுதா கப்போய் ராமேசுபரத்திலிருக்கச் சொல
 விஇவ்வாரத்தினியே ஒருத்தருநதெரியாமல தம்முடசமுசார்த்துடனேராமீசுபர்ம்போ
 ய்ச்சேர்ந்ததுகண்டிமனுசாருடனேதோணியேறிக்கண்டிக்கிப்போய்அந்ததராசாவுக்கு
 தம்மிடபெண்ணைக்கவியாணம் பண்ணிக்குறித்ததுசிறுதுநாளிருந்தது அந்ததராசாவுக்கும்
 பிள்ளையிலலாமலிருந்தது அந்ததராசாக்காலஞ்சென்றுபோனார் அந்ததராசாவுக்குக்கவியா
 ணம்பண்ணின் பெண்ணுடனேகூடப்பிறத்தவர் மச்சின்னாகச்சே அவருக்குப்பட்டங்
 கடடி அவர்ராக்கியமாண்டு இருந்தார் அவர்பேர்வீசையபால மசாராசா அவருக்குக்கவி
 யாணம்பண்ணியிவட ததில பநதுசனங்களிலக்கவியாணம்பண்ண வேணுமென்றுமனுட
 னாதேமுதம்பண்ணி அனுப்பிவிச்சார்என அப்போதுராசாவீசையொங்கச்சொக்கநாத
 நாயக்கர் காலஞ் சென்றுஅவருக்குப்பிறகாலம் ராணிமீனாட்சியம்மாளதிரிசிர்புரத்திலு
 ம்ராசாவங்காருதிருமலைநாயக்கர்வர்களமதுநாயுத்திருநெலவேலிச்சீர்மையும்அருகவ
 ருசம்துரைத்தனம்மடண்ணிராணியம்மாள்வர்கள் தெய்வீகமாய்ப்போய்ராசாவங்காரு
 திருமலைநாயக்கர்வர்களம் யெடுபட்டுவெள்ளிக்குறிச்சியில வந்திருந்ததினாலே பநது
 சனங்களாவர் வசவந்ததிக்குள்ளாக விலலாமலசித்திப்போன படியினாலேஇப்போது
 கண்டியிலத்தனாத்தனம்மடணுகிறராசாதம்மிடசாதியானபடியினாலேஅவருக்கு
 ப்டெண்குடுக்கலாமென்றுதம்மிடபநதுக்களில் ஒருவர் பெண்கொண்போய்க்குறித்த
 தார்அந்ததராசாவுக்குப்பிள்ளையிலலாமல்காலஞ்சென்றுபோய்அந்ததப்பெண்ணுடனே
 கூடப்பிறத்தவர்ராசாவுக்குமச்சின்னானபடியினாலே அவருக்குப்பட்டங்கடடினார்கள்

two wives, being the two daughters of Vijia-Manar-Naicker, the grandson of a former king of Tanjore, named Raja-Vijia-ragava-Naicker. (See p. 194, et seq.) Besides he married two other wives from among his own relations. But all four brought him no offspring. Kanaka-vali-Ammal, the mother of the great-grandmother of Kirti-Simala-maha-rajah's father, and Ariyaras-Ammal, the grandmother of the great-grandmother of Bangaru-Tirumali-Naicker, who is now at Velleicurchi, were sisters. This Kirti-Simala-maha-rajah having died, and his four wives being without child, or children, his younger brother, named Rajathi-rajah, Raja-Simala-maha-rajah, was crowned. He married the younger sister of Vencatu-Perumal-Naicker; and, after a long time remaining childless, he died; and his brother-in-law's son was crowned, and now (when this MS. was written) rules the kingdom.

A CHRONICLE OF THE ACTS OF THE SETHUPATHIS, THE RULERS OF THE RAMNAD CAPITAL.

Translated from a Telugu MS. in the Mackenzie collection.

In the early times, when the Chakravertis flourished, seven persons from among the inhabitants of this Ramnad peninsular coast were appointed, in order to be its guardians. When thus, through a long and remote traditionary period, they had continued for many generations to guard it, one among the seven persons, the son of Shethunga-deven, who was named Sadaica-devaiyer-Udiyan-Sethupathi, in the year of Salivahana-Sagartam 1527 and of the Christian year 1606, went to Maha-rajah Sri-Tirumali-Naicker, one of the Carnataca lords, who was king of the Madura country; and being the chief of the seven, he received authority to rule this Ramnad kingdom, together with all connected honors, and then returned. At the same time the other six persons, who were also guardians, were included in his government; and, together with all the inhabitants, yielded their consent. He ruled for seventeen years, and then died. This ruler, who was otherwise named Udaiyan-palli, had one wife and four children. Among these four children, the eldest, named Kutten-Sethupathi, was crowned S.S. 1544, Christian era 1623, and ruled fourteen years. He died childless. His younger brother, Dalavayi-Sethupathi, was crowned in S.S. 1558, Christian era 1637; and, after some time had elapsed, his younger brother, named Bettana-Naicker, opposed him; and going to the Madura king, Tirumali-Naicker, he received authority thence to conduct the government in his own name; and bringing an army along with him, he put his elder brother, Dalavayi-Sethupathi, in prison, and sent him with all speed to அவர்பேர் அவகாரங்குறிமகாராசா அவருக்குக்கலியாணம் பண்ணவேணுமென்றுயிவட

ததுபற துசனங்களிலபெண்கூடடிப் போய்க்கலியாணம் பண்ணினார்கள் அவருக்கும்பீ
ளனையிலலாமலஅவர்மசசினன்கொண்டசாலமகாராசா அவருக்குப்பட்டஙகடடிஅவரு
க்கு ம்கலியாணம் பண்ணுகிறதற்குப்பெண்ணுக்காக யிவடத துக்குமனுசர்வநதார்கள்
அப்போது ராமகிஷணப்பரையக்கர் குறணப்பநாயக்கர் ஓண்டுபேர் அண்ணன் தம்பி
மாராராசாவங்காருதிருமலையக்கர்வர்களகூடவேவெளளிக்ருதிச்சியிலவநதிருந் துசிறு
துநாளைக்கிப்பிறகுஇருமதுதபுரம் லெட்சிமீபுரத்திலவநதிருநதார்கள யிவர்களிடதது
க்குக்ஷடிமனுடர்வ ததுபெசினதிலஉபையததிராணும் பெண்குறிக்கிறோமெனதுசம்ம
திததுசசமுசார்த துடனேகணடிக்கிப்போய்அநதராசாவுக்கு பெண்ணைக்கலியாணம்ப
ண்ணிக்குறிததார்கள அநதராசாவுக்கும் பிள்ளையிலலாமலசிறு துநாள் ராட்சியபரிபால
னம்பண்ணிஅவருநதெய்வீகமா னார்அநதப்பெண்ணுடனே கூடப்பி ரநதவர்ராசாவுக்
குமசசினனானபடியினாலேஅவருக்குப்பட்டஙகடடினார்கள் அவருக்குப் பேர்கீர்த்திசி
ம்மளமகாராசா அவரும்வெகுநாள ராட்சியபரிபாலனம்பண்ணி அவருக்குமுன்தஞ்சா
லூர் துறாததனம்பண்ணின ராசா விசையரா குவனாயக்கர்வர்களுடையபேரன விசையம
னனார்ப்பரையக்கர் மக்களொண்டுபேர்கலியாணம்பண்ணிக்குறிததார்கள பினனுப்பந
துக்களிலொண்டுபேரைக்கலியாணம்பண்ணினார்கள்அந்ந நா லுபேருக்கும்பிள்ளையில்
லலாமல்பேசசது அந்நதீர்த்தி சிம்மளமகாராசாவுக்குததகப்பனவளிநாலாம்பாடடி
யானகனக வளளியும்மா னும்இப்போது வெளளிக்ருதிச்சியிலிருக்கிற மதுரைராசாவங்
காருதிருமலைநாயக்கர்வர்களுடைய அஞ்சாம்பாடியான அரியாசம்மா னும்கூடப்பிற
ந்நவர்களிந்நததீர்த்திசிம்மள மகாராசாவும்தெய்வீகமாய்ப்போய் அவர்கலியாணம்
பண்ணினநர லுபேர்பெண்களுக்கும்பிள்ளையிலலாததுகுலே அவர்தம்பிராசாதிராசா
ராசாசிம்மளமகாராசாவுக்கும்பட்டஙகடடிஅவருக்கும்வெங்கிடடபெருமான ராயக்கர்
தங்கச்சியைக்கலியாணம் பண்ணி வெகுநாளிருந் துஅவருக்கும்பிள்ளையிலலாமல அவர்
தெய்வீகமாய்ப்போய் அவர்மசசினன்வெங்கிடடபெருமானநாயக்கர் குமாரனுக்கு
இப்போது பட்டஙகடடிதுறாததனம் பண்ணுகிறார்.

Madura: after which he ruled with sole authority for three years. Subsequently Maharaja, Tirumali-Naicker, was pleased to extend his gracious favor to Dalavayi-Sethupathi, and crowned him again in S.S. 1561, Christian era 1640. He thus ruled for nine years, and then died. His younger brother, Bettana-Naicker, performed his funereal rites; and, as the deceased left no children, the three sons of his sister, named respectively Danuko li-dever, Ragu-natha-dever, and Athi-narrayana-dever, went to the ruling sovereign of the Madura kingdom, and were crowned in S.S. 1570, A. D. 1649; after which they returned, and having divided the kingdom into three portions, they ruled conjointly for the space of ten years. The eldest and the youngest having died, the middle one of the three, Ragu-natha-dever, united the other portions with his own, and reigned over the whole during twenty-six years. After him there remained his two children, named Raja-Surya-deven and Athina-deven. The eldest, Raja-Surya-deven, was crowned in S.S. 1606, A. D. 1685, and died after having reigned six months. His younger brother, Athina-deven, having been crowned, ruled for three months and died. As they both died without children, and as their sisters had no children, and as there was no suitable person to succeed to the kingdom, the relations of that Marava tribe, with the inhabitants of the country and the official persons of the capital, all assembled, and crowned Ragu-nathu-dever, the so-called Kilaven-Sethupathi, in S.S. 1607, A. D. 1686. He ruled for thirty-seven years, and died. The mother of his son, Bavanisangar-deven, was not born of a good caste, and by consequence Bavanisangar-deven, who was born of her, did not inherit the kingdom. In consequence they crowned Vijiyucu-natha-Sethupathi, the son of the sister of the before-mentioned Raganath-dever, who was called Kilaven-Sethupathi, which circumstance occurred in S.S. 1641, A. D. 1723. He ruled for fifteen years, and died without offspring. They crowned Tugapen-deven, the son of the former's elder sister. After he had ruled four months, as there was a fault in his mother's pedigree, there was a dispute among his relatives, it being asserted that he had no claim to the crown, and was not suitable for the government. At the same time the before-mentioned Bavanisangar-dever, who had gone to Tanjore and obtained that king's favor, returned with a great number of people, and put Tugapen-dever into prison: after which he himself ruled the kingdom for five years. On making war against the Palliyacaren of Sivagangui, who, from having four fortresses, was usually styled Nalu-Kottei-Udeiyat-deven, this chief fled and took refuge at Tanjore. Before that Katta-deven, the servant of Tugapen-deven, who had been chased away by Bavanisangar-deven, was in attendance at Tanjore. The Sivagangui Palliyacaren, named Nalu-Kottei-udeiyat-deven, made one cause with him; and after an interview with the king, acquired his plenary favor, and by his aid they assembled troops, and drove away Bavanisangar-deven. In S.S. 1650, A. D. 1729, they installed Katta-deven, who was also called Mutthu-Ragu-natha-Sethupathi, in the possession of the government. As Nalu-Kottei-udeiyat-dever, the Sivagangai Palliyacaren, had labored much in all this business, and had rendered effectual aid, Katta-dever reposed confidence in him, and dividing his Ramnad country into five portions, he set apart and gave to him a grant of two of these, so long as the moon and sun endure, freely to enjoy. The other three portions Katta-dever, also called Mutthu-Ragu-natha-Sethupathi, ruled over for six years, and then died.

In S. S. 1669, A. D. 1748, they crowned Rakana-dever, the grandson of the preceding chief's elder sister; but as the consent of the people was not given, they set him aside, and, in S. S. 1670, A. D. 1749, Sella-dever, also called Vijiyacu-natha-Sethupathi, conducted the government for three years, and died. He had no son suitable to inherit the government.

Subsequently, from S. S. 1683, A. D. 1763, the female named Mutthu-Tiruvayi-Nachiyar, being the elder sister of the above-mentioned Sethupathi, ruled the country. When she had thus held the authority for six years the Nabob of Arcot, named Mahomed-Ali-Khan-Saheb-Bahader, conquered the Ramnad country, and imprisoned the female Mutthu-Tiruvayi-Nachiyar, who had before ruled, together with all her relatives; and, carrying them to Trichinopoly; put them in prison there. After having been imprisoned at that place for twelve years, the said female, Mutthu-Tiruvayi-Nachiyar died. Subsequently in S. S. 1701, A. D. 1780, by order of the English government at Chennapatnam (Madras), the Arcot Nabob, Mahomed-Ali-Khan-Saheb, sent Mutthu-Ramalinga-Sethupathi, the son, and Mangalesvara-Nachiyar, the daughter, of the before-mentioned Mutthu-Tiruvayi-Nachiyar; and both sister and brother ruled together. In the fifteenth year of this rule the English Government put Ramalinga-Sethupathi into prison, on account of his very bad conduct; and, causing him to be taken away from Ramnad, confined him at Trichinopoly. The daughter of his eldest sister, Mangalesvara-Nachiyar, was crowned in S. S. 1716, A. D. 1795; and her government continues down to the present time.

THE END.

